UMW leader says miners will accept new pact

Sees workers back at work by Wednesday

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Arnold Miller, president of the United Mine Workers Union, Saturday predicted at least 60 per cent of the nation's 120,000 striking coal miners would ratify a proposed new wage contract and might be back at work as early as next Wednesday.

Miller campaigned for the contract in West Virginia as UMW leaders held district meetings around the country, giving detailed, article-by-article explanations of the new agreement reached with the coal operators.

The striking miners will vote on the contract Monday.

Despite dissension among the rank-and-file, particularly in West Virginia where the majority of the UMW members work, Miller said the contract would be ratified by "60 per cent or up."

Should the contract be approved Monday, Miller said, it was possible miners would be reporting for work on the 12:01 a.m. shifts Wednesday.

The miners went on strike when the old contract expired Nov. 12.

The anticontract sentiment centered in southern West Virginia and was led by a group called Miners Committee to Defend the Right to Strike. They planned motorcades through the coal fields to meet with miners and pass out literature opposing the contract.

In Salem, Ill., 20 miners from West Frankfort, Ill., showed up Saturday at a UMW meeting with signs protesting the proposed contract they came to study.

The signs, roughly printed on cardboard, read: "What safety did we get—none. What benefits did we get—none. Down with the contract. More vacation or no work."

In addition to the district contract briefings, the union purchased time on 80 radio stations in coal areas to air 15-minute statements by Miller and UMW Secretary-Treasurer Harry Patrick.

Kissinger home; China assails U.S.

Anxious to face critics after his Asian swing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger completed his diplomatic swing through China and Japan Saturday and returned to Washington to face critics of the prospective new U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms agreement.

Kissinger's plane landed at Andrews Air Force base at 2:27 p.m. ETD.

Officials traveling with Kissinger said he was especially anxious to deal with the critical reaction to the prospective strategic arms limitation agreement reached in outline form by President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev at their Vladivostok summit last week.

The Ford-Brezhnev outline dealt with limits to be set upon multiple-warhead missiles. Critics in congress said it set the levels so far above current stocks that another arms race would develop to fulfill quotas.

When Ford returned home from Vladivostok last Sunday, Kissinger flew separately to Peking for diplomatic talks with Chinese leaders. He arranged for Ford to visit China next year, and officials disclosed the trip will probably occur in the second half of the year, probably after Brezhnev's June visit to the United States.

The secretary plowed into accumulated homework as soon as he alighted from the plane. He was greeted at the foot of the steps by his key aide, Lawrence S. Eagleburger, and the two consulted between themselves and with several other aides, shuffling papers, for several minutes.

Press conference scheduled Monday

White House press secretary Ron Nessen said President Ford planned to telephone Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger late Saturday for a report on Kissinger's meetings in the Far East with Chinese and Japanese leaders.

Nessen said Ford and Kissiner might get together today and definitely would meet Monday in preparation for Ford's fifth presidential news conference Monday at 4:30 PST.

The conference will receive national radio and television coverage.

KISSINGER GREETED BY FAN, RAGGEDY ANN

Greeting Sec. of State Henry Kissinger upon his return to the nation's capital from China and Japan is a youthful fan and her Raggedy Ann doll. Kissinger is scheduled to face critics of the new arms agreement between the U.S. and the Soviet Union on Capitol Hill this week.

Bitter attack launched against 'tricks' in U.N.

HONG KONG (UPI) — China launched one of its sharpest propaganda attacks on the United States in months Sunday, less than 48 hours after Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger ended a five-day visit there.

The Chinese Communist party newspaper, People's Daily, and the official New China News Agency both criticized the United States over the recent U.N. General Assembly vote on the Cambodian question.

"The United States resorted to despicable means and played tricks" on procedural matters to block U.N. membership for the Peking-based government headed by Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk, NCNA said.

Sihanouk's Royal Government of National Union, strongly backed by Peking, was seeking the seat held by the government of Gen. Lon Nol in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital.

The People's Daily, in a commentary, said the United States "spared no effort to make trouble and resort to acts of sabotage" in U.N. maneuvering. It said the United States was trying "to force, through the United Nations," Sihanouk and his supporters in Cambodia to negotiate with the Lon Nol regime.

"This scheme will never succeed," the paper said. "The key to the settlement of this question is for the U.S. government to stop at once all its support and aid to the traitorous Lon Nol clique and let the Cambodian people settle their own affairs by themselves without outside interference."

In a statement dated Thursday but released through NCNA Sunday, Sihanouk ruled out any negotiations with the Lon Nol regime, which only Saturday issued its fourth call for peace talks.

"To negotiate with the archcriminal, a monster created by U.S. Frankenstein, will be a gross and intolerable insult to the hundreds of thousands of Cambodian martyrs," Sihanouk said.

Castro balks at selling sugar to U.S.

MIAMI (UPI) — Premier Fidel Castro says Cuba is willing, but not eager, to sell sugar to the United States because of the shortage of the sweetener in this country.

Castro said in a speech to the Federation of Cuban Women monitored here Friday night that something probably could be worked out if the United States wanted to buy sugar from Cuba.

"We are not in any hurry to sell our sugar to the yankees, (but) if some day they are interested in buying—we have not blockaded them—we'll sell them sugar," Castro said.

"Well, a part of our sugar anyway," he added, "because we have our commitments which we must meet above all."

Castro's tone while making the offer was one of sarcasm. He was greeted with frequent applause and laughter from the women in the audience, including Angela Davis, an avowed communist revolutionary from the United States, and Russian Valentina Tereshkova, the first woman cosmonaut.

"Those who blockaded us now have no sugar," he said. "How much do yankee imperialists have to pay for sugar in 1975? Millions of dollars. So they are not only going to have to pay for the high price of oil, they are going to pay a high price for sugar also.

"As long as the price of sugar is so high, we are very pleased," he said. "Now they're putting signs up over there saying 'don't buy sugar' and are saying they're going to go back to artifical sweeteners again. But artificial sweeteners produce cancer, so they don't know what to do."

Castro also chided the Organization of American States for voting against lifting the blockade earlier this month, but said Cuba would be happy to resume relations with those countries that supported the move.

He said the blockade was maintained because some countries sold their votes to the United States, mentioning Haiti specifically.

He also said the United States was hypocritcal for abstaining rather than voting no.

Israeli warplanes hit suspected Arab targets

By United Press International

Israeli warplanes Saturday attacked suspected Arab guerrilla targets in southern Lebanon for the first time in almost three weeks.

At the same time, the Soviet Union reaffirmed its support of Palestinian statehood in a communique marking the end of Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat's Moscow visit.

Arab sources said the PLO will open a diplomatic mission in the Soviet capital soon.

An army spokesman in Tel Aviv said all planes returned safely to base after hitting "terrorist targets north of Zarit," an Israeli border settlement in western Galilee.

Arab newsmen said four American-made Phantom fighter-bombers bombed and rocketed fields and hills surrounding three villages in south Lebanon, four to six miles from the border, for 15 minutes. Vegetable and tobacco crops were damaged but there were no casualties, they said.

When the Israeli planes withdrew, the inhabitants of Kafra staged a demonstration and cut a road in the region to demand stronger government protection, the newsmen said.

'World's No. 1 problem'

Butz follows apology with talk on population

CHICAGO (UPI) — Agriculture Sec. Earl Butz, who found himself in hot water this week because of an offhand remark about birth control, told newsmen Saturday that population control "will be the world's No. 1 problem the rest of this century."

Butz was rebuked by President Ford Friday and issued a public apology because he had repeated a dialect joke involving Pope Paul's stand on birth control.

Meeting with members of the Newspaper Farm Editors of America, the agriculture secretary said that the world's rapidly growing population may increase 80 per cent in 25 years even if present birth rates are sharply slowed.

"We must learn in the next generation to feed as many people as we have now ... I'm concerned about it," he said.

Butz said that despite his rebuke by Ford, the President had expressed approval of the administration's record in farm affairs.

Butz was scheduled to speak to the National 4-H Congress here today and will be honored tonight when his portrait is hung in the agricultural hall of fame gallery of Chicago's Saddle and Sirloin Club.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Karen Margaret Petersen, 17, a beauty from Toledo, Ohio, was chosen Miss Teenage America Saturday night.

Miss Petersen, a senior at Whitmer High School at Toledo, was selected from eight semifinalists chosen Thanksgiving in the week-long pageant.

Her parents are Dr. and Mrs. Keith Brownsberger. Her father is an internist in Anchorage.

Karen holds the title of Miss Anchorage, which she won in competition there three weeks ago. She has been in Little Rock since Nov. 22.

Arson suspected in school blaze

Arson is suspected as the cause of a fire on Saturday afternoon which destroyed the counseling office at La Puente High School in La Puente.

The Los Angeles County Fire Department responded with four fire engines to the alarm at 3:55 p.m.

The sheriff's department reported that the blaze caused an estimated $25,000 worth of damage. No one was in the buidling at the time.

Seven in one family die in early-morning blaze

Only the father survives as oil furnace explodes

EAGLE LAKE, Maine (UPI) — An early morning fire Saturday in this rural community near the Canadian border killed seven persons, all members of a single family.

Only the father, Robert Martin, survived the blaze that sent fireballs shooting through the house. He suffered severe burns and broke his ankles when he fell from a second-story ledge in a fruitless effort to rescue his wife and children from their burning home.

The body of infant William Martin was found lying in an upstairs crib, nearly 12 hours after a fire killed the baby's mother and her five other children at their Eagle Lake home.

Authorities said an oil-fired furnace exploded while Martin was watching television downstairs. The explosion sent balls of flame shooting throughout the house, trapping the rest of the family as they slep in second-story bedrooms.

Police identified the victims as Martin's wife Lorraine, 36, and their children, Daniel, 14, Lisa, 12, Cindy, 9, Charles, 6, Scott, 5, and 20-month-old William, all of whom police said died of asphyxiation.

Firemen and police battled the blaze in freezing temperatures throughout the night, working to recover the victims' bodies. Gasoline had to be poured on the fire to clear away rubble and hazardous debris.

Twenty miles away in Cross Lake, a fire that broke out over a general store killed Mrs Clarice Holmbomb and her daughter Janie Madore, 18.

The girl's twin brother, whose name was not immediately known, was hospitalized in Fort Kent in serious condition with second and third degree burns.

Police said the fire apparently started when a spark from a downstairs fireplace ignited some dry wood near the foot of the stairway.

The family apparently became trapped upstairs when the flames blocked the staircase, police said.

Selassie gives fortune to aid drought victims

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — Deposed Emperor Haile Selassie has freely signed over his entire personal and family fortune —unofficially estimated at $1.5 billion —to aid victims of Ethiopia's disastrous drought, the military government announced Saturday.

The communique said Selassie signed over his fortune "of his own free will," and not to save his life as widely reported.

Selassie's entire income from investments, corporate stockholdings, bank deposits and "all jewels and precious stones" would be used by the drought relief commission set up late last year, the communique said.

It did not say how much money was involved but financial circles estimated the 82-year-old emperor had deposited up to $1.5 billion in secret Swiss bank accounts.

The military communique said Selassie signed a letter transferring his family's fortune to account No. 246 at the Bank of Ethiopia —the account of the Drought Commission,

The government's denials that it intended to execute the "Lion of Judah" did not dampen speculation that Selassie signed in fear of his life.

The communique did not say when Selassie signed the transfer letter, but earlier accounts said it came around last weekend when the government executed 59 aristocrats and former officials it was holding on corruption charges.

Lt. Gen. Aman Andom, former head of the ruling Provisional Military Council, was killed when he allegedly resisted arrest.

Diplomats said the woman transferred from Harar Palace, adjoining the grounds of the U.S. Embassy, to the army camp included Princess Tenagne, Selassie's 55-year-old daughter, and granddaughters Princesses Aida, Sophie and Sebele

Princess Aida is the widow of the former deputy commander of the Imperial Navy, Desainder Esta, who was among those executed last Saturday. Princess Sophie's husband, Rasmen Gesha Seyum, former governor of Tigre Province, opposed the military regime but is still at large.

3 men jailed after fight near bar, police chase

A brawl outside of a Holt Avenue bar in Ontario resulted in the arrest of three men Friday night on charges of assault with a deadly weapon.

According to Ontario police, Martin Valdez Payan, 20, an unemployed mechanic, was attacked by three men on East Holt Avenue shortly before 11 p.m. Friday. Although Payan was not seriously injured, at least one of his assailants was carrying a knife, police reported.

When a police unit approached the scene of the fight, three suspects drove rapidly away in a car. A police helicopter followed the fleeing vehicle and gave street units a continuing radio report of its position. At last the suspects' car stopped and three men attempted to escape on foot.

Booked at the West End sheriff's substation on charges of assault with a deadly weapon were: Jose Gilbert Botello, 24, and Manuel Botello, 20, both of 533 E. Park St., Ontario, and John Solares Rodriguez, 28, of 520 N. Vine Ave., Ontario.

Inside the suspects' car police reportedly found two knives and three rifles.

Discount firm plans to freeze all prices

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Cook United Corp. has announced a freeze on the prices of all products sold at its 97 discount supermarkets and department stores through the rest of the year.

Ben Bartell, senior vice president of store operations, said that the freeze would not apply in the case of leased food and gasoline departments at a handful of the chain's stores.

Valley manager shot, robbed in parking lot

The day manager of Bob's Big Boy in Pomona was shot and robbed Saturday night as he sat in his car in the restaurant's parking lot, preparing to take the day's deposits to the bank.

Police reported that Mike Bruton, day manager at Bob's, was shot in the left elbow and right forearm as he sat in his car preparing to start the motor.

Witnesses reported that the robber, described as a male Negro wearing a ski mask, was seen talking to Bruton, who was seated in his car, minutes before the shots were heard.

After the shots were fired, the robber was reported to have reached into the car and grabbed the safe deposit bag. He then fled through the parking lot.

Bruton, who managed to walk back into the restaurant where the night manager called the police, was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital for treatment.

Buses run again in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Bus service returned to normal in the Argentine capital Saturday, after owners of 14,000 buses yielded to government pressure and ended a crippling two-day strike that caused one death.

Brightly painted "colectivos", as the buses are called, began circulating Saturday morning, for the first time since midnight Wednesday.

500 fishermen dead or missing in cyclone

DACCA (UPI) — At least 500 fishermen caught in Thursday's cyclone while fishing in the Bay of Bengal are reported missing and feared dead, newspaper reports said Saturday.

Both official and unofficial reports spoke of substantial damage to crops and property.

The English daily Bangladesh Observer reported 150 inhabitants, mostly children, from Kutubdia island off the southeast coast of the country, were feared washed away by tidal waves.

The daily also said 50 Kutubdia fishing boats with more than 200 fishermen are reported missing.

No official figures were available but government officials and reporters who came back from the cyclone-stricken areas, indicated loss of life in the storm is less than earlier feared.

Police in Montclair seek man who attacked woman

A Montclair woman was kidnaped and raped early Friday morning, and Montclair police are now using the victim's description of her assailant in a search for the rapist.

The 25-year-old victim told Montclair detectives that a man driving a white, four-door Buick with fishing equipment in the back seat picked her up at the intersection of Amherst and Holt avenues in Montclair at about 1 a.m. on Friday.

She said that he pointed a .38-calibre revolver at her and drove her north to an unknown location above Foothill Boulevard and assaulted her. She described her attacker as a white male adult with red hair, green eyes, and freckles. He wore military-type field glasses, she told police, with gold [illegible] and prescription lenses. He also was wearing a blue parka with a hood, green pants, purple socks, and black Oxfords.

To this detailed description, the female victim added that the kidnaper-rapist limped.

She said he told her that he had served time in prison for rape.

Stop RTD subsidies during strikes—Veysey

Rep. Victor Veysey, R-43rd Dist. has proposed that the Southern California Rapid Transit District and other rapid transit authorities be required to maintain adequate public transportation schedules to qualify for federal assistance.

He wrote a letter to Claude Brinegar, secretary of the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) urging that tax dollars appropriated for mass transit operating costs be disbursed only when suitable transportation services are furnished.

"Subsidies for mass transit firms during strikes and other work stoppages may prolong negotiations," he noted. "The mass transit operators have little incentive to bargain in good faith while the federal subsidy continues to roll in daily."

Veysey cited the recent RTD strike in which the district received $175,000 daily for a 56 day period. During this period, motorists burned an estimated 400,000 gallons of gasoline every day to provide alternate transportation, with increased consumption greatly aggravating the air pollution problem, he added.

The Claremont legislator suggested that Brinegar, when issuing regulations for the subsidy, authorize the withholding of payments whenever buses or trains do not operate.

"It's inconceivable that tax money should be used to prolong a strike," he added. "During a labor dispute services needed by the people are interrupted and the government should never be in a position to subsidize either side."

Prior to the recent passage of the Urban Mass Transit Act, operating subsidies were provided on a revenue sharing basis through the state and payments to individual transit systems could not be controlled, said Veysey.

"But now the subsidy will be paid directly to the operator and it is appropriate for the DOT to see that funds are withheld unless they are used to provide day-to-day transportation services," he said.

POSTAL SERVICE PROBLEM

Rita Herrala is slugging it out with her employer the U.S. Postal Service in Detroit, Mich. Only this time she has some help, her three-month-old daughter. Claiming she was ordered off maternity leave and back to work at the Detroit Metropolitan Air Mail Field Post by the U.S. postal service, Mrs. Herrala showed up on the job with daughter Marya. She was ordered home by postal authorities. She said she would pursue the matter further through the American Postal Workers Union.

Majority of marchers in Boston are white

Mrs. King leads 5,000 at integration rally

BOSTON (UPI) — About 5,000 persons, led by the widow of Martin Luther King Jr., Saturday marched and sang civil rights songs in a rally supporting court-ordered school integration in this racially troubled city.

The marchers, most of them white, gathered in front of a statue commemorating black Civil War enlistees, and were told by Mrs. Coretta Scott King, that racism, not anti-busing sentiments, was behind opposition to a school desegregation program here that has featured street violence and massive school absenteeism.

"Can anyone believe that people using or condoning violence as well as vulgar racial epithets are making a democratic protest against busing?" she asked. "No. They are making an undemocratic assault on equality."

She told the crowd that opponents of the U.S. District Court ordered plan were merely using the busing issue as an excuse for racism.

Heralded by choruses of "We Shall Not Be Moved," she said for that reason it was important for everyone, including those not fully committed to busing, to oppose attacks on school children and integration.

"The conduct of certain opponents of busing has made the issue one of racism in its broadest aspects," she said.

Police, who made the crowd estimate, would not hazard a percentage guess on its racial composition, but ventured, "It's overwhelmingly white. There are a hell of a lot more whites than blacks, that's for sure."

Adding to the relaxed atmosphere were demonstrators at tables handing out free information from a variety of liberal and radical groups, along with announcements of teach-ins on social problems.

Organized by the Committee for Integrated Quality Education, which has sponsored a number of pro-busing demonstrations in the past, the march had been billed as an example of biracial cooperation. Friday Mrs. King had called it proof that "We can do things together, both black and white."

Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., the fiery antiwar Jesuit, who was the first member of Congress to call for President Nixon's impeachment, said part of the reason for the predominantly white turnout was that a large number of the marchers were from the suburbs. He said he did not know why more blacks had not turned out.

Drinan also called for expansion of the METCO program, under which blacks are voluntarily bused to suburban schools.

A number of other speakers urged the crowd to "show that the bigots do not rule the streets of Boston."

Quarterback has safest position, AMA report says

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — The American Medical Association opened its 25th clinical convention Saturday with a conference on the medical aspects of sports in which doctors learned the quarterback is the safest man in football and skiers should beware of their equipment.

Reports on the two sports were part of the Sports Medical Conference which occupied most of the first day of the convention.

The football report came from a University of North Carolina five-year study of injuries, particularly those at the prep level. The study was done under supervision of Frederick O. Mueller, director of football studies in the Department of Physical education, and Carl S. Blyth, chairman of the Department of Physical Education and principal investigator.

They said positions most frequently involved in football injuries are defensive end, defensive tackle, linebacker and offensive halfback in order of descending importance.

They noted that "Football plays a major role in our society and is an important part of the educational program at all school levels. Unfortunately, football injuries seem to have been accepted as an uncomfortable byproduct of participation in the game. Our study demonstrates that while football as a contact sport produces injuries, a number of injuries can be prevented."

Among their suggestions: Avoiding some specific name brand helmets and shoulder pads associated with significantly higher injury rates, maintaining playing surfaces properly, limiting contact in practice, avoiding return to full contact those with a history of injury before they are fully recovered.

E. H. Bahniuk of the Rainbow Sports Medicine Center of Case Western University in Cleveland said it is commonly estimated there are five million skiers in the United States and between 165,000 and 600,000 skiing injuries will occur in the next year.

Linkletter is speaker at La Verne College dinner

Art Linkletter, radio and television star for the past four decades, will be the keynote speaker at the sixth annual Associates Dinner of La Verne College Monday night in the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

More than 300 guests and members of the college community will gather at 7:30 p.m. to hear Linkletter, a member of the President's National Advisory Council for Drug Abuse Prevention, discuss his personal crusade against drug abuse.

Max Forney, assistant director of special in-service programs for the field studies sector at LVC and a veteran of 37 years of service to education in the California public school system, will be master of ceremonies.

Entertainment will be provided by the La Verne College Chamber Singers under the direction of James Fahringer, associate professor of music.

The annual dinner event allows La Verne College to express appreciation to the LVC Associates, an organization devoted to the financial support of the college's education philosophy and programs.

Explosions at Goodyear plant

Firemen find 2 bodies after blasts

BEAUMONT, Tex. (UPI) — Firefighters digging through the rubble resulting from a series of explosions that destroyed 25 per cent of the $5 million Goodyear synthetic rubber plant found the bodies of two workers Saturday.

Ten persons were injured in the blasts Friday night and homes were damaged as far as six miles away. Originally plant officials thought there were no fatalities.

"We discovered the bodies early this morning. We just couldn't get in there before then," Goodyear spokesman Bob Rowley said. "We thought we were home free, but we weren't."

The victims were identifed as James C. Kaizer, 28, and Daryl A. Harper, 35, both of the Beaumont area.

Rowley said the explosions apparently were caused by a hydrocarbon plant's isoprene unit where the company makes a substance vital to the manufacturing of synthetic rubber.

Firemen were trying to contain the fire when the first blast struck sending flames and fireballs 500 feet into the air. A 180-foot distillation tower melted in the heat and collapsed.

"About one-fourth of the plant was extensively damaged," Rowley said. "All the power is gone. Even the clocks have stopped. We certainly won't be able to resume operations for at least a week."

There were 15 men in the isoprene unit when the fire broke out. The 10 workers injured were in good condition with mostly minor burns except Ronny Hively, 33, who suffered first and second degree burns to the face and lacerations to the scalp.

New policy for Chinese in overcrowded Hong Kong

China trip set for illegal immigrants

HONG KONG (UPI) — Authorities in this overcrowded British colony announced Saturday illegal immigrants from China will be handed back to the Chinese.

Within hours of the new policy coming into effect, five illegal immigrants were turned over to Chinese border guards, the first time since 1968 that captured illegal Chinese immigrants have been handed back.

The refugees, four men and a woman, slipped across the border early Saturday but were caught and handed back to the Chinese later in the day.

A government spokesman said only immigrants who have relatives in the colony or abroad who are willing to take them will be allowed into Hong Kong, Britain's toehold on the southern coast of the China mainland.

About 30,000 Chinese have entered Hong Kong this year of which the spokesman said more than 6,000 were illegal immigrants.

Director of Immigration William Collard said in a television interview there has been increasing concern among government officials on the high rate of legal and illegal immigration from China.

The influx is "putting a fairly serious burden on the economy and is also impairing the efforts being made by the Hong Kong government to improve the lot of its own citizens," he said.

"Quite obviously when we look around the streets, this is a horribly crowded place. We certainly don't need more people here and the sooner we stop this intake the better."

Cite behavior control dangers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government finances experiments to control "antisocial" human behavior with brain surgery, drugs, computers, radio transmitters implanted in the head and other means, a Senate report said Saturday.

"There is a real question whether the government should be involved at all in programs that potentially pose substantial threats to our basic freedoms," Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., said in a preface to the 651-page report issued by his subcommittee on constitutional rights.

"The question becomes even more acute when these programs are conducted, as they are today, in the absence of strict controls."

Behavior control technology tries to cure child molesters, homosexuals, drug abusers, alcoholics, shoplifters, hyperactive children and other "antisocial" persons through such techniques as psychosurgery — a type of brain surgery called "murder of the mind" by its critics.

"The subcommittee found that the federal government, through a number of departments and agencies, is going ahead with behavior modification projects, including psychosurgery, without a review structure fully adequate to protect the constitutional rights of the subjects," the report said.

It said the Department of Health, Education and Welfare spends the most on behavior research, but the Justice Department, the Veterans Administration and the National Science Foundation are also involved.

The three-year study described an HEW-funded drug treatment program called "The Seed" in the words of a South Florida high school guidance counsellor:

"When they (student "Seedlings") return, they are 'straight', namely quiet, well-dressed, with short hair, and not under the influence of drugs...

"However, they seem to be living in a robot-like atmosphere, they won't speak to anyone outside of their own group ... Seedlings seem to have an informing system on each other and on others that is similar to Nazi Germany. They run in to use the telephone daily, to report against each other to The Seed."

The report included these other examples of behavior control experiments:

—"One recent proposal stated that it is possible, through a radio transmitter-receiver implanted in the brain of a known offender, constantly to —A program in Iowa used the drug apomorphine, which can cause uncontrolled vomiting for up to an hour, on prisoners who used abusive language or smoked illegally.

—A Vacaville, Calif., state mental facility tried to suppress assaults and suicide attempts with the drug anectine, which causes prolonged seizure of the respiratory system and muscular paralysis.

—An HEW-funded program at UCLA, studies boys aged 5-8 who show such signs of "feminine mannerisms" to develop "behavior ... management in which subjects are given token rewards for displaying behavior appropriate to their gender."

The subcommittee said it could not determine how deeply the federal government is involved in such research.

Ervin said he would transmit the study to the National Commission for the Protection of Human Subjects of Biomedical and Behavioral Experimentation, which has legal responsibility

Mrs. Margaret Essex Raglin, of 1719 Bonnie Brae, Pomona, died Saturday morning in a Pomona convalescent hospital after a 5 year illness.

Mrs. Raglin was born Jan. 18, 1888 in Soperville, Ill. She came to Pomona from Illinois in 1957 and had lived here since that time. She was a member of the Central Baptist Church and was a past president of the American Legion Auxiliary in London Mills, Ill. Mrs. Raglin had attended the Chicago School of Nursing and was a nurse at Walter Reid Hospital in Washington, D.C., during WW II and at the Turo School of Medicine in New Orleans.

Survivors are two sons, Rodney E. Ogle and Robert Ray Ogle both of Pomona; two brothers, Virgil Essex of Norco and Dr. Hiram Essex of Rochester, Minn.; four grandchildren and 9 great-grandchildren.

Services will be Monday at 1:30 p.m. in Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona. Dr. Ray Batema, pastor of the Central Baptist Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Pomona Cemetery.

Gertrude C. Murphy

Mrs. Gertrude C. Murphy, of 3825 W. Valley Blvd., Walnut, died Friday afternoon in Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Mrs. Murphy was born Nov. 28, 1896 in Ashley, Penn. She came to California in 1951 from New Jersey and lived in the Pasadena area for 16 years. She had lived in the Pomona area for the past six years.

Survivors are two daughters, Miss Mary L. Chapman of Walnut and Mrs. Lorraine Gilsdorf of Santa Ana; and eight grandchildren.

Services will be Monday at 11:30 a.m. in Todd Memorial Chapel Pomona. The Rev. Paul B. Ryan of the First Baptist Church, will officiate. Entombment will be in Pomona Mausoleum.

Loren L. O'Hair

Graveside services for Loren L. O'Hair, 81, Ontario, will be Monday at 11 a.m. at Bellevue Cemetery. Draper Mortuary is in charge of arrangements.

Mr. O'Hair died Thursday at the Ontario Community Hospital after a lengthy illness.

He was born July 12, 1893 in Eureka, Kan., and had lived 47 years in Ontario. He was a retired General Electric Co. employe. He served in the Army during World War I.

Surviving are three sons, John of Montclair, George of Roseville and Paul of Beaumont; three daughters, Delia Alexander of Montclair, Coeta Stockwell of Ontario and Pearl Manley of San Diego; three brothers, Jesse of Los Angeles, Luther of Ontario and Bennie of Oklahoma City, Okla.; four sisters, Julia Moore of Napanine, Wash., Mrs. L. L. Hasner of Leonard, Mo., Lula Martin of Woodward, Okla., and Grace Hicks of Oklahoma City; 19 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Leo A. Barber

Leo A. Barber, 301 E. Foothill Blvd., Pomona, died Friday night in Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

He was born June 11, 1888, in Glenwood City, Wis. He came to California in 1951 and lived in San Dimas and La Verne before moving to Pomona in 1966.

He was yardmaster for the Great Northern Railroad for 45 years, retiring in 1951. In San Dimas he was a mail carrier for 10 years. He was a member of the Unity Church, Pomona, the Arcana Lodge No. 187 F.& A.M. in Minneapolis, the senior citizens in La Verne and Pomona, and the Retired Railroad Employees.

Besides his widow, Jessie, he is survived by two sons, Leo E. of Yucaipa and Darrell C. of Oceanside; a sister, Mrs. Edna Pattie of Burbank; a brother, Lyle of San Dimas; six grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Injured Chino cyclist David Byron Pruitt, 23, died Thursday after seven years and nine months in a coma.

Mr. Pruitt was 15 when his motorcycle and a car collided on Riverside Drive west of San Antonio Avenue on March 23, 1967.

His cycle was crumpled beneath the car and burst into flames. He was hurled onto the hood of the car then fell onto the roadway. He suffered head, eye, leg and arm injuries.

He had been hospitalized in a comatose condition ever since. Death occurred at the Shea Convalescent Hospital in Upland.

Memorial services will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Griffith Mortuary Chapel in Chino. The Rev. Martin W. Keck, pastor of the Immanual Lutheran Church, will officiate.

Private burial will be in PomonaCemetery.

Mr. Pruitt was born June 27, 1951, in Chino. He was a ninth grader at Chino High School at the time of the accident. He was a Star Boy Scout in Troop 1 in Chino and a member of the Immanuel Lutheran Church.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald S. Pruitt of Chino; two brothers, Jay R. of Lubbock, Tex., and Donald S. II of Big Bear; and grandparents, Mrs. Emma Purda of Senora, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Pruitt of Kingman, Kan., and Mrs. Bertha Foell of Salem, Ore.

City Council agenda

Monroe Ave. closure up for consideration

The permanent closure of Monroe Avenue at Orange Grove Avenue will be considered by the Pomona City Council Monday night.

The residential street has been closed on a temporary basis since September. Ronald Kranzer, director of public works, will recommend that the street be closed permanently.

The staff recommendation calls for the construction of landscaped cul-de-sac at a cost of approximately $5,000.

Other agenda items for the 8 p.m. meeting include the presentation of a petition by residents in the area of Lexington and Franklin avenues. The residents are seeking relief from the noise caused by motorcycle and minibike riders on vacant areas in the neighborhood.

The council will also consider the purchase of a $39,000 truck for the sanitation department, and is expected to set a public hearing for Dec. 9 on whether it should revoke the permits of 46 massage techicians.

At Pilgrim Place

'Arthritis facts' topic

Dr. James H. Meriwether Jr. will discuss "Facts About Arthritis" Dec. 6 at 10:30 a.m. at Pilgrim Place, Claremont.

Anyone interested may attend. Admission is free. Dr. Meriwether is a member of the arthritis research team at Casa Colina Hospital in Pomona.

His appearance was arranged by the Pilgrim Place Town Meeting Health and Welfare Committee. Dr. G. Merrill Lenox is chairman.

4 get $60 in station holdup

The four drove up to the station in a metallic brown Cadillac, and according to police, ordered the attendant to give them the money from the cash register.

POMONA FIREMAN — James Arnold, left, and Inspector Tom Fee check hot spots inside charred garage which was destroyed by fire early Saturday morning. Arson is suspected, firemen said an investigation is underway. Loss estimates were set at $5,000.

Arson suspected in $5,000 garage blaze

The family dog kept overnight in the garage perished Saturday morning when fire destroyed the garage at 248 Cameron Ave., Pomona.

Firemen said arson is suspected in the blaze, reported at 6:50 a.m., and an investigation is underway. Loss of the structure and its contents is estimated at $5,000.

Firemen who battled the blaze described the animal that died in the garage as a small black and white pet of mixed breed.

Spirit of good will united walkers who raised more than $30,000 for hungry

Today (Sunday) is the deadline for turning in funds collected during the Sunday, Nov. 17 Walk for the Hungry. Sponsors and walkers will be turning the final collections into their church today so that the funds may be sent to Church World Service.

The valley Walk for the Hungry raised approximately $30,000 as 1,800 people walked a total of 12,000 miles in the 1 p.m. event which was sponsored by the Pomona Valley Council of Churches.

According to Audrey Lightbody, executive director of the council, the group was representative of numerous groups. "White people, black people, brown people, oriental people walked to help needy people. Catholics walked-Our Lady of Assumption Catholic Church in Claremont had 250 people walking. Protestants walked--the La Verne Church of the Brethren had 150 people walking."

"One 89-year-old man, Joseph Van Sickle, walked the entire 10 miles, two people being pushed in wheelchairs covered the entire walk route, one blind 80-year-old man was among those who participated. Ralph Waite, television star of "The Waltons" led the walk out of Palomares Park, numerous pastors put their feet into the walk to give validity to the brotherhood they profess. Mayors, councilmen, former Congressman Jerry Voorhis walked, a track team ran the 10 miles in just under one hour.

"But the most important part of the walk was that so many people shared, that nothing so basically ecumenical has happened before. The needs of hungry people was a cause worth energy, tired muscles and the seeking out of people who would sponsor walkers for each mile they walked," Mrs. Lightbody said.

"The Walk for the Hungry will assume its true significance as that money can become translated into food for hungry people. Since the Pomona Valley walk was one of the largest done through Church World Service and the amount pledged was so significant, it is hoped that the money pledged will become a reality that says that the people in the Pomona Valley really care," she said.

Magazines

What they're saying

By United Press International

HARPER'S: "In the past decade, literally dozens of private intelligence agencies have been created, joining over 232,000 registered private eyes and 4,000-odd security firms." Author Jim Hougan writes that these are staffed almost entirely by ex-government gumshoes. He calls them "mercenary apparats (who) place their skills at the disposal of the rich and paranoid," and zeroes in on one rent-a-spy outfit known as Intertel.

MCCALL'S tries to cheer readers with "surprising ways" life got better in 1974. Among them is the decrease in skyjacking, more women in politics and at better jobs, the reclaiming of garbage, a drop in death rates from such diseases as pneumonia, emphysema and auto accidents, and also the comeback being made by the endangered walrus.

Shutdowns rocking the automobile business are forcing a serious re-examination of the industry's prospects. BUSINESS WEEK reports sales of new cars have slumped by 40 per cent, a cut apt to afflict other industries.

THE PROGRESSIVE: "About one American in six depends on the auto for income. More than 800,000 firms have no other business, and 22 of the 50 largest U.S. corporations get the majority of their revenue from motor vehicles and highways. The oil, steel, cement, lead, glass, and rubber industries would shrink drastically without the automobile." The magazine —which urges more mass transit —says redesigning engines to use just 100 horsepower would cut gas consumption by a third.

THE NEW YORKER quotes Italian journalist Alberto Sensini who, writing about the economy there, says Italians "are uncertain about the lives of their children. They are afraid of what life in Italy is going to be like in a few years. People aren't putting their money in the bank anymore. They buy a country house or a picture or some jewelry instead. There's a sort of apocalyptic feeling."

NEW YORK magazine takes a look at how hard the famous toil and finds some put in 90 hours a week or more. Robert Abrams, Bronx borough president, puts in 102, as does Rep. Bella Abzug, who says she sleeps only five hours a night. Many rise at early hours, including Barbara Walters of the Today Show, up at 4:45 a.m.; and William Ellinghaus, N.Y. Telephone Co. president, up at 5 a.m. "Success itself cajoles one into working longer hours," Lesley Goldberg writes. "The more important you are, the more valuable your time becomes, until there is literally no longer such a thing as free time."

READER'S DIGEST prints the newest findings about marijuana under the title "More Dangerous Than You Know." It quotes studies asserting that pot damages chromosomes; reduces male sperm counts; and increases bronchitis and lung cancer.

In RAMPARTS, author Gene Marine says President Ford's "amnesty" plan never uses that word but deliberately refers to "clemency", "leniency" or "mercy." Whichever, he writes, the Ford "clemency" plan is "absurd" because "most expatriate resisters... aren't interested in coming back to the U.S. anyway, except as visitors. Americans have been told this for at least five years, but we just don't seem able to believe it."

If you want to hit a golf ball farther, use lighter clubs, Golf Digest suggests. To support this idea, the magazine quotes the theories of Albert Einstein and kindred physicists who "have long known that force equals mass times velocity squared." Put simply, the faster you swing the farther the ball soars down the fairway. Thus, the ancient 8½-oz. hickory shaft clubs gave way to the 4½-oz. steel shafts in the 1930s and today

Convinced they made right decision

JEROME AND LIL PRESTON, HAPPY IN ATLANTA SUBURB

ATLANTA (UPI) — Two years ago, Lil Preston's idea of the South was a place where people picked cotton under a broiling sun, blacks lived in shacks and poverty abounded.

She had lived in Chicago all her life, raised four children and was perfectly content to remain in her house in an all-black neighborhood.

When her husband, Jerome, approached her about moving to Atlanta, she was emphatic. "No way!" was her answer.

Jerome Preston, a 44-year-old truck driver, had visited relatives in Atlanta on a couple of occasions. "I liked being able to go into a restaurant early in the morning and being able to strike up a conversation with anybody, black or white," he recalled.

"Just general friendliness and a genuine feeling about people. I was also impressed by the cleanliness. Even what you might call the 'slummified' areas had grass and trees."

With the help of his two sons, Preston convinced his wife they should make the move. After living in a racially-mixed, middle-income Atlanta suburban for over a year, they are convinced they made the right decision.

The Prestons, naturally outgoing, made friends easily with their white neighbors. When their daughter was married in a home ceremony recently, nearly half the guests were white.

The Prestons' experience is not unique, according to John Lewis, executive director of the Atlanta-based Voter Education Project, an organization aimed at increasing minority participation in the political process.

"It's possible in 1974 for the average black family to have as good a life in the South as in the North," Lewis said. "During the past five to 10 years, we have witnessed in my estimation a revolution in this whole area in the South.

"In the early '60s, it was practically impossible for blacks to get a good job or adequate education in some communities in the South. Black people are now coming into their own in areas of employment and the whole area of equal opportunity.

"There is a greater sense of optimism by black people in the South. You can be poor and still have a great sense of hope. If you are poor in Harlem or Newark, you are stuck really. There's not much hope. But if you are poor on an Alabama farm, you can plant crops and eat."

Lewis said many black youths still leave the South, "going to Detroit to work in auto plants, but I think that number is slowing down. More and more blacks, whether they be high school graduates or dropouts, are returning to the South."

There is still tension and some white homeowners are quick to put up a "for sale" sign when blacks move into a neighborhood. But, Lewis said, "We are closer to that point of mutual respect and acceptance, "part of it is the fear of the unknown," he said. "I think we will see a day coming in the South when racial tension will be almost gone. The remaining tension won't be based on race but on those folks who have been left out or left behind, the whole question of poverty and hunger."

Former Atlanta Mayor Ivan Allen Jr., a liberal who helped keep Atlanta calm during the racially turbulent 1960s, says the civil rights struggle has been 100 per cent effective in the South in the areas of education, voting rights and public accommodations.

"There have been tremendous strides in the areas of employment," he said. "Only in the field of equal housing have we kind of bogged down."

Allen believes it may be a couple of generations yet before whites and blacks can live side by side with no racial prejudice but he says this is true across the nation, not just the south. The Prestons have experienced a few examples of racial prejudice from those Mrs. Preston calls "hard-core rednecks." But they say the same problems occur in the North.

"You can eat in any restaurant you want here without people looking at you too much," Preston said. "In some restaurants in the Chicago suburbs, everybody would be looking at you."

As a substitute teacher in an integrated school, Mrs. Preston said she has had few problems with the children.

"I treat them all like they were purple," she explained.

Their one disappointing experience has been Preston's inability to find a job with the salary he received in Chicago. But he thinks the general economic climate has been a prime factor rather than race.

Energy crunch forces entire town to move

CASTLE GATE, Utah (UPI) — Growling bulldozers and rattling vans are removing the last homes in this once bustling mining town, leaving behind mounds of coal and a ramshackle store once robbed by Butch Cassidy.

The movers have taken away more than half the 61 homes destined for new lots a few miles down the road. The rest will be hauled away or knocked down before winter.

"The place is beginning to look like it's been bombed," said one resident whose home had been moved, "about the only thing that is the same is the castle gate rock formation that gave the town its name."

Left behind are scattered bricks, vacant lots, open foundations, some downtown business buildings and the old Wasatch store, scene of an 1897 holdup by Cassidy's "wild bunch".

There are also mounds of coal, lines of railroad cars and a new coal preparation plant being built by McCulloch Oil Co., a Los Angeles oil firm, on what was the town site for nearly a century.

Castle Gate, a company town owned entirely by McCulloch, is a victim of the energy crisis and the new demand for coal.

Descendants of the pioneers who settled the brush-laden, desertlike valley in the 19th century are negotiating with the firm over the future of the store, which is a state historic site.

The old Wasatch store, a two-story brick buildng constructed by an Italian stonemason, cannot be moved without being torn down. castle gate residents fear McCulloch will not be willing to pay the cost of rebuilding.

As owner of all property in Castle Gate, McCulloch retains legal rights over the store, which lies near the middle of the area to be used for piling coal. If it falls forever, a monument will be built from the store's bricks in a subdivision at Spring Canyon, near Helper, where Castle Gate families are being relocated.

The fate of Castle Gate residents was sealed months ago when McCulloch offered the 78 families several compensatory options: the move to Helper, along with a parcel of land; a transfer to other locations, chosen by five families, or selling their homes to the oil firm, picked by 12.

Since their children already attended school in Helper (there was none in Castle Gate) and their jobs were there, the great majority of families selected the four-mile transfer and 7,000 square feet of land for their homes.

The first residents to move, Mr. and Mrs. Lenadro Ochoa, encountered no major problems on the way down the road, except living in a motel while their house was being completed. Mrs. Ochoa misnow working in all the transsed her home so much, the family moved in even before any of the utilities were connected.

"Gas and electricity are ferred homes," said Don Braaten, assistant project manager for Trico Corp., which is handling the whole move. "And telephone service should be installed shortly."

Crews also are hurrying to grade the roads to the annexed section outside Helper city limits before the first heavy snowfall. The roads will be paved next spring.

As crews put the finishing touches on the roads and house foundations, families who have known no other home but Castle Gate are planning a new life on new land—the first they have ever owned.

Shotgun death said accidental

WHITTIER (UPI) — Sheriff's deputies said Thursday the shotgun death of a 16-year-old boy was apparently accidental.

Officers said Raymond Anderson was examining a 12-gauge shotgun in the backyard of his home with three friends when the gun discharged.

Neighbors save woman from fire

Evelon Tolley escaped with only first degree burns on her face and was listed in good condition at Glendora Community Hospital.

Damage to the house was estimated at $3,500.

½-pound of sirloin steak for $6.60

We have it bad, but look at Japanese housewife

With consumer prices up almost 25 per cent over last year, the sprawling, noisy market is one of the few places to offer bargains to the diligent shopper.

If you keep your eyes peeled you can buy a glistening white squid for about 40 cents or a bamboo shoot, thick as your fist and still covered with dirt from the earth, for about 43 cents.

Prices of consumer goods in Japan, including foodstuffs, have been skyrocketing. The same head of lettuce which costs 20 cents in California costs 90 cents in Tokyo. Spinach costs four times as much in Tokyo. Peanut butter costs three times as much. A simple bowl of soba (Chinese noodles in broth), which cost about 22 cents in 1968 now costs about 80 cents.

The Ogikubo market, located next to the train station, is a network of narrow alleyways lined with wooden and corrugated tin stalls, piled high with brightly colored fish, fruits and vegetables.

The stalls offer every kind of food imaginable, from seaweed to boned chicken breasts to pickled lily bulbs. There is a meat counter where you can buy an eight-ounce sirloin steak for about $6.60 or seven ounces of ground beef for about $1.15 but the real crowds are at the fish stalls.

Here the thrifty housewife can pick up four small fish, fresh sardines perhaps, for about 30 cents or a goodsized sanma (mackeral pike) for about 45 cents, to feed a family of four.

If she goes early enough in the morning she can watch the stall keepers spilling fresh pails of fish still wriggling with life onto the counters.

Even the huge red Hokkaido crabs are artfully arranged, their great hairy legs folded decorously beneath them. But anyone watching her pennies will leave them sitting there, for a medium-sized one costs about $1.65.

There are also processed fish, split open like butterflies and dried, marinated in bean paste or sake, or salted.

The vegetable stalls are equally eye-pleasing, bright red tomatoes arranged in piles on green plastic dishes, one dish of five for 55 cents, bunches of parsley for 15 cents, two-foot long white radishes (daikon) for 45 cents, and lotus roots, with their delicate internal filigree, for 30 cents).

Stall keepers wait on three or four shoppers at the same time, using a kind of time-sharing technique. No shopper expects the luxury of conducting her transaction from beginning to end without interruption. Any moment that the fish vendor's mouth is still, he is considered fair game for another housewife to begin her transaction.

But because the food is so fresh, and much of it so cheap, housewives go about their marketing with good cheer.

INFLATION

Buyers Billboard

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the price of sugar climbing daily, many consumers wonder why canned fruit continues to be packed in heavy, high-sugar syrup.

"Why can't the canneries pack one line of fruit in extra light syrup? Or light syrup?" ask two readers in Versailles, Ohio.

"It's much too thick and sweet..." adds a reader in Colorado Springs, Colo. "If they discontinued packing fruit in heavy syrup, wouldn't that eliminate some use of sugar?"

Yes, it would. And it's about to happen.

The canning industry says the canned fruit you buy today was put up last year, or earlier this year before sugar prices got out of hand.

"We can just about guarantee you will see a drop in the use of heavy sugar syrup," said one expert at the National Canners Association. But that may not start showing up in stores until next year.

What you will see then, the expert added, will be either light syrup or lightly sweetened water.

Heavy sugar syrups have been used through the years not for any preservative reason — since processing is done by heat —but as a matter of taste. The packers assumed the public liked canned peaches with thick syrups.

One other change in the switch away from sugar may be the use of other fruit juices —such as the pulpy nectars — as a canning medium. And, the association said, there are indications the Food and Drug Administration will liberalize its policies to permit nonsugar sweeteners such as corn syrup.

Many nutritionists are cheering developments such as these, since they contend Americans eat too much refined sugar. And if industry and individual consumers find they can get along with less sugar, the sugar industry may find itself in hard times when prices come back down —something the market analysts say should happen in about one year.

A reader in Bartlesville, Okla., writes:

"On buying cut up portions of chicken at the supermarket, as you well know, one can buy packages of drumsticks, backs, breasts, etc. But in this area, and I suspect nationwide, the thighs are not cut from joint to joint, but the back is split and a portion of it is sold attached to the thighs —although the package is labeled 'thighs' and priced accordingly, substantially more than the price of backs.

"When I called this to the attention of the local Safeway manager he reacted like I was some sort of nut and pretended not to understand what I was talking about."

The practice of cutting chicken that way is not nationwide, although the fast food chains prefer those cuts since they make it look like you're getting a bigger piece of chicken.

In any case, if the package is not labeled "thighs with back," or something similar, it is illegal, according to the National Broiler Council. The package is supposed to state clearly what is inside.

And, the council adds, you should not be charged thigh prices when the piece is something else. The best way to check that out is to compare prices at another store for the thigh-only cuts and see if the version you're finding in the first store is cheaper.

It sometimes happens that one supplier will handle poultry for an entire area, and it may not be possible to find chicken cut any other way. But don't stop complaining. It sounds like a legitimate gripe.

The Broiler Council contends the thigh-with-back cut has been showing up in some sections of the country because the industry is trying to "diversify" and turn out a cut that is "more attractive for consumers with moderate incomes."

Besides, they add, the back is a very "slow mover" in most meat counters —although presumably it moves a bit faster when the thigh is attached.

The Inflation Fighter

Comparison shopping entails more than simply checking price tags. A lower price may mean a real bargain, but the difference may result from limited customer services such as delivery, credit, installation, repair and maintenance.

Decide whether these services are important to you. If they are, you may be better off with the seemingly higher price.

Different types of stores, from department to specialty shops, through discount stores and warehouses, offer different services and thus may vary widely in merchandise prices.

Look around to find the stores that offer the most appropriate merchandise, services and prices. Don't forget though, the amount saved by comparison shopping, especially for low-priced items, may not be worth the cost in time, energy and shopping expenses.

If you have to heat the oven for one dish, try to use it for the entire meal that night. Two or three dishes can be baked with little more energy than one.

Pick foods that cook at about the same temperature. With a little premeditation, you can still arrange to have everything finish at the same time.

Then go it one better, and use the oven for a cake or other baked desert after you've removed the roast or casserole.

If the gas flame of your stove isn't blue, you aren't getting the most energy for your money, because it isn't operating correctly.

If the flame has traces of yellow the burners may be clogged. Clean them (after they've thoroughly cooled) with a wire pipe cleaner.

Also, keep reflector pans clean to maximize efficiency — the shinier they are the more heat they will reflect, thus saving energy.

May be plague carriers

EVIDENCE

AND

CULPRITS

Dan Downing (left), Los Angeles County rodent control officer, displays walnut, citrus fruit and pomegranate nibbled by tree rats. At right are two ugly members of the tree rat family.

By PEGGY GONZALES
PB Staff Writer

Do you like ivy, fruit trees, bougainvillaea?

So do rats.

Like people, they enjoy the outdoors when its warm and go indoors, if they can, when it is rainy and cold.

Nevertheless, in even a small group of 20 people here you are likely to find one who has had a rat problem.

This is true also in well-to-do neighborhoods in other parts of California. In the San Francisco area residents say rodents are falling into and drowning in swimming pools.

The culprit is the roof rat, known too as the tree or wood rat.

It feeds on fruits and nuts, especially walnuts; nests in ivy and other thick vines, makes paths in shrubbery.

Health officials in Sacramento and Berkeley are trying to determine the roof rat's potential for carrying disease.

Curtis Batson, San Bernardino County sanitarian trained in vector control, says they may be carriers of plague.

Some food born illnesses have been traced to rodents.

Batson said rats have been a recognized problem in the valley since 1958 but were probably in walnut orchards in Ontario before the city was established.

Most complaints about rats used to come from the eastern section of the city, where houses are old. Last May complaints began to move westward.

In September the Environmental Health Service Department of San Bernardino County conducted an experimental campaign in the Ontario area bounded by Vine and San Antonio Avenues and Fourth and I Streets.

Sanitarians went through every house and explained what each home owner should do to help control the rat population. Batson reported there was 75 to 80 per cent compliance.

Residents were asked to:

— Keep garbage in tightly closed garbage cans.

— Harvest fruit and nuts when ripe.

— Remove or thin ivy growths. Dead palm fronds also are rat havens.

— Stack woodpiles 18 inches off the ground.

— Remove trash and rubbish regularly.

— Keep pet food covered.

— Trim trees and bushes so they don't hang over roofs.

— Cover all vents in foundations and attics with one-quarter inch wire screen. Rats can enter any opening larger than one-half inch.

— Screen or close off openings under overlapping roof lines.

— Be sure that all other openings into the house and foundation are sealed.

Batson said 50 to 60 reports of rats had been received from Ontario since May. In the same period, there have been only five to 10 from Chino, Alta Loma, Upland and Montclair combined.

The Los Angeles County rodent control area including valley communities goes as far west as San Marino.

Dan Downing, a sanitarian for the area, says reports average 90 to 100 a month for the entire region and are light compared with those in other county areas.

"The people might see one rat walking on a wire and report it," he comments.

Rodent control men in Los Angeles County will distribute rodenticides in a dwelling at no charge. They prefer this procedure to a do-it-yourself effort because of the safety factor.

When they inspect a home, they may order the owner to screen certain areas and make proper repairs. They don't push immediate compliance where there is a financial problem or an absent owner.

The Los Angeles County Department of Health Services advises people who want to trap rats to use a wooden snap trap baited with bacon, apple or walnuts. In addition to walnuts, San Bernardino County suggests oatmeal, walnut meat or peanut butter.

A roof rat is about eight inches long, larger than a house mouse.

Signs to look for are droppings, noise, teeth marks on fruit or berries, black smudge marks made when a rat rubs its dirty hair against a structure, five-toed tracks up to an inch in length and chewed wood, cloth, paper or bags.

Letter to a dead son

Robert Buxton, 17, of La Verne, died Nov. 9 in a motorcycle-auto crash. The victim's bereaved father, Reginald Buxton, of 2799 Sixth St., La Verne, wrote us a letter and enclosed one to his dead son—a part of his life now lost forever. The letter to us is not a plea of condolences, but urges other mothers and fathers to exercise their duties as parents. In an effort to curtail such tragedies, we reprint both of Mr. Buxton's letters below. The Editor.

The Editor
Pomona Progress-Bulletin
300 S. Thomas St.
Pomona, Calif.

Dear Sir,

We lost our eldest boy in a motorcycle accident on Nov. 9. For 17 long years we cared for our boy and watched him grow to 6-feet and become very strong.

Then, one day he was gone!

Over and above our grief and anguish, we are appalled at the slaughter of young men which takes place daily as reported in your newspaper.

What can be done?

We feel so useless. Everyone we talk to nods his head and says knowingly:

"Motorcycles have no chance on the road."

The enclosed letter is my simple and feeble effort to warn other parents of what can and does happen. Parents should refuse the pleas of their sons flatly with the word "NO." They should use all their influence to stop their children from riding such lethal machines. I wish that we had that chance again.

Yours sincerely,

REGINALD BUXTON

My Very Dear Son,

You asked your mother and me if you could have a motorcycle. You were only 16 and we knew the perils. We said no. After much pleading and driver education at your high school, your mother and I relented and you got your first motorcycle at the age of 16½.

You were maturing and working with me as an apprentice. You were getting a paycheck at 17½.

Now you wanted a new cycle. You would pay for it yourself and, above all, you said you would be careful. You always would wear a helmet, not speed and carry a copy of the rules in your pocket. You knew your mother and I were fearful for you. Our shout of "Be careful" when you left the house on your shiny new cycle Oct. 9, 1974, was there every time to remind you.

But what happened, son?

Why are you now lying in Forest Lawn?

Why did you go from us one month later on Nov. 9 never to return.

You joined the ranks of young men who were cruelly snatched away from their loved ones on motorcycles. You, like others, were blameless.

Goodbye, son. May the world to which you have gone be a better one.

Lovingly,
Dad

TV, cartoon stars named for Christmas parade

Actor Jim Malinda, who plays Korg on the television series "Kong: 70,000 B.C.", will appear in the 22nd annual Pomona Christmas parade Dec. 7.

The parade will begin at 6 p.m. and proceed east along Holt Avenue from Hamilton Boulevard to Palomares Street where it will disband.

Malinda is head of a six-member family on ABC's series. He has appeared in more than 40 TV series including "Cannon," "Emergency" and "Ironside."

Two Walt Disney cartoon characters, Winnie the Pooh and Tigger, also will be parade participants.

A professional group of old western gun-slingers who specialize in shoot-outs, stage shows, fights, falls and gun action, once again will be a part of the lineup. The group is called the Scattergun Hill Gang. Rocky "Sundance" Morgan, a former motion picture and television stuntman, is the gang's leader.

The Pomona Valley Corvette Association will provide transportation for celebrities appearing in the parade. Bill Linde is association president.

"Christmas Fantasy" is the theme of this year's parade. Floats are being designed and built to conform to that theme. Winners will be awarded trophies.

Ross Kolodge of Upland, who is parade chairman, said the parade will be snappy and entertaining. It is expected to last about 75 minutes.

The parade will consist of 125 units in five divisions. The Color Guard from VFW Post 2108 will lead the procession.

The lineup will include, in addition to the floats, high school and junior college bands, equestrian groups, beauty contest winners, civic dignitaries and numerous special units.

Chaffey High School District tax hike mulled

Possible tax hikes for Chaffey High School district residents will be discussed at Monday's board meeting.

Since the Nov. 4 meeting, board members, administrators and citizens from the community have been discussing district financial needs and whether to ask the public for an increase.

At a citizen meeting last Tuesday, a resolution was adopted requesting the school board to place a proposition before the voters asking for a tax increase.

Also on the agenda for the meeting is the attendance boundaries for the Alta Loma High School area and a revised schedule of the number of band uniforms to be allowed each school district.

Task force to study school closure possibilities

Appointment of a Claremont Unified School District Facilities Utilization Task Force will highlight the school board meeting at the district education center Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The districtwide committee will consist of two parents, a nonparent, a teacher, and the principal of each school involved as well as employe representatives.

Sycamore, Oakmont, Vista, Condit, Mountain View, Chaparral, and Sumner elementary schools and La Puerta Intermediate School will be studied by the 40 to 50-member task force to meet the second week in December and report recommendations by the end of February to the board.

Major concern of the school board and the task force is the district's declining enrollment and possible closing of schools.

The committee, aided by professional leadership, will conduct a study into the use of district education facilities. The district will have at least 20 excess classrooms next September.

The other matters the board will discuss the possibility of increasing a school board candidate's statement of qualifications from 200 to 400 words, and whether to charge the candidate for the longer statement.

The board will study the Certificated Employe Council's response to a draft of a proposed revised employe grievance policy.

Dough sculpture, music on this week's library agenda

The Pomona Public Library will present a program for both children and adults Wednesday on the art of bread dough sculpture.

Mrs. Joan Weldon of La Verne will direct the program, demonstrating the mixing, kneading and forming of dough into decorative and useful objects.

The free program will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Included in the program will be suggestions on how to create holiday decorations and Christmas gifts.

In another holiday season program starting Monday, persons of all ages are invited to create Christmas cards at the library for distribution to local nursing homes. The program will continue daily through Dec. 18.

Children's programs this week in the Laura Ingalls Wilder Room at the library will begin Tuesday with a program of Christmas music in the Story Theater. The program will be presented by violin students from 2 to 13 years of age from the Claremont Community School of Music.

On Wednesday at 9:30 and 10:30 a.m. there will be story hours for preschool aged children.

Thursday at 7 p.m. the Pomona Junior Women's Club will present Programs for Peanuts, a variety program for children from 3 to 5 years of age.

Controversial condominium before city council

A Pomona developer will ask La Verne City Council Monday night to overrule the Planning Commission and permit him to build a condominium complex at the northwest corner of Wheeler Avenue and Base Line Road.

Realtor Clyde Warren will request a change from the general plan that now calls for three homes to the acre so that he can build eight homes to the acre on the 14½-acre parcel.

He contends that the area is not suited to such low density single family homes.

The Planning Commission had concluded at its Nov. 12 meeting that Warren's proposal "would not be in keeping with the goals and policies of the community and would be detrimental to surrounding residences."

The commission's action was supported by a petition from residents around the area bearing more than 100 names.

Warren contends he has been given a raw deal because when he bought the land in 1965, it was zoned commercial. He said plans were to build a shopping center there, but the commission killed that proposal when it changed the use of the land to low density residential two years ago.

Since then the deal has fallen through, and Warren now wants to build a condominium development which he contends would be beneficial to the community.

Signal improvements

The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors has authorized an underground electrical service for the traffic signals on Grand Avenue at Golden Springs Drive and at the Pomona Freeway, and on Golden Springs Drive at Diamond Bar Boulevard in Diamond Bar.

Charity alone won't do job

When I was a boy, every Thanksgiving and Christmas we dutifully gathered up cans of vegetables, home-made or store-bought pies, cakes and other foods and made up baskets to be delivered to the hungry in our neighborhood.

By these deeds, our consciences were satisfied and we could conveniently forget these unfortunates for another year.

Later the government got into the business and supplied aid of a sort more or less around the clock. This left us free for other matters.

In neither case did we do much to help these unhappy people fend for themselves. There have been some remarkable operations such as Goodwill Industries and some experiments such as the Job Corps. But we have been startled of late by reports that poverty seems to have been passed down from parent to child. Sons and daughters of those on welfare are now grown up and on welfare themselves.

All of this is a prelude to a discussion of the great famines which now beset the world. Almost every day in the mail we receive literature asking for help and enclosing distressing pictures of children which tear our hearts.

We in the United Sates are giving some food, probably more than any other nation. It is not enough to meet this river of hunger. We are asked to give much more. All right. Few of us can stand by and watch people die of hunger. Bad less to us if we could. But like the Christmas and Easter baskets, and welfare, these food gifts solve no problems. They only get us by today. They do not answer tomorrow's hunger.

My mind turns to a young Chinese from Taiwan I met several years ago in South Vietnam. He's had a series of failures in attempting to organize the farmers in his area into joint ventures aimed at helping themselves. But he's recently had a breakthrough and his eyes were bright. The farmers in that district were on the way. They needed help to be sure. But in the main they now had the know-how to take the lead in their own development.

I think of a friend of Korean ancestry who helped farmers in another area start their own local banks. None had much money but by pooling their funds and with a nest egg of outside money, they were in a position to help each other in time of trouble and to lend funds at reasonable rates for seeds and essential farm equipment.

I recall, too, the retired American farmer who has lived for years in Laos teaching the men and women in his neighborhood the basic methods followed on his old-style family farm. And an old friend in Japan who, for three decades interrupted only by World War II, has taught the Japanese in one rural area the concepts of animal husbandry.

I know of the small teams of dedicated scientists working in laboratories in a handfull of developing countries nurturing new varieties of staple foods suitable to atrocious soils and unhospitable climates.

At a recent science conference, one speaker urged that this country establish in colleges of underdeveloped countries, a chair or laboratory of applied plant research whose major function would be the development of new, hardy species suited to unhappy soils, and the genetic nurturing of higher-yield plants for the better agricultural areas.

These are the kinds of simple, effective action, small-scale in themselves but highly significant in the aggregate which, multiplied, can reduce greatly the amount of starvation in this world.

If U.S. foreign aid is to have any meaning, it must concentrate more than in the past on these techniques.

Meaningful approach

What the average taxpayer in this country needs is a handy pocket sale that would translate big government into manageable terms.

As suggested by Ernest Tricomi, editor of Packascope-USA magazine, it should be easy to devise a circular scale that compares a taxpayer's own contribution against the total federal budget. When a federal spending program is introduced, the taxpayer simply aligns the amount of his previous year's federal income tax and the cost of the program. He then reads through a window on the scale how much the program will cost him personally.

For example, suppose a congressman introduces legislation to save wild horses from extinction at a cost of $105 million. By twirling the dial of his "Ratio of Government's Unreasonable and Excessive Spending" (ROGUES), the taxpayer learns that the program will cost him $7.13 in taxes.

Such a figure is far more comprehensible to the average person than $105 million, says Tricomi. Bringing the "stupendosities" casually tossed about in Washington down to human size might help to achieve firmer control over the politicians by those who make it all possible — the taxpayers.

Animal lovers snooping in filmdom

WASHINGTON — The Hollywood make-up artists who bleached Jonathan Livingston Seagull's winged pals to make them white enough for the movies, reportedly succeeded in killing many of them.

The Humane Society of the United States, which has conducted a lengthy investigation, is so incensed over this and similar findings about other films, that it has begun a secret infiltration of the movie industry. The animal-lovers are using movie stars and technicians as undercover agents.

The seagull movie's producer, Hall Bartlett, insists he is equally militant about the birds' welfare. Bartlett claims he spent a fortune to protect them during filming, even to the point of putting rubber gloves on a hawk's talons before it attacked a gull for one scene.

The battle between humane associations and the filmmakers is as old as cowboys and Indians. In the 30s, tripwires called "running W's" were widely used to tumble horses, buffaloes and cattle during gunfights and other violent scens.

More recently, chickens' heads have been shot off, mice stomped to death, sheep's throats cut, donkeys shot and a goose decapitated, all on camera.

Earlier this year, the American Humane Association, the Humane Society of the United States, and the Fund for Animals met privately with Motion Picture Association head Jack Valenti. Valenti promised to work with moviemakers to get voluntary reform. The Humane Society of the U.S. decided, however, to conduct its own probe.

According to the socity's 40-page secret report on "Seagull," the Bartlett production team got permission from the U.S. government to "take" 250 gulls.

Based on memos, signed statements and tapes, some from those who worked on the film, the society concluded the birds were bleached "too fast," killing at least two and probably many more.

Some 88 of 113 birds suffered eye injuries and others were crippled "as a result of strings being attached to their legs to control them while in flight," witnesses said.

"Birds (were) made to do difficult flying stunts and, as a result, crashed on the rocks and bled," the report goes on. It charges that some of the 50 to 100 bleached birds were treated with hairspray, others were dosed with a caustic so strong it burned handlers' fingers.

In all, the society's witnesses reported that bleaching, filthy accommodations, poor feeding and movie stunts, killed dozens of the gulls and may have permanently injured more. Other films produced similar reports.

As a result, the Humane Society is now enlisting several movie stars as spies. And society investigators will shortly adopt undercover poses to get close to the animals during filming.

Quipped the society's lawyer, Murdaugh Madden: "The movies will be asking employes 'are you now or were you ever a member of the Humane Society of the United States?'" The movie industry, meanwhile, insists it is doing its best to meet demands of the animal protection groups.

Footnote: Bartlett disputed the society on every point. Of some 600 birds handled, he said, only two died. Both perished from natural causes, he claimed. No birds were injured from the strings, he said, because they were made to break before damage occurred. Special housing, food, refrigeration and veterinary services were provided, he said. In all, a maximum of 25 gulls were bleached, he insisted. He added that several U.S. and independent inspectors had found no inhumane conditions.

FAMILY AFFAIR: The family of a prominent Wall Street stockbroker appears to have kicked in an illegal $6,000 to his 1974 congressional campaign, even though the financier's father was already up to his neck in campaign financing troubles.

Republican John L. Loeb, Jr., built up a $100,000 campaign chest with the help of his own $25,000, $70,000 in loans endorsed by his uncle, $3,000 from his father and $3,000 from his brother. Despite it all, he abandoned his campaign in May.

Federal law does not limit the uncle's help, but it does restrict the other family contributions to $25,000. The Loeb family's help totalled $31,000—well over the limit.

Ironically, Loeb's father, John L. Loeb, Sr., had previously pleaded "no contest" to charges that he hid $48,000 in contributions to the 1972 presidential campaign of Sen. Hubert Humphrey.

Although thousands of such apparent violations of the law have been referred to the Justice Department, action is unlikely. The Justice Department has only a dozen staffers, including secretaries, to prosecute the cases.

FAMILY AFFAIR II: In an earlier column, we reported that Dr. Morris Chafetz, head of the government's alcohol abuse program was under investigation. He and two aides billed the government for a stay at a fancy Palm Springs, Calif., hotel after a million-dollar contractor had already paid their bills.

We have now learned that a powerful Senate aide tried to cripple the Health, Education and Welfare Department's investigative until shortly after it began to probe Chafetz's office.

The aide is Harley Dirks, operations head of the Senate appropriations subcommittee which controls HEW's purse strings. He has such influence over HEW's budget that, inside the department, his messages are called "Harleygrams."

By an interesting coincidence, Dirks' wife, Ruth, happens to be Chafetz's special asistant. And, Dirks personally handles Chafetz's budget before the appropriations subcommittee.

Not long after HEW investigators began looking into Chafetz'a dealings and billings, Dirks, in a committee report, called for a cut back in funds for HEW investigators. Dirks told us he sees no conflict in his role as husband and budgeteer and insists his chops at the HEW gumshoes had nothing to do with Chafetz.

FUDDLE FACTORY: Sometimes Washington seems an enormous "Fuddle Factory" where everything goes wrong for the ordinary Americans the bureaucracy is supposed to serve.

For example, E. H. Weder, head of the Highland (Ill.) Manufacturing and Sales Co., had for years sold cellophane Easter grass, which was flammable. When the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) ordered him to stop, he dutifully complied.

At the cost of $950,000, he destroyed his flammable stocks and converted his machines to produce safe, nonflammable grass. But he and many of his employes had to work 16 hours a day to fill enough new grass orders to stave off bankruptcy.

Then, a few months ago, he saw unsafe flammable grass for sale in a drug store. To his bewilderment, he learned that the government had given the go-ahead to another manufacturer as long as the dangerous Easter grass was marked "Flammable."

Outraged, he called the FDA. It was all a $950,000 misunderstanding, he was assured. Weder's only recourse now is to sue the government, which he lacks the time and money to do.

In a letter to his sympathetic congressman, Rep. Phil Crane, R-Mich., Weder sounded the plaint of many small businessmen trapped inside Washington's "Fuddle Factory."

It is, he said, "persecution of small businesses by an unfeeling, stupid, cold, calculating, antibusiness bureaucracy."

The government goof almost destroyed his own life work and "the means of livelihood of hundreds of employes," he wrote.

"Things are tough all over!"

Just in jest

There's soon to be a new look in police departments! I confidently make that assertion on the strength of the fact that in order to avoid charges of discrimination because of size, weight or previous condition, body measurement specifications in connection with police force employment are being carefully re-evaluated. In some instances the powers that be have even gone so far as to assert that if the man doesn't fit the job, the job should be revised to fit the man. Consequently, in Philadelphia, the height requirement for policemen has been reduced. In San Francisco, on the other hand, instead of revising the job, the men are being reshaped free of charge. They are being given lessons in how to eat in order to hold down their weight. — and in order to clear up a popular misconception, it should also be pointed out that those in charge of police force hiring are most emphatic in asserting that, despite the age-old contention that "all policemen have big feet, foot size has never been a physical requirement for police force membership.

As long as we're blaming almost everything bad on our duly elected government officials, I'm at a loss to understand why no one as yet has come up with the accusation that they are also responsible for still another of our many ills. After all, doesn't it stand to reason that if those public servants had only seen fit to appoint a commission and allocate a few million dollars to study the problem, thousands of desperate Americans might not be suffering today from the pain and swelling of hemorrhoidal tissue?

Theology and outer space

What has been the influence of theology on space exploration? Or conversely, what has been the influence of a decade of space shots on the religious considerations of man?

Well, it's another good news-bad news combination. Space exploration has forced the religous community to rethink and reconsider many of the doctrines or at least interpretations of its faith concerning Creation, the Future and the destiny of Man. Fresh thinking, even when forced or compelled by events, generally has good results.

The bad news is that so much popular thinking in religious circles concerning space ends up in wild, distorted projections of ancient Biblical themes. Join this with much of secular science fiction and you are faced with futuristic visions of calamity, disruption and universal destruction. These literary visions become draped with the conflict of interplanetary warfare, Solar systems colliding and igniting, and the whole design of the Universe climaxing in one big Bang. Welcome to the future, welcome to the End!

Since fear is our most powerful emotion (and frequently employed by religious and secular persuaders) it has come to dominate our vision of space and the years and centuries to follow. Yet thoughtful people within the Christian community are regularly challenging these ancient themes now reworked for public fright consumption. The late Paul Tillich, theologican and philosopher, greeted the advance into outer Space with excitement and joy. He saw it as an extension of man's awareness of the beauty and power of the Creator. For him, it was good news in capital letters. Tillich also saluted the order and balance and sureness of God's creation and believed that love and hope were as powerful as energy and matter.

One new massive volume of illustrations and text on "Our World In Space" has done much to encourage a more rational and confident vision of the time ahead.

Here are more than 100 color and black and white illustrations from the gifted hand of Robert McCall. Millions of people are now familiar with the space imagination of McCall which became so vivid in the film "2001: A Space Odyssey." Through the years Robert McCall has emerged as one of the favored artists to work with NASA and his works now appear permanently in the National Gallery of Art.

McCall's universal canvas is complimented by a positive, hopeful commentary prepared by the renowned scientist, Isaac Asimov. Peering beyond the reaches of time and history, the paintings of McCall and the writings of Asimov do not reflect a Creation of chaos or solar systems seething with evil and horror. Rather the suggestion that "when humans venture into the wide Universe they may find it already inhabited by a vast brotherhood . . ."

There are some groups in North America who look to space as a salvation device for the problems of Earth — particularly overpopulation (and as a way to avoid the serious questions of world people control). These naive folk need to ponder this statement; "Even if we could place any human being anywhere in space by merely snapping our fingers, and if every world in space were as warm and welcome as Earth, the fact is that within five thousand years at our present rate of increase (70 million a year), the total mass of human flesh and blood will equal the mass of the known Universe."

In a bleak social and economic period, it is heartening and lifting to have Robert McCall remind us of the dependability, friendliness, and above all, beauty of the Universe.

Heartline

800-543-2393

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions—fast. It costs you nothing. Call Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. or write Heartline, 8514 North Main St., Dayton, Ohio, 45415. Remember, Heartline pays for all calls on its toll-free number . . . 800-543-2393.

HEARTLINE: What is considered when we go to apply for food stamps? — W.D.

Answer: Household size, total resources, and income, less certain allowable deductions such as wage withholdings, child care, educational, medical, and excessive shelter expenses.

HEARTLINE: If I take the dividends from my National Service life insurance benefits left to me by my husband and buy additional paid-up insurance with it, is the income taxable? — B.P.

Answer: No, as long as you buy National Service insurance, there is no tax.

HEARTLINE: My husband is a railroad employe. Did the requirements for wives' annuities change under new railroad retirement laws? — Mrs. W.

Answer: Yes. Effective January 1, 1975, the requirements for railroad retirement wives' annuities are liberalized considerably. Full annuities are payable as early as age 60 to wives of employes age 60 or older who retired after June 30, 1974, with 30 or more years of service. Reduced wives' annuities are payable as early as age 62 to wives of employes with less than 30 years of service retiring after Dec. 31, 1974, at ages 62 to 64. Previously, a wife could not receive a benefit until her husband was at least age 65.

HEARTLINE: I am a widow of a WWII veteran. I've heard than in January of 1975, we are to receive a raise in our pension. Is this true? — R.I.

Answer: We have not received notice of any raise in veterans' or widows' pension.

HEARTLINE: Is the $2,400 we are allowed to make without affecting our Social Security benefits going to be increased in 1975? — W.A.

Answer: Yes, it will be increased to $2,520, or $120 more than 1974.

ANN LANDERS

Boy's little quirks may irk mother, but he could use psychiatric help

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm concerned about my 11-year-old son. He has some odd little habits which may mean nothing, but they persist and seem to be getting worse.

For example: Bob intentionally wears one sock inside out. Whenever I mention it, he pretends it was "an accident." He also must have the window shades in his bedroom exactly arranged so there is approximately one inch of light coming through the bottom before he goes to bed.

When he eats, he separates the food on his plate so nothing is touching anything else. I have seen him do this repeatedly. Also, before he eats, he lines up his silverware in a perfect row.

These quirks make me uneasy. Last night for the first time I discussed the subject with my husband. He said, "They don't bother me. If they bother you, just tell the kid to stop the nonsense."

Ann, do these quirks mean anything? If so, what should I do about it? Thanks for your help. —No Name, Please

Dear N.N.: Many people have compulsive habits—small peculiarities known only to themselves. (Remember "If I step on a crack, I'll break my mother's back"?) These "quirks" are rooted in fear and insecurity. To tell a child (or an adult) to "stop the nonsense" rarely does any good. More than will power is needed.

Take your son to a specialist for psychological testing and learn the extent of his insecurity. Your physician can direct you. The boy may need more help than you can give him.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You settled an argument for us last year and everyone was satisfied. Now will you please help us again?

A long-time friend of ours was so proud he could hardly stand it. His wife gave birth to their first child—a baby girl. This friend (I'll call him Paul) handed my dad a cigar. Dad took it and said "thanks." Paul then gave a cigar to my uncle. My uncle said, "No thanks, I don't smoke." After that, my dad said, "Neither do I," and returned his cigar.

Paul looked very hurt. I say both men should have kept the cigars whether they smoke or not. Yes or no? —J.

Dear J.: A cigar is a traditional symbol of a new father's joy and should always be accepted.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'll keep it short in the hope you will print my answer in the paper. Can a girl who has been on the Pill for 15 years have normal children when she goes off the Pill? Thanks for your help. — J.K.

Dear J.K.: If you've been on the Pill for 15 years, you started a year before it went on the market, in 1960.

Many doctors take their patients off the Pill after five or six years because the long-term side effects are (as of now) unknown. Some women ask to be taken off the Pill because they begin to gain weight, feel "different," become hypertensive, notice fluid retention or become alarmed by skin blemishes.

A woman who has been on the Pill for several years might have some difficulty getting pregnant, but there is no evidence that the Pill produces abnormal children.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious—lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers's booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 35 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Astrographs

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL
For Monday, Dec. 2

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your attention will be focused upon a serious matter you've been brushing under the rug lately. Action is called for now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) One whose support you need for a plan can be swayed. Point out that it serves his practical intersts as well as your own.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You must let others know exactly what you expect in return for work or service, or you won't be properly compensated.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your management talents will be put to good use. You'll be called upon to help sort out a situation that another has messed up.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You can best assit one you're fond of by letting him know you're behind him. Be sure he's aware he must do certain things on his own.

VIRGO (A,ug. 23-Sept. 22) Appreciable progress can be made now on an old goal that's been stuck on dead center, IF you devote attention to it now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Recognition and reward long overdue for something you've worked very hard at will be coming to you in unexpected spurts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You should see clearer paths now to establish a firmer basis materially. Do something positive with your ideas.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Before you involve yourself in joint ventures, investigate. Be sure your counterpart has as much to offer as you do.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A close companion does not think you'll hold firm to a decision you've made. Better straighten him out now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Any extra fefforts that you now expend in doing something for someone will not go unnoticed. Be willing to be of service.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Take only limited risks in your endeavors today. If it doesn't look like a sure thing, don't bet on it.

Your Birthday Dec. 2

You'll be fortunate this year in dealings with persons who are older and of reliable reputation. A discarded interest will be rejuvenated and prove profitable.

Aaron has the record; (so does his postman)

That famous fellow said to get the most fan mail is none other than homerun hitter Henry Aaron. During 1973, he received 900,000 letters. No other celebrity even came close. Second place mail puller is Dinah Shore. She got 60,000 letters. Johnny Carson ranked third with 52,000. Joe Namath fourth with 33,000. O. J. Simpson fifth with 27,000. Please note, the U. S. Postal Service survey of this weighty matter excluded U.S. presidents and other politicos.

NOT easy to savvy the difference between a million and a billion. But consider this: A million seconds covers about 12 days while a billion seconds stretches approximately 32 years.

WHISTLING

Old-time newspaper reporters believe it's bad luck to whistle in the city room. Understandable. Clatter of typewriters and ring of phones make predictable noises. Writers soon learn to absorb them without breaking concentration. Whistling tones are unpredictable, though. They distract in a most frustrating manner. At a reporter's desk in Pittsburgh once long ago, I innocently whistled up a little tune, ever so softly. Two rewrite men threw me bodily into the hall. One later said the superstition dates back to Biblical days when women whistled in much unconcern as smiths forged the nails for Christ's cross. Oh.

RABBITS

Q. "How many rabbits in a litter, usually?"
A. From six to 18, depends. Breed, age of the mother, time of the year, these make differences.

DEADLY SINS

First, list the seven deadly sins as lust, anger, avarice, pride, envy, sloth and gluttony. Now list them in order of offensiveness, as you see it. The foregoing directions were put to numerous grownups at the University of Aberdeen. What these researchers discovered was a particular interest in the matter of lust. Men rated it at least reprehensible. But women ranked it high on the roster, even above anger, sloth and gluttony. As for the worst of those sins, women said envy, men anger.

DO YOU REALIZE there are 48 different materials in your telephone? And they're imported from 14 different countries, too. That's no record, however. Your car is likely to contain materials from 32 different countries.

Mothers'-eye views of star athletes

By ERMA BOMBECK

Next time you attend an Athletic Awards banquet, catch the look on the faces of the mothers as the accomplishments of their sons and daughters are revealed. By intense concentration, you can sometimes read their thoughts.

"Mark is probably one of the best sprinters I've had in my entire career at So High. Hang onto your hats, people. Mark ron the 100-yard dash in 9.9!"

("Had to be nine days and nine hours. I once asked him to run out the garbage and it sat by the sink until it turned into a bookend.")

"I don't know what the baseball team would do without Charlie. We've had chatterers on the team before who get the guys whipped up, but Charlie is the all-time chatterer. There isn't a moment when he isn't saying something to spark the team"

(Charlie speaks six words to me a week: "When you going to the store?")

"For those of you who don't really understand field events, I want to explain about the shot put. It's a ball weighing eight pounds that was thrown 100 feet by an outstanding athlete here at So . . . Wesley Whip."

("That's funny. Wesley looks like the same boy who delivers my paper and can't heave a six-ounce Saturday edition all the way from his bike to my porch.")

"Wolf-Man Gus will go down in football annals as one of the all-time greats here at So High. In the game with Central, Gus scored the winning touchdown despite a chipped bone in his ankle, a dislocated shoulder and a fever of 103."

("So how come Wolf-Man Gus stays home from school everytime he has his teeth cleaned?")

"I don't suppose anyone has better reflexes in this entire state than our outstanding basketball rebounder, Tim Rim. When the Good Lord passed out coordination, Tim was first in line."

("Tim is 17 years old and I can still only pour him a half glass of milk because that's all I want to clean up.")

"Tennis is a gentleman's game. This year's recipient of the Court Courtesy award is none other than So High's Goodwill Ambassador, Stevie Cool."

("He's come a long way since he tried to break his brother's face last week when he took a record album without asking.")

"The swimming team would never have made it this year without our plucky little manager, Paul Franswarth. Paul picks up those wet towels off the floor, hangs up the suits to dry, and is responsible for putting all the gear back where it belongs."

("Let's go home, Ed. I feel sick.")

Jupiter is a most awesome object

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — The giant planet Jupiter which Pioneer 11 will visit Monday night tantalizes man as the solar system's biggest and most awesome object.

With its baleful eye —the Great Red Spot —and bands of churning salmon and slate gray, Jupiter looks like something out of an Edgar Allan Poe nightmare.

Jupiter's volume is 1,300 times that of earth. It contains two-thirds of all the material in the solar system, except for the sun.

Circling Jupiter are 13 moons, four the size of the planet Mercury, moving in opposite directions.

Guarding the monster are belts of radiation more deadly than a dozen hydrogen bombs. Electric fields can build up charges on the unmanned spacecraft which would arc between components like lightning.

If Pioneer survives these perils, it will loop around Jupiter and pass on for a spacecraft's first journey to Saturn, a hauntingly beautiful planet with three rings.

To reach Jupiter, the fifth planet out from the sun, Pioneer has voyaged 20 months and 620 million miles past Mars and through the Asteroid Belt.

Monday night, Pioneer will zip under the planet's South Pole 26,600 miles above the cloud tops. With a boost from Jupiter's orbital motion, it will hit a speed of 107,000 miles an hour — the highest ever achieved by a man-made object.

The path for this exploit was prepared a year ago by Pioneer 10, the first to encounter Jupiter. Pioneer 10 never got closer than 82,000 miles, but it learned enough to make its sister's visit possible.

The inner radiation belt, for example, forms a doughnut with Jupiter sitting in the hole. Sweeping up through the hole, Pioneer 11 will avoid the widest area of radiation.

Still, it will be subjected to 40,000 times the radiation in earth's belts. The space agency hopes the exposure will be brief enough to keep the radiation from "killing" the instruments.

Pioneer 10 found that Jupiter is composed mainly of liquid hydrogen. It has no solid surface and possibly a dense core of hydrogen solidified. The question of whether Jupiter's atmosphere harbors some form of life remains to be answered.

The planet radiates 2.5 times the amount of heat it receives from the sun. Probably this heat dates back to the birth of the planet 4.5 billion years ago.

The Great Red Spot is a permanent hurricane, 20,000 miles wide, that has been raging for at least 400 years.

The four biggest of Jupiter's moons appear to have atmospheres, and Pioneer 10 found that Callisto, which receives the least radiation, would be the best target for the first manned trip to the Jovian region.

Pioneer 10 data suggested that Jupiter emits huge bursts of electrons throughout the solar system. This theory, if true, means scientists must discard much of what they believed about cosmic rays.

Monday's encounter should add vastly to knowledge not only about the planet, but to the fundamental question of the origin of the solar system.

Then, when Pioneer 11 sails by Saturn Sept. 5, 1979, it might discover the makeup of its three spectacular rings. Now it is theorized that they consist of huge chunks of flying rock.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

AT&T, if it loses suit, can face 'competition'

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sometime within the next decade, assuming justice continues to move with deliberate speed, we should know the outcome of the government's anti-trust suit against American Telephone & Telegraph.....

The charge, as I understand it, is that Am. Tel. & Tel., as it is known on Wall Street, has gotten a monopoly on busy signals.

Theoretically, if the government wins the case, it will foster more competition in telecommunications.

I'm not sure what the Justice Department's concept of competition is, but carried to the ultimate it would mean anyone could walk in off the street and start his own telephone company.

And that, again theoretically, would stimulate research on ways to improve phone service.

Already, several new companies are being formed with a view to developing gimmicks to compete with Am. Tel. & Tel. Among them is Nostalgic Ringie-Dingies, Inc. the guiding genius behind No Rin-Din s Sam Harkenback, executve director of The Future Is Yesterday foundation, a privately endowed "think tank" and research center. "this is our big chance to cash in on some of the breakthroughs we have been making in telecommunications," Harkenback told me during a recent visit to the lab.

He directed my attention to a wooden box upon which was mounted two metal ringie-dingies, a small crank, a mouthpiece and an earpiece. "turn that little crank, pickup the receiver and hold it to your ear," he invited.....

I did as instructed, and to my utter amazement I heard a nasal female voice intone "Number, pleeze?"

Bewildered, I turned to Harkenback and exclaimed, "How in the world does it work?"

"We've got a girl with earphones sitting before a switchboard," he explained proudly. "If you speak into that mouthpiece and tell her what number you are calling, she will connect you with your party."....

I said, "This is fantastic! What do you call the girl who operates the switchboard? 'Operator?'".....

"We're thinking of calling her 'Central,'" Harkenback confided.

I said. "Whatever you call her, it sure beats punching little buttons or poking your finger into dial holes. Is anything else in the works?"

"We haven't perfected this yet," Harkenback replied. "But eventually we hope to make it possible for other people to listen in on your conversations. It will be known as a 'party line.'".....

Shunned by White House

Defeated congressmen seeking jobs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional sources say about 25 GOP congressmen who lost their seats in last month's election are seeking administration jobs but feel the White House is avoiding them.

The sources also predict President Ford will launch a major cabinet shakeup early next year and replace many of the Nixon holdovers with his own appointees.

According to the sources, about 25 defeated Republican congressmen and about 50 of their administrative staff members are out job hunting.

The sources said some of the aides went to the White House recently and tried to see William Walker, head of White House personnel, to discuss possible presidential appointments. "They were shunted off to two of Walker's underlings," the sources said.

"They have an 'I don't give a damn' attitude," said one congressional aide. "The people who carried water for the (GOP) elephant won't be around if Ford wants to win an election in two years. If Ford lets the men experienced in politics go down the drain, there won't be anyone to help him."

One example cited was Rep. Earl F. Landgrebe, R-Ind., who supported both Nixon and Ford but "hasn't been offered anything."

White House Deputy Press Secretary John W. Hushen said, "We are trying to be of assistance where we can, but there is no mandatory placement program for defeated congressmen."

The aides reportedly asked about the "job bank," a highly publicized computer list of administration openings, and were told it had been sent to Nixon in San Clemente, Calif.

The Washington Star-News reported that Sen. Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo., who lost his re-election bid, would be named Health, Education and Welfare secretary, succeeding Caspar P. Weinberger.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said, "I haven't heard anything about it."

Explorer Scouts proving worth as junior lawmen

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Authorities who had charged a young man and woman with the murder of a missing Hillsborough socialite didn't have the body even though they had a pretty good idea where it was.

Adult search teams had probed the hills on the San Francisco Peninsula without success.

Sounds like a case for Sam Spade or Sherlock Holmes. But the sheriff's department turned to the Explorers, the senior arm of the Boy Scouts.

The youths, who range in age from 14 to 18, discovered the body the first day out in the mountains.

Not only that, it wasn't long after that the Explorers found the body of a missing narcotics informer in hilly, wooded terrain near the Pacific Ocean.

"It took a little while to convince the sheriff that we should be used in search and rescue operations," said sheriff's deputy Tim McHenry, the advisor to Explorer Post 810. "We've done that now."

McHenry's post has about 32 boys and girls but he can call on the services of at least 120 other Explorers for the searches. It was members of a post in nearby San Mateo who found the missing woman's body.

"Actually, finding those bodies was the first big break we've had," McHenry said. "We've been involved in ten rescue and search operations since we got into this about two years ago."

Most of the searches are for lost persons and often are called off before they even get started, the deputy said, because the missing person turns up.

"Many times the kids will report to the headquarters and be all set to go when the search is called off," he said. "But they still get a thrill out of getting ready to roll."

McHenry's post specializes in law enforcement work, learning such subjects as traffic control, security, and burglary prevention inspection. Several of their searches have dealt with crimes.

The Scouts combed the countryside looking for a pistol believed thrown from a car and for a shoe missing from a murdered girl.

"The Explorers eat it up because it's for real," McHenry said. "Especially when we call them in the middle of the night."

The post, sponsored by the San Mateo County Sheriff's office, "provides formal classroom instruction at two regular meetings per month as well as demonstrations, practical exercises and field trips covering all phases of law enforcement," Sheriff John R. McDonald said.

"It also provides a positive approach to prevention of juvenile delinquency through a variety of organized activities requiring a high standard of conduct," he said.

Not just any boy or girl can join the Post. They must maintain a "C" average in school and, McHenry said, have "a clean record, be an outstanding citizen and have a reputation above reproach."

Other Explorer posts have become interested in the search activities and several attended seminars sponsored by the sheriff's post.

"We teach emergency services training, including communications, disaster preparedness and first aid as well as search techniques," McHenry said.

The Explorers are putting together a fine batting average and gaining a reputation as sleuths.

"Makes you think of the Hardy boys, doesn't it," the deputy said.

Cairo airport tighten all security measures

CAIRO (UPI) — Security measures at Cairo airport have been tightened following recent incidents including the hijacking last week of a British airliner in Dubai, Cairo newspapers said recently.

The reports said authorities have been ordered "to search all planes without exception before taking off and that the airliners be put under heavy guard while at the airport."

The measures were ordered to guard against such incidents as the one that began in Dubai Nov. 21. Four Palestinians seized a British Airways VC10 while on the ground and forced it to Libya and then Tunis with more than 40 hostages aboard.

The gunmen surrendered after 82 hours when no Arab state agreed to take them and seven prisoners were flown to Tunis from Cairo and Amsterdam. One hostage was murdered during the drama.

Water project leads to Arizona wine grape study

By ARTHUR J. LINGLE

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Pinot noir, gamay, cabernet sauvignon wines produced in the lush, cactus-rich desert land of southern Arizona?

Don't laugh. It could come to pass.

A project designed to find ways to store water in the desert has produced varietal wines its researchers say match or exceed some of its California brothers.

Dr. Gordon Dutt, a soils specialist at the University of Arizona, has been involved for 28 months on a grape growing project on hot desert lands near here.

The original idea was to find a means to collect the water runoff during the rainy season.

"We were looking for ways to get supplemental water," he said. "We were looking at water harvesting methods including using sodium chloride, common table salt, to seal the soils. That work led us to the grape growing project.

"We found the best method of producing water is to remove all vegetation and actually sterilize portions of the ground. The ground is sloped away to crop waterways where we grow the grapes."

The use of salt to seal the soil was an idea traced back to the conquering Romans. Growing grapes in the waters was Dutt's idea because grapes are low, deep water users, have a high value and can be stored, said Dutt.

"I think our early results are indicating that we may well be able to produce types of grapes that do not do well in California, in other words, the Mediterranean types of grapes.

"The soil we have here in southern Arizona is a red, desert soil, high in iron and unusual to be found in a desert climate because it basically is an acid soil where most of the California soils, except in mountain regions, are soils containing basic salts.

"For example, the grapes made to produce chianti are of a set variety in Italy. However, these same grapes do very poorly in California mainly because they do not produce the color and acidity where the growing season is long enough to produce the sugar content. We have every reason to believe that these same grapes will do well here."

Dutt, who keeps in contact with scientists at the University of California at Davis, has had the most success with the red grapes, producing wines of brilliant color and acidity. Although the white varities produced high yields, their acidity, a factor determining the sharpness of a wine, was poor.

"Currently there are no commercial groves of wine grapes in Arizona. The horticulturists have been saying for years here that we can not get enough sugar in our grapes. This is contrary to what is found in California.

"We put 12 varieties into the ground here and some of the generalities that hold in California do not hold here. For instance, the pinot noir grape, the grape of burgundy, in California does well in the Napa Valley and northern, cooler regions of the state. But by the time you get into the Sacramento Valley, you find the pinot noir does not develop color and at best you get a rose.

"We expected to find the same thing here. Much to our surprise we found that grapes such as pinot noir, gamay, cabernet sauvignon develop excellent color. In fact, the wine from the pinot noir is as beautiful a burgundy as you would want to see."

Don't expect to see a rush of wine production coming out of Arizona, however. There are problems, especially the fungus disease, Texas root rot.

"I think one of the reasons we have not had wine grapes here is that in the past people who have tried them have had the grapes destroyed by Texas root rot. I can not believe that the early Spanish missions did not attempt to grow grapes here. I'm sure they did but I'm just as certain that if they ran into Texas root rot they would have been wiped out.

"It we can solve this problem, and we have reason now to believe we can, then we can have a successful wine industry here."

ENVIRONMENT

NEW YORK (UPI) — From the Ditty Bag:

—A team of scientists from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute has concluded that outboard engine exhaust had not harmed water quality in Lake George, a 32-mile-long body of water in northern New York State. The team report said a normal boating concentration of about 20 boats per square mile might be expected on Lake George, and might reach 300 on holiday weekends.

—The Coast Guard reports that boating fatalities for the first seven months of this year are 22 per cent below the number recorded during the same period in 1973. The Coast Guard did not speculate on the cause of the reduction, but industry sources pointed to stepped-up boating education efforts and stricter enforcement of watercraft safety laws. In Ohio, where the educationenforcement program was emphasized this year, only 22 boating fatalities were reported, compared with 72 in 1973.

—A new Wisconsin law prohibits anyone under 10 from operating a motorboat; requires a chaperone for any operator 10 to 12, and requires anyone 12 to 16 to have a state-issued safety certificate to operate alone. The certificate would be issued upon completion of a six-lesson course.

—Traditionally, National Safe Boating Week has been staged each year during the week that includes July 4. But the sponsors now feel that July is too late in the boating season to obtain maximum exposure to their boating safety messages, so they are seeking to change the date to the first week in June. Indications are the Coast Guard wil ask legislation to permit the change.

—Among new regulations being formulated by the Coast Guard is one which would provide that outboard motors must not be able to start unless in neutral gear. It is designed to cut the number of falls overboard caused by sudden starts. The regulation would not affect existing engines.

LAW AND ORDER

No standards for prison terms

Bar Association group wants entire sentencing practices restructured

By JAMES A. KIDNEY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the same courthouse, two men convicted of identical crimes stand before separate judges for sentencing. Both defendants are young, lower-income family men without previous criminal records.

Both black-robed judges are middle-aged men who left prosperous law practices for the bench, thanks to good political connections and impeccable backgrounds.

As judges, both believe they are fair-minded.

Under state law, the crimes for which the two defendants were convicted carry any sentence up to 20 years in prison. There is no other standard.

The first defendant is sentenced to 12 years in prison.

The second is admonished by his judge and gets three years, suspended.

This scene is commonplace in courtrooms across the land, and it troubles the consciences of many jurists and lawyers. Thousands of men and women languish in prison frustrated and angry, knowing that others who committed the same crimes were inexplicably set free.

During trial, defendants enjoy what the Supreme Court calls a "panoply of rights," but once a conviction is handed up, the sentencing process is chaotic.

With almost no standards for a judge's guidance, the severity of a jail term frequently depends on the mood, prejudices and political pressures of the time. The judge's alternatives are many, including probation, a minimum sentence or special rehabilitation program, and are often arbitrary.

Sentencing laws also differ drastically from state to state. A crime might carry a maximum four-year prison term in one state, and a 10-year sentence in a neighboring state.

"The almost wholly unchecked and sweeping powers we give to judges in the fashioning of sentences are terrifying and intolerable for a society that professes devotion to the rule of law," says U.S. District Judge Marvin E. Frankel.

The staff of the American Bar Association's Commission on Correctional Facilities and Services, which has studied the problem, says reform is not enough, that the system must be entirely rebuilt.

A recent federal study of judges in the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals in New York acknowledged that sentencing varied widely among jurists, but offered no immediate solutions.

Reformers find themselves in a quandary because no authority has ever decided what sentencing is supposed to accomplish. Should the sentence reflect the desire to punish? Is rehabilitation the goal? Or are harsh jail terms meant as a deterrent to crime?

Another problem is indeterminate sentencing, best known in California, where open-ended terms are handed down on the theory a felon should be released only when he is reformed. A universally used variation involves the legislature setting only a maximum term, with judges allowed the discretion to apply any lesser sentence.

Indeterminate sentences sounded like fair play and drew wide praise at first, but now are sharply criticized because of the questionable underlying assumption that prisons rehabilitate.

"Jails ruin young men," says Dr. Karl Menninger, Kansas psychiatrist and penologist. "Can't the public grasp this indisputable fact?

"How can a decent prison attempting a rehabilitation program do anything for a boy who comes to it from a jail where he has been raped, battered, vomited and urinated upon, mauled and corrupted by some of the old-timers in the bullpen?"

Among prisoners, sentences with no fixed release date feed hopelessness and despair. Overworked parole boards tend to give cursory attention to each applicant. If a parole request is denied, the inmate often doesn't know why—or what standards he must meet to win his freedom.

"We may not agree on whether a crime deserves three years or 20 years, but we surely can agree that the sentence should not depend on which judge a person gets," he said.

There are many reform proposals. All have demonstrable flaws and few have been put into use. They include:

—Setting a single sentence for each crime, so judges will have no discretion. Critics say this would leave no room to consider mitigating circumstances.

— Sentencing councils in which judges confer with their colleagues in the hope of narrowing the extremes of harshness or leniency. The 2nd Circuit study found the councils did not work as well as expected, and increased court workloads.

—More thorough pre-sentencing reports to give judges greater background information before sentencing. The ABA staff, however, said concise reports would get more attention because most judges base their sentencing on only a few factors.

—Allowing appellate review of criminal sentences in ordinary cases, just as courts allow review of civil damages on appeal. Opponents fear overburdening the courts, but reformers say the loss of individual freedom is no less important than loss of money.

— Establishing computerized data banks for every legal jurisdiction so one judge can see quickly how other judges have treated defendants in similar circumstances.

Partridge said one difficulty with computer banks is deciding how far to go in classifying defendants, such as an auto thief who is an 8th grade dropout with a record of drug addiction. Overclassification would make the system unwieldy.

Whatever the cure, the experts agree the problem goes to the heart of the criminal justice system.

An ABA staff study concluded that because legislatures have failed to decide society's purpose in sentencing, the judges' arbitrary discretion reigns and "equity and justice remain unapplied concepts."

Wyoming settler's legacy: 38th U.S. President

RIVERTON, Wyo. (UPI) — Charles Henry King, a pioneer businessman, was a legend in early Wyoming. His most famous legacy, however, is his grandson, Gerald R. Ford, 38th President of the United States.

Ford's elevation to the Presidency has been the talk of many of the Wyoming oldtimers in Casper, Shoshoni, and Riverton. They still remember his father and his grandfather, possibly the wealthiest man in the state in his day.

Most see a "striking resemblance" in ford's features to the King family, which has now scattered to other sections of the nation.

"President Ford looks exactly like the King family," said State Rep. Edness Kimball Wilkins, of Casper. Mrs. C. H. King was her godmother.

"Even his grandmother had that same square-jawed, forceful look. He also looks a lot like his father."

Ford actually was born Leslie Lynch King Jr. on July 14, 1913, in Omaha, Neb., to Leslie King Sr., and the former Dorothy Gardner, of Harvard, Ill. His father was part of a prominent Wyoming family he never really knew.

Ford's parents were divorced shortly after he was born. His mother then married Gerald R. Ford Sr., a Grand Rapids, Mich., paint store owner. Young Ford didn't know he was not really Gerald Ford's son until he was 17.

Ford, then a high school football star, was working at a local hamburger stand when a stranger approached and said "Leslie, I'm your father."

"I was a little startled to be identified as Leslie," Ford later recalled in an interview. "Then he said, 'Yes, I am your father. I was divorced from your mother. Would you go out to lunch with me?'"

Young Ford went to lunch with his real father, who was enroute to Detroit to pick up a new Lincoln. He turned down an offer to come to Wyoming.

Six years later he did stop in Riverton, Wyo., for three days to see his father on his way to Yellowstone National Park where he had a summer job as a park ranger. He apparently never saw his real father again.

C.H. King, Ford's grandfather, first came to Wyoming in 1885, founding a general store at Ft. Fetterman. He later became well know in Wyoming, founding mercantile stores, banks, freight companies, and even towns, ahead of the growing Chicago and Northwestern Railroad.

"He is ever alert, honest, honorable, conscientious, industrious and at all times awake not only to his own interests, but lending much time and his valued experience in the development of legitimate undertakings," said the "Shoshone Pathfinder," a book advertising the opening of the Shoshone Indian Reservation near Riverton to settlement in 1906.

Most of the old timers who remember Ford's father, Leslie. King Sr., don't want to discuss him. They say he never earned the respect that C. H. King had in Wyoming.

"His (Ford's) granddad will be remembered as one of the most distinguished and honest businessmen that ever lived," said Ernie Yadon, who operates an antique shop in an old King lumberyard in Shoshoni. He has dug into the history of the King family since Ford became president.

"But his son, Leslie King, Ford's father, is described by all the people that knew him—I never knew him—but all that seemed to know him, as nothing but a rich kid's playboy. They just don't have any respect for him or anything. He was strictly a rich kid's son who was a spoiled brat."

An elderly Riverton woman who knew Ford's father said she didn't want to say anything about the man. "I just hope Mr. Ford has inherited from his mother and his grandfather King, so that we will have some help," she said.

Travel tips

How to curtail vacation thefts and losses

By MARIE MATTSON

NEW YORK — Your own conduct laregely assures your security in a hotel. Management does everything it can to provide for the safety of your person and property, but you must cooperate.

I asked Mrs. Jetta Brenner, general manager of the Sheraton Russell, on New York's fashionable East Side, for suggestions helpful to guests. Although the Sheraton Russell is a small European style hotel, Mrs. Brenner also has been associated with big convention-type properties. Here are her recommendations for assuring a pleasurable stay at any reputable hotel:

—Leave your expensive furs and jewels at home—a hotel is not responsible for their safety. They are among items most frequently stolen. If you do bring them and must leave them behind when you go out, ask the desk to have your door double locked. Only one or two executives have this special key. When you're ready to leave, call the desk and someone will come up and lock your door. The staff will not be able to get in, though a professional burglar still could pick the locks.

—If you must bring large amounts of cash or jewelry, put them in the hotel safe. But remember, in the event of loss from a safe, a hotel is liable for only a set amount — $500 in New York. (In North America, rules and regulations posted in your room usually state liabilities. However, in many other parts of the world such information may be lacking.)

—Other high-theft items include cameras, pocket calculators, electric razors and drugs such as sleeping pills and tranquilzers. The safest thing is to carry the items with you, but this may not be convenient. Another alternative to discourage a spur-of-the-moment theft is to put things away rather than leaving them lying in the open.

—Money, credit cards and traveler's checks—if not in the hotel safe—always should be in your pocket or purse—never left in your room. Any hiding place you can find, a thief already knows about.

—Avoid carrying large amounts of money; cash small traveler's checks every day.

—When you're in your room, double lock it by pushing in the button; also, put on the key chain.

—If a workman knocks on your door saying he has come to fix something that you haven't requested, check with his supervisor or the desk before you admit him. Don't open your door, either, to accept a package that you aren't expecting. Muggers and burglars use these ruses to gain entry to your room.

—When you pay or sign, a restaurant check, verify the addition if it's hand totaled. Older women especially tend to sign without looking. Employees aren't necessarily dishonest, but many of them can't add.

—If you've put a meal on your credit card and are adding the tip, write in the exact amount—not just 15 per cent. After you've signed, a dishonest waiter may change a figure to increase his tip.

—When you're having several drinks, check to be sure the correct amount is added to your bill after every serving. A check that is presented only when you're ready to leave may include a few extra rounds.

—Parents should not leave young children alone in hotel rooms. The child's sleeping pattern often changes with travel and in unfamiliar surroundings. Four and five-year-olds can open doors and wander away; the youngster could fall out of a 10-story window; a hotel could catch fire; the child could get sick or start crying. A hotel will provide a baby sitter at a modest rate.

—Reservation computers aren't programmed to handle special requests. Write or phone if you need a wheelchair room, refrigerator, or have other particular requirements.

Hotels exist to provide a home for you away from home. The management wants you to be safe, comfortable and enjoy your stay, so cooperate with them—not the criminal. Then you can enjoy the luxuries and services your hotel offers. In these days of practically no household help, it may be you'll feel quite pampered. Mrs. Brenner says, "The guest is king."

Protests over street naming

BRANTFORD, Ont. (UPI) — A new industrial-area street in this southwestern Ontario town is to be named the Ho Chi Minh Trail —for the bombed but enduring Communist supply line through Laos during the Vietnam War.

But not everyone is happy.

"It seems very out of place," said a local factory manager. "I think some kind of protest is in order."

Nation's resession deepens; market welcomes holiday

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wall Street's worries intensified this week as the nation's recession deepened. The stock market welcomed the Thanksgiving holiday because it could not move decisively despite some favorable developments.

The short week on the New York Stock Exchange wound up with 857 issues higher and 817 lower out of 1,972 traded. The Dow Jones blue-chip industrial average gained 3.36 to 618.66. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 1.07 to 69.97. The NYSE common stock index added 0.54 to 37.13.

Volume totaled only 47,107,570 shares for the four days, compared with 70,207,610 traded last week and 93,819,850 traded during the corresponding fiveday week a year ago. The turnover of 2,403,160 shares Friday was the lighest in more than four months.

Investor nervousness was most apparent Wednesday, a session which traders and investors had begun with thoughts of eating turkey and wound up almost eating crow. Prices had made a respectable gain most of the session in response to a breakthrough in the nationwide coal dispute. But much of this gain was wiped out late in the day when news reached the street Saudi Arabia had raised taxes on foreign companies operating there.

What nervous investors did not realize until too late was Saudi Arabia had announced previously it was going to raise those taxes. As a consequence, the Dow Jones industrial average, the most widely followed indicator of the market, finished the day with a gain of slightly more than two points after being ahead more than 11 with about an hour of trading to go.

When the market resumed trading following Thanksgiving, it was met with the news that trendsetting First National City Bank of New York, the nation's second largest bank, left the prime lending rate it charges key corporate customers at 10 per cent. It marked the first time in eight weeks Citibank did not cut the rate, which had reached a historic high of 12 per cent in July. On Monday First National Bank of Chicago, another trendsetter, might have foreshadowed Citibank's action when it left its prime rate at 10¼ per cent. High interest rates have hung like a dark cloud over Wall Street for months.

Wall Street has been greatly concerned about ripple effects of the nationwide coal strike— which began Nov. 12—and the plight of the automobile industry, which together have added to what some analysts have said is the worst recession since World War II.

The Commerce Department's composite index of economic indicators slumped for the third consecutive month in October, falling 1.3 per cent. It marked the first time since early 1970 the index has skidded three consecutive months. Further, the revised 3.3 per cent September decline was the worst on record.

Wall Street was heartened by the decision of the United Mine Workers bargaining council late Tuesday to send a new three-year contract to the membership for a ratifcation vote, scheduled Monday. But the market was fearful the miners would reject the new pact.

Use gold to buy oil, expert says

Lord Maynard Keynes, an economist but no poet, was less dazzled. He called gold a "barbarous relic."

The debate over whether gold should have a permanent and central role in the affairs of man has advanced little beyond these two basic arguments. Nor is it likely to be resolved on Jan. 1, when Americans —for the first time since 1933 —will be able to buy and hold gold legally.

The basic dispute is this:

The United States, among others, considers gold a metal that looks nice in jewelry and is useful as an efficient conductor of electricity, but unsuitable as a currency. In this view, it is silly, outmoded and dangerous to base the international money system on a yellow metal whose supply is controlled by the only big producers —Russia and South Africa —and whose value is so much based on emotion. It is time, in short, that mankind advanced beyond such ancient coinage.

People who argue like this are called "anti gold nuts."

The other side has people called "gold bugs" and is represented by France, several other Europeans nations and, not surprisingly, Russia and South Africa. They admit the American logic but say recent history and common sense are in their corner.

The gold bugs say gold through the years has been a hedge against inflation. In high inflationary times, like now, people would rather hold gold than money.

Investors like gold, which is why the current free market price of about $190 per ounce is more than quadruple the unrealistic fixed price of $42.22. Arabs like gold, which makes it likely that gold and the oil crisis will thrive together.

The gold bugs say no matter what sophisticated arguments are ranged against it, it would be silly to demonetize a metal that is so valuable to so many.

George Bernard Shaw said it: "You have to choose between trusting to the natural stability of gold and the honesty and intelligence of members of the government. And with due respect for these gentlemen, I would advise you, as long as the capitalistic system lasts, to vote for gold."

There are about 1.2 billion ounces of gold in official vaults now, worth about $50 billion at the official price. Interestingly enough, that is about what the western world will pay for oil this year. But no nation in its right mind would sell its gold at the low fixed rate.

But if the legal price was advanced to the free market price, the nations would have more than $200 billion in gold — enough to pay oil bills for several years. For nations hit by the oil crisis, all that gold is beginning to glitter.

That is why finance ministers of the main industrial nations agreed last sumer gold could be used as collateral for international loans at roughly free market prices. Now there is European pressure on the United States to free the price of gold altogether, or at least raise it to $125 or so. The Europeans argue gold that can be sold only at the official price is, in fact, frozen, because no one will sell it at that price. It is ridiculous, they say, to freeze all that gold when it could be used to bail out nations in hock to the oil producers.

BankAmericard, Master Charge

Credit cards haven't realized potential

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sixty million Americans who hold bank credit cards used them in about $13 billion worth of transactions in the firt nine months of this year.

The big systems, of course, are Master Charge and BankAmericard, which did about 99 per cent of total bank card volume.

"Surprising as it will seem to some, the bank card has barely started to realize its full potential use," says John J. Reynolds, president of Interbank Card Association, which licenses Master Charge to banks.

"To understand what I mean, perhaps we should stop calling bank cards credit cards because they are becoming a cash instrument as well as a charge instrument," Reynolds said. "For example, Master Charge and BankAmericard were used instead of checks or drafts to draw out almost $1.5 billion in cash from 12,000 American banks in the first nine months of this year. The cash advances averaged a little over $100 in the case of Master Charge. These sums were withdrawn at all hours of the day or night and in many foreign countries as well as in the United States."

It seems likely bank cards will be used in the years ahead to replace currency, checks, drafts and some other instruments of daily consumer banking, not just to charge merchandise or travel and entertainment expenses to credit accounts.

Conceivably, the bank card could be used to borrow money much in the way standby credit checks are used now. And they might be used to transfer money from one bank to another for convenience or from one account to another.

"The savings in time by use of bank charge cards instead of traditional instruments already have proved themselves to a substantial degree," Reynolds said, "and time often is money."

Time—and money—are saved not only by the cardholder but by the merchant, hotel, airline or other enterprise the cardholder patronizes and by the bank. The system reduces bookkeeping expense for all. Of course, there can be bugs but Reynolds said these tend increasingly to be ironed out. The elimination or reduction of the bouncing check hazard by the combination of the bank card and instantaneous electronic credit verification and signature validation alone is a huge plus, he said.

Proliferation of the use of bank cards has been astonishing since Diners Club first introduced the credit card in the early 1950s' to pay for travel and entertainment. While payment for merchandise and services at retail establishments still is the biggest volume, bank cards now are used for these purposes—hardly dreamed of when they first were issued:

—To pay taxes.

—To pay traffic fines.

—To pay medical, dental and hospital bills over and above what Blue Cross, Blue Shield, Medicare and other insurance programs pay.

—To pay college tuition.

—To make donations to political parties and candidates or to charities and church, to pay for home and automobile repairs.

—To purchase foreign currencies while traveling abroad.

—To get cash in an emergency anywhere in the United States.

Little strokes prevented with use of asprin

DALLAS (UPI) — Aspirin apparently reduces the number of "little strokes" in elderly patients although it has no effect on death rates, several doctors said Monday.

The problem, called transient ischemic attacks, disappears completely without treatment in one-third of the patients, another one-third continue to have them with no change and another third progress to severe strokes, the doctors said.

Dr. William K. Hass of the New York University Medical Center said the attacks are simply a "limping brain," in which blood flow is cut off momentarily to areas of the brain.

The patient will have dizziness, numbness, clumsiness or confusion of speech or sight, Hass said at the American Heart Association Conference.

However, many of the persons who experience the problems take aspirin, which seems to relieve the recurrence, said Dr. H.J. Barnett of the Western Ontario School of Medicine in London, Ont.

Barnett said aspirin slows blood coagulation and reduces blood clot obstructions which prevent the flow to the brain and thus causes the attacks. A severe stroke is from major stoppage of blood to the brain.

He said, however, long-acting aspirin does not affect coagulation because it is released through the lower gastrointestinal tract and is altered.

"We know it seems to have some affect on the attacks, but regardless it seems to have no affect on preserving life," he said.

At another symposium at the four-day conference, a panel of doctors said that a surgical bypass of diseased heart vessels seems to prolong life.

The doctors said, though, that studies have not proven the surgery affects longevity, although it eases the patient's pain.

"Coronarial bypass has caused more excitement in the cardiovascular field than anything else in the last decade," said Dr. J. David Bristow of the University of Oregon Medical School in Portland.

Obstructions in one or more of the three main heart vessels are bypassed by implanting part of the sapphenous vein from the leg around the diseased part of the coronary vessel.

Dr. W. Dudley Johnson of the Medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee said only 22 per cent of persons with the problem who do not have surgery survive five years, but 80 per cent of those who have surgery survive that long.

NO BABY SITTER (left) is needed by Mrs. Robin VanderWegen when she goes to work as a receptionist bookkeeper at an Aberdeen, Wash., doctor's office. She takes son Eric, 2-months, with her and parks him on her desk. Doctor's wife (right) proposed the idea and doctor agreed.

Power of the press

Heart attacks reduced through media campaign

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Media campaigns can be effective in convincing the public to change habits which increase the risk of heart attacks, a Stanford University doctor reported today.

Dr. William Haskell of the Stanford Heart Disease Prevention Program said a three-year study was conducted in the California communities of Gilroy, Watsonville and Tracy.

Media campaigns against smoking, poor diets and a lack of exercise were used in Watsonville and Gilroy while none was employed in Tracy. Selected persons were studied in each town for the survey.

Haskell, who detailed his study before the American Heart Association in Dallas, said that in the first year there was a 2.5 per cent reduction in the cholesterol level of those in Watsonville. In Gilroy there was a .6 per cent increase and in Tracy a hike of 3.1 per cent.

Haskell said blood pressure of participants in Watsonville was reduced by 1.6 per cent and by 2.7 per cent in Gilroy compared to an increase of four per cent for those surveyed in Tracy.

Respondents in Watsonville reported that they smoked 31 per cent less cigarettes after one year. Gilroy subjects reported a nine per cent reduction in smoking while Tracy reported a four per cent reduction.

"Preliminary results are encouraging," the physician said. "The statistics are significant showing that substantive changes can be effected by an intensive media and instructional campaign.

"But the big question is if these figures can be maintained through the following years of the study. We are about two-thirds of the way through the second evaluation period, and it looks like we are moving in the desired direction."

Leaves lucrative law practice for salvation Army post in Oregon

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — Alfred Newbould, once the $33,000 a year city attorney for Seattle, is the new $150 a month commander of the Salem Salvation Army unit.

Newbould, 46, said he decided to leave the comfortable life of an attorney for "the more challenging and rewarding job of helping mankind with spiritual and social needs."

He said the new post is giving him "total enjoyment."

Salvation Army officials said he was the first non-officer to command a Salvation Army unit.

Newbould, once president of the Natlcnal Institute of Municipal Law Officers and a friend of Nixon aide John Ehrlichman, said the Watergate scandals played a part in his decision to join the Salvation Army.

Seek cancer link with chlorinated water

By RICK VAN SANT

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Quietly but quickly, a nationwide test of public drinking water sources has begun due to reports linking chlorine —the popular water purifier —to cancer.

The study has become the highest priority if the Environmental Protection Agency's 100person "National Environmental Research Center" here.

"We hope to have some significant findings to report in 1975," says Gordon Robeck, director of the center's water supply research laboratory.

It was Robeck's studies of Cincinnati and New Orleans drinking water — chlorinized Ohio and Mississippi River water —that triggered the full scale survey.

Robeck found that when chlorine reacted with natural and industrial organic material in the water it produced chloroform and other similar by-products.

"Chloroform is the relationship to cancer," says Robeck. "Chloroform administered to mice has developed live tumors in a high percentage of the animals."

From campus anarchy to Proposition 1

GOVERNOR RONALD REAGAN

By CARL INGRAM

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — "Thanks for keeping California free of scandal," shouted a blond youth as university students swarmed around Gov. Ronald Reagan, shaking his hand, seeking an autograph and wishing him well.

The friendly mob scene one recent night at the Davis campus of the University of California contrasted dramatically with the tumultuous campus appearances Reagan made eight and even four years ago when many students regarded him as "Public Enemy No. 1."

In those days, Reagan was spat at, cursed, showered with obscenities and threatened. Concern for the governor's personal safety so intensified that he quit visiting UC campuses in 1970.

The abrupt firing of UC President Clark Kerr, imposition of student tuition, "People's Park" at Berkeley, the governor's hawkish stand on the Vietnam War and a myriad of other issues all helped make Reagan the most unpopular man on campus.

But the other night, as Reagan entered the final few weeks of his second term, nobody in the audience of 1,200 students called him "pig" and nobody tried to drown him out as he easily fielded questions for more than an hour.

If the students of 1974 are different than their older brothers and sisters of the 1960s, so is a more mellow Reagan. No one hears this 1966 Reagan campaign line anymore:

"Preservation of free speech does not justify letting beatniks, and advocates of sexual orgies, drug usage and filthy speech disrupt the academic community and interfere with our universities' purposes."

The 63-year-old chief executive, whose full head of brown hair still betrays no gray, was obviously pleased at his reception by the students, and in an interview with UPI in his limousine he casually discussed the successes and disappointments of his two terms.

He recalled the campus upheavals of the sixties when there were "no economic problems to speak of, no inflation. There was a period when it was like a warm bath, it feels good."

As the big sedan swept along the freeway tailed by an always present security "chase" car, the governor characterized the students of 1974 as "seeing the realities of life. They're concerned about inflation and getting jobs."

No, he said, he didn't believe his often controversial tenure will leave an indelible impression on California which could never be erased, but he called the 1971 overhaul of welfare his "most successful and dramatic" achievement.

Reagan said he got about 70 per cent of what he wanted from the Democratic-controlled legislature on welfare "but it was an important 70 per cent and the success has been well worth only that much."

But he said he was concerned that the combination of a heavily Democratic legislature and a new Democratic governor, Edmund G. "Jerry" Brown Jr., would undo some welfare revisions such as his pet "work or else" program.

"Even in the face of the welfare success, the die-hards among them have already gotten bills passed to cancel out the things they (legislators) gave in on during the negotiations," he said, "I had to veto them."

"I think they'll try again," he added. "I imagine they're thinking right now, 'Well, you know, the ballgame is going our way.'"

The governor called voter rejection last year of his tax limitation plan the "greatest disappointment" of his eight years and remains convinced that the opposition shot the proposed down with "lies" and "dishonesty" by arguing that it would increase local taxes.

"If I had Prop. 1 do over again, I'd settle for less, Reagan said, explaining that instead of tying taxation and spending to a gradually declining percentage of personal income he would merely freeze the percentage of taxes at what the state now takes from Californians.

In this way, he reasoned, the opposition would be put in the position of telling the voters. "Yes, we want to take in the future a higher percentage from you than we are presently taking."

Reagan also reflected on mental health, one of the most emotional and long-simmering controversies of his administration. He conceded that from a public relations standpoint the announcement early in 1967 that state hospitals would be closed was a disaster.

"The hasy announcement of it was what was wrong," he said.

The announcement shortly after he took office rocked California like a bombshell, and the shock waves still persist almost eight years later. It was only last year that the administration finally abandoned its long-range proposal to take the state entirely out of the hospital business by 1982.

The gradual "phase-out" of hospitals for the mentally ill and mentally retarded was envisioned as more and more community-based care and treatment facilities were established with the state paying 90 per cent of the cost. Medical authorities generally agreed that treatment closer to home was superior to that in an impersonal "warehouse" institution far away.

When Reagan took office, there were 15 hospitals caring for 35,000 patients. Currently, there are 11 hospitals and about 16,000 patients, most of them mentally retarded.

Reagan insisted that the announcement to close the hospitals was widely interpreted as another economy move by his "squeeze, cut and trim" administration.

"The truth is we were going to spend a helluva lot more.

Smelly Russian cigarette consumption sets record

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union will produce 373 billion cigarettes this year, which adds up to more than four cigarettes a day for every man, woman and child.

Anyone who has been to a public place in the Soviet Union and has been overwhelmed by the pungent smell of Soviet tobacco would agree that this is a land of heavy smokers.

Just how heavy has been detailed by the satire magazine Krokodil. The magazine recently dedicated a whole issue to smoking and called it "Krokodil Gives a Light."

Among the articles was an interview with Vladimir A. Zholostov, head of Glavtabak, the centralized state tobacco concern.

Zholostov said cigarette production has increased 15.5 per cent since 1970 to reach the 1974 figure of 373 billion, including normal cigarettes and Papirosi, a popular Russian product that is half cardboard filter and half tobacco.

It does not include cigars, pipe tobacco, or imported cigarettes.

Smoking is most prevalent in Estonia, where per capita consumption is 2,169 cigarettes a year, almost six cigarettes a day for every inhabitant.

"When you consider that even babies are taken into account, can you imagine how many cigarettes the actual smokers smoke?" Krokodil asked.

The figures for Estonia don't tell the whole picture since most pipe tobacco also goes to Estonia and other Baltic republics. Zholostov said Glavtabak doesn't widely distribute pipe tobacco in the rest of the nation because it is presumed that only retired Baltic sailors smoke pipes.

The Soviets who smoke least are found in Tadjikistan in central Asia where per capita cigarette consumption is 567 a year, or one and a half a day. But Tadjikistan has another vice—chewing hashish.

Zholostov said most Soviets now smoke relatively mild tobacco, although few Westerners would agree. But there is still some demand for a crude kind of tobacco called Makhorka.

In more austere times, people used to wrap this in strips torn from the Communist party newspaper Pravda to make a super-cigarette known as a "Goat's Leg." Now Makhorka is smoked mostly by Siberian lumberjacks, Krokodil said, but some young people smoke it to look tough.

"A Makhorka cigarette in comparison to a Philip Morris," the magazine said, "is like a suit of working clothes compared to a Dior nightgown."

The Soviet Union has no antismoking campaign. Krokodil said smoking among children is widespread and schools make no attempt to stop it.

"Many playwrights make their heroes put a cigarette in their mouths to convey the impression of thought," Krokodil said, and people naturally emulate this.

Krokodil said so much time is wasted in special smoking rooms in offices and factories that some managers allow their employes to smoke at work.

One trouble about the growing amount of smoking is that it is becoming increasingly difficult to escape the tobacco fumes.

One reader, a convinced atheist until now, told Krokodil he is considering taking up churchgoing because it is the only place where people observe a no-smoking rule.

Krokodil said attempts to introduce low-nicotine cigarettes didn't work, perhaps because people smoked even more to compensate for the lack of their favorite poison.

Krokodil didn't give any figures for the rate of lung cancer in the Soviet Union. Such statistics are not usually reported here.

This is not a matter that concerns Glavtabak, which is responsible only for seeing that tobacco production goes up in each successive five-year plan. But it seems that director Zholostov doesn't have a good company spirit. He gave up smoking 16 years ago.

POTPOURRI

Tough jungle school

NAHA, Okinawa (UPI) — Edging along a path in a thick tropical forest, Marine Capt. Oliver L. North stepped on a boobytrap and set off a mine.

Two years ago in Vietnam, that would have been fatal. Today on Okinawa instead of an explosion there was only a whining noise, and the mine sprayed North's combat uniform with red liquid that will wash out in the laundry.

The mistake by North, 31, of Stafford, Va., was intentional. He is chief teacher in a stern school on Okinawa where young Marines are taught the jungle warfare lessons the corps learned in Vietnam.

"They're up here to learn how to live in the bush, survive and fight a war," said Col. William J. Davis, of Columbia, Md., a Marine battalion commander.

North's classroom is a 21,000-acre stretch of rugged mountain country covered with lush underbrush and trees that cut off the sun. Besides the Marines, its inhabitants include wild pigs and Oknawa's venomous habu snake, whose bite is as deadly as that of a cobra.

Troop-carrying helicopters hover over the trees, discharging Marines trained to slide down 60 foot cables in a few seconds, braking themselves to a stop with gloved hands three times on the way down.

Marines learn how to survive in the jungle on diets of snake, salamander, and grass if necessary. They learn to scale cliffs and haul themselves across 250-foot canyons by a hastily erected cable.

Finally, they prowl the forest in search of an enemy whom North always refers to as "the aggressors."

Antique wise

Miniature antique dealer

Q: My hobby is reproducing antiques in miniature, made by John Goddard, famous American cabinetmaker. He worked in Newport, Rhode Island, during the latter half of the 18th century.

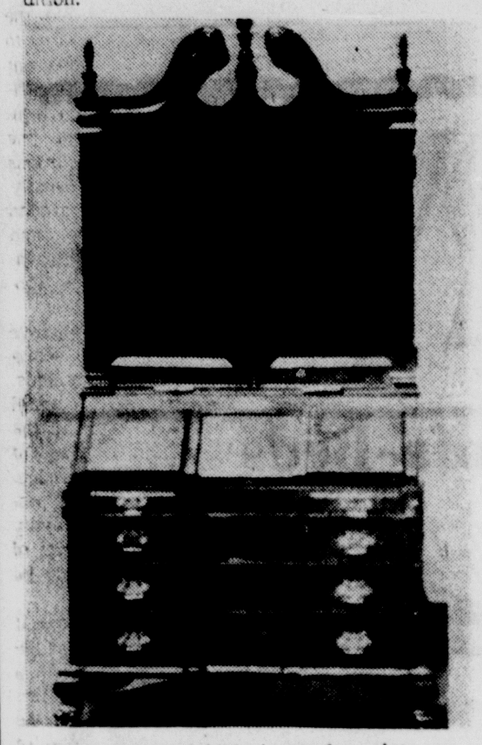
A: From $5,000 up, depending upon condition.



Q: This beautiful 6-inch cut glass plate was made by Hawkes. When held in a certain position, their fleur di lis mark and name is plainly visible. Your help in identifying the name of the pattern and when it was made would be helpful. I would also like to know how valuable the plate is. Mrs. F.H.

A: If perfect, your plate is worth around $150. The pattern appears to be "Festoon," patented March 9, 1896, by T.G. Hawkes.

Q: I have a set of six silver souvenir teaspoons given bo me by my mother-in-law shortly after I was married in 1972. She had purchased the spoons a number of years earlier, from a maple syrup company. The handle of each spoon is shaped like a log cabin, and printed across the roof are the words "Towle's Log Cabin." I am wondering if these spoons have any value? K.J.

A: Your popular advertising collectibles are worth around $15 each, if in good condition.

Q: I have a flower vase that must be about 90 years old. It is a blown glass vase, made similar to thermos bottles — meaning that there is an inner layer which is gold (interior of vase), while the outer layer is silver. The surface is hand-decorated with a red-breasted bird and much vegetation. This base is 12 inches high, with a 4-inch pedestal base that flares out. The vase is perfect. I would appreciate any information on this type of glass, from what period does it date, and its approximate value. G.S.S.

A: You have a Mercury glass vase, and examples like you have described sell from $20-$35. This type ware has been produced since the 1850s, in parts of Europe as well as in England, where Varnish & Company produced extremely fine examples.

Q: We were recently given an unusual silver wine bottle holder, that originally belonged to my husband's great-grandfather. We were told that it is over 100 years old, and was listed as an antique by appraisers, and valued at $500.

This footed silver piece stands 21 inches high, and has six openings, including space for wine glasses.

The only mark we have found on this piece is an embossed round rope mark approximately one inch in diameter, on which appears to be an Indian surrounded by a bow, arrow and plumage. Can you tell us anything more about this fine piece of silver? M.L.N.

A: You have a portable silverplated wine bottle holder, dating from the third quarter the the last century. The mark you have described was used by Roswell Gleason & Sons of Dorchester, Massachusetts. Gleason was first listed as a pewterer about 1830, and was noted for producing fine pewter as well as britannia around the mid-1800s. After 1850, the firm produced mostly silver-plated pieces, until the business closed in 1871.

Q: One of the most unusual items we found among my grandmother's kitchen items was a large white granitware bowl, approximately 8 inches high, and 18 inches in diameter. The outside is colorfully decorated with clusters of purple grapes and green leaves, and the words "WALKER'S GRAPE JUICE." This bowl is in perfect condition, and really quite attractive. We would like to know what such a large piece of granitware might sell for. Could it be an advertising piece? T.H.

A: Yes, and the value of your bowl is around $75.

Q: I would like very much to know about these vases. Both are marked — incised on the base — Dickensware Weller. These vases are 11½ inches high and 4½ inches at the base. Please give me any information possible, along with an estimate of their present value. L.H.

A: If perfect, your vases are worth about $225 each.

Charles Babcock Upjohn created the popular Dickens line for Samuel A. Weller during the late years of the last century. At that point in time, the Doulton Company, Lambeth, England, were producing a line of figurines depicting characters from Charles Dickens' works, and a character named Sam Weller was included. When Weller learned of this, he remarked that if Dickens could create a character named "Sam Weller," he could name a line after him, hence the name Dickensware.

Your vases belong to the second Dickensware line, much sought after by collectors today. Those pieces marked "Upjohn" are doubly treasured. Examples in this group are decorated by the graffito method, having an incised decoration, with glazes varying from high gloss to a soft matte finish.

Q: I have four very, very old handmade clothespins, each about 5½ to 6 inches long. These antiques have been handed down to us, and no one seems to have any idea what they might be worth. I am certain they must have some antique value. Can you help us? Mrs. A.I.

A: Early, handmade clothespins like you describe are of much interest to collectors of woodenware, and they usually sell from $10-$14.

Q: We have an old family heirloom that a neighbor is interested in buying. This is what you call a blue sponge decorated pitcher, 10 inches tall, with a four-inch white band around the center. The only decoration on this area is an embossed blue sponge flower, on each side. This pitcher is perfect as far as we can determine. W.I.E.

By Steve Ellingson

No need to hide this dining table away when not in use. It makes up into a handsome coffee table 47" long by 24" wide. The secret to its versatility is the hinged leg.

When you turn the long dining table legs down, the coffee table legs are automatically raised to support the ends. As a dining table, it's over five feet long . . . perfect for a sit-down dinner or buffet. When dinner is over, just tuck the legs under and convert it to a coffee table again.

To obtain the full-size Hi-Lo Table pattern No. 314, send $1.00 (add 25c per pattern for airmail delivery) by cash, check or money order to: Steve Ellingson, Pomona Progress-Bulletin Pattern Dept., P. O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, California 91409.

Solar heating for Pacific Northwest?

For the past few years, Piper, 42, a control valve manufacturer turned building contractor, has been installing solar energy systems in Southern California apartments. Now, he is installing a system in a home under construction here, where four seasons should give it a sterner test.

Piper's system, which he calls solar hydronics, basically involves using the sun's untapped energy supply as the basis for both space and water heating. He says its use can cut energy consumption and cost by as much as 80 per cent.

The system involves passing water through one or a number of solar panels capable of heating water to up to 180 degrees.

The hot water is then passed through a pipe system to a storage tank much like a conventional hot water tank.

From the tank, water can be drawn off for use in the family shower, for washing clothes and dishes and for general tap use.

The hot water serves as the core of the space heating system as well, passing through a second network of pipes to centrally located heat exchange coils in joists between floors.

Coupled with each coil is a blower that draws the cool air from the room, over the coil heated by the water, and back into the room as hot air.

"Water heating systems go back to the age of the Greeks," Piper says. "And, interestingly enough, they were heating water 3,000 years ago with solar energy. Those systems worked very well."

Piper estimates the cost of installing his system in a new home at about $1,600, versus about $1,000 to $1,200 for a conventional unit.

Piper says it will pay for itself the first winter of use.

While his system has a backup gas or electric heating unit to kick on when the solar panels are not generating enough heat, Piper says on the average, the panels will heat water more often than not.

"The rule of thumb is that as long as you see a shadow, you're collecting solar energy and heating water," he adds.

Piper doesn't pass his solar hydronic system off as the panacea of the nation's energy woes, but says it is a reasonable alternative to total dependence on electricity or natural gas—both of which are energy-wasting systems.

"It personally irritates me when I see the federal government telling people to turn down their thermostats to save a few degrees," he said.

"Is it the people's fault that they live in an energy-wasting house? No. And I consider this to be one of the areas of fraud on the American public—that they have no other choice."

Oil exploration

Fear major water damage in Florida

ASTOR PARK, Fla. (UPI) — Conservationists fear Amoco oil drillers will be "playing Russian roulette" with a vital underground fresh water supply in January when they start probing the pristine Ocala National Forest.

Furthermore, an angry group called the Florida Coalition to Protect the Ocala Forest charges that the oil company paid only 50 cents an acre for mineral rights on 349,090 acres of the public land, less than half of what it pays to drill on private land.

The company doesn't deny that it gets a bargain rate to explore for oil on lands controlled by the Department of the Interior under mineral leasing laws written in 1920 and 1947.

"Whether people like it or not —and I'm not saying it's the best way the government ought to lease acreage —it's the law and it's the way it's done throughout the United States," said Wayne A. Blankenship, director of land acquisition for Amoco Production Co., headquartered in New Orleans.

But Blankenship takes exception to charges by conservationist Lyman E. Rogers that Amoco is "playing blind man's buff and Russian roulette" by drilling into the Florida aquifer, a unique system of underground streams and caverns, which supplies much of the state's fresh water.

Rogers, who organized the coalition to try in vain to block the drilling, points out that the Interior Department's own "Draft Environmental Statement" on the project states, "Hydrocarbons (gas or oil) are not usually associated with fresh ground water environmests, and hence there is scant observational literature on the subject."

While the statement says the chance of a well casing rupturing is remote, it adds, "Irrespective of how small the chance of occurrence, the possibility of leakage of hydrocarbons from a producing well, or a well under production test, cannot be totally ruled out, and the impact of such an occurrence could be significant."

"Their statement makes it very clear that they have never tried to drill for oil in a water recharge area of this nature," Rogers said. "So they don't know what they're doing."

Not so, says Blankenship, who has helped Amoco obtain mineral rights to some 1.4 million acres in Florida, including 95 per cent of the Ocala forest. He said scores of wells have been drilled through the Florida aquifer in the past 50 years.

"We drilled one ourselves in Lake County, about 40 miles south of the forest, a little over a year ago," Blankenship said. "We went down to 5,777 feet. It was a dry hole, but we didn't have any unforeseen problems."

Interior Secretary Rogers Morton placed a moratorium on drilling in the Ocala forest for three years, but it was lifted last summer in the wake of the energy crisis.

There will be no more public hearings and Amoco is expected to routinely obtain its final permits from the U.S. Geological Survey and Florida's Department of Natural Resources.

Then on Jan. 5, after the hunting season closes in the forest, a test well will be drilled 4,500 feet deep on a site the size of two football fields which will be cleared from an area of dense sand pines, scrub oaks and palmetto a short distance from Pats Island, the setting for Marjorie Kinnan Rawling's Pulitzer Prize-winning story, "The Yearling."

Urge aerosol probe of atmospheric pollution

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Academy of Sciences has ordered an investigation into the possibility that gases from household aerosol cans may damage the atmosphere's ozone layer that protects us from solar radiaton.

It was learned Wednesday that the academy's governing body acted last Saturday on the recommendation of a special five-member panel of scientists who agreed the matter poses a serious threat to the environment and warrants immediate attention.

Donald M. Hunten, chairman of the panel, said he believes the investigation by the National Research Council's Climatic Impact Committee probably will lead to a recommendation for restrictions on manufacture of the propellant gases known as fluorocarbons.

"My personal feelings are it really is serious and drastic action is going to be necessary within a year or two to protect the ozone layer unless there is some completely new factor about the chemistry of the stratosphere that no one has thought of yet," he said in a telephone interview from his office at the Kitt Peak National Observatory in Tucson, Ariz.

The concern is that the gases used in hair sprays, deodorants, insecticides and the like are building up in the upper atmosphere where they can destroy much of the ozone layer. The fluorocarbons, most commonly known commercially as Freon, are harmless in themselves. But their reaction with sunlight releases chlorine atoms, which in turn break down ozone molecules.

It is the ozone, a form of oxygen concentrated 15 to 30 miles high, that screens out nearly all of the high intensity ultraviolet radiation from the sun. It has been estimated that a 5 per cent reduction in ozone would increase the incidene of skin cancer in the United States by anywhere from 8,000 to tens of thousands of cases a year.

How to get along with our skunks

The booklet covers many facts about skunks, including how to feed pet skunks and how to get rid of the stubborn stench.

Zoologist W. Thomas Edmonds Jr., who wrote the booklet, lists 15 proven odor removers and disguisers. He said the two most effective remedies are spraying tomato juice or vinegar on the victim.

Edmonds says if skunk musk gets in your eyes, a wash with lukewarm water followed by boric acid will soothe the burning, and tears also act as a cleanser.

Publication was timed to coincide with the approach of winter, when skunks seek warm dens for the cold months which too often turn out to be under porches and in garages or basements.

"There is no need for alarm should one happen to cross paths with a skunk since it will usually go on about its business and eventually wander off," Edmonds wrote.

"It may be approached if one's movements are very slow and deliberate.

Dreary Christmas in store for Chrysler

DETROIT (UPI) — Whether it's sloppy management as the United Auto Workers union charges, or just bad luck, Chrysler Corp. executives have pushed the panic button harder than any of their competitors in the beleagered auto industry.

Chrysler Chairman Lynn A. Townsend says it will be business as usual in December with no companywide shutdown. But nearly 64 per cent of the men and women who build Chrysler's cars won't be on the job in the month before Christmas.

Faced with an early November sales report that showed a 34 per cent drop from last year's already depressed levels and a stock of unsold cars that could last four months, Chrysler executives began wielding a heavy ax Tuesday.

Compared to General motors' layoffs just before Christmas last year when 137,000 workers were idled in one short shutdown, Chrysler's numbers aren't that large —another 43,900 workers added to 26,600 already idled.

For a company with 110,000 hourly workers, idling 64 per cent of the work force in the month before Christmas is dramatic.

Chrysler won't say how many of its 39,800 salaried workers have been trimmed or will be let go in the belt-tightening.

Chrysler is the No. 3 automaker and, with just under 14 per cent of the new car market so far this year, it has no room for bad guesses.

Top management apparently didn't read the signals right and built too many small cars at a time when the swing was back to the larger models.

Chrysler has 365,000 cars, part of an industry backlog of 1.65 million cars, or an 80-day supply. But the Chrysler stockpile is overweighted in small cars, with enough Valiants on hand to last more than 130 days.

At this time last year, the automakers were pushing their small car plants to capacity and making plans to convert large car plants to building small models.

Then the market turned around in the summer, and small cars are a drag on the market.

During the depths of the energy crisis-induced sales slump last winter, when 113,000 auto workers were on indefinite layoffs and a like number on shorter periods of idleness, Chrysler management was criticized for not having a subcompact to rival the Vega or Pinto.

One executive wryly admitted: "No matter what we do, sometimes you just can't seem to win."

Although he's an adversary, UAW Vice President Douglas A. Fraser usually restrains his comments on the business acumen of Chrysler management. But within minutes of Chrysler's announcement of new layoffs Tuesday, Fraser called top management incompetent.

Fraser says Chrysler has been producing cars at 136 per cent of sales, resulting in a huge stockpile, while Ford has produced only 102 per cent of sales.

"That is really sloppy management," Fraser said. "It's irresponsible. It's picking the workers' pockets."

Fraser said he asked Chrysler executives why they hadn't scheduled layoffs one or two weeks at a time like the other auto companies. The question went unanswered, he said.

With the new model year off to the poorest start in a decade, top Chrysler and UAW executives have banded together to demand action from Washington.

The union has taken up the automaker's pleas for relief from future safety and emission standards.

Chrysler President John Riccardo went to Washington Tuesday, calling for government to help restore consumer confidence so people will buy cars, and easing of credit so they can afford the higher prices.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock warns that the plight of the auto industry may spread quicker than some economists believe.

"Unless something is quickly done to turn around the basic industry, the accumulating effect of what is happening in autos will drag this country not simply to a recession but down to the reaches of a depression," Woodcock said.

Russians reaffirm desire to restore Albanian ties

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union has reaffirmed its readiness to restore normal relations with Albania, China's staunchest ally in Europe.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda said the offer was made in greetings to the tiny Balkan nation on the occasion of Saturday's 30th anniversary of Communist rule in the country.

The newspaper quoted the message as saying "restoration of friendship and equal cooperation between the Soviet and Albanian peoples would meet the interests of the two countries, the cause of peace and socialism."

Relations between the Soviet Union and Albania were suspended in 1961 after Albania sided with Peking in the Sino-Soviet ideological struggle.

Ties were finally broken in early 1964 after the Albanians seized the Soviet embassy buildings in Tirana, the capital.

The Soviets have expressed interest in restoring normal relations with Albania since 1969.

There has been no known response from the Albanians, but Western diplomats said they have noted a toning down in Albania's pro-Chinese propaganda, particularly on the Sino-Soviet dispute.

Holiday Homes Tour aids Sick Baby Fund

Three attractive hillside homes, each strikingly different, will be open for the Holiday Homes Tour of Pomona Valley Community Hospital Auxiliary on Dec. 11.

The home of Dr. and Mrs. Albert Monterastelli features a living room with a panoramic view of the valley and contains furniture and art objects collected in Europe.

Called the "Sugar and Spice House," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Cox is highlighted by the use of warm woods and colors. The homey blue and white kitchen overlooks the family pool and the valley.

Tea will be served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Richardson which is decorated in a traditional style. The two-story high living room is dominated by a wide brick fireplace.

Mrs. Donald G. Hamilton is general chairman for the tour from 2 to 9 p.m. The homes are being enhanced further in the holiday spirit by professional decorators.

Mrs. Ellson F. Smith and Miss Edith Frances Eells are home procurement chairmen. Chairmen for the homes are Miss Eells, the Richardson home; Mrs. Wayne Book, the Monterastelli home; and Mrs. Ivan G. Smith, the Cox home. Decorators are Verona Darting, Stillingers Interiors of Pomona; Hazel Bader, Pomona; and The Flower Shoppe, Claremont. Assisting them are Mrs. Charles E. Gross and Mrs. Reuben Meisch.

Other chairmen for the homes tour are Mrs. George L. Mikel, special prize; Mrs. Herman L. Wente, admission tickets and publicity; Mrs. James Williams, boutique chairmen; Mrs. Robert E. Proceeds from the homes tour will benefit the Sick Baby Fund of the Pomona Valley Community Hospital Auxiliary which financially assists parents faced with medical expenses for their babies or children. The auxiliary has also provided much of the equipment for the hospital's intensive care neonatal nursery, newborn nursery and pediatrics unit.

In addition to pledging funds to the community hospital, the auxiliary members work as volunteers in many of the hospital departments filling roles which range from staffing information desks to delivering the mail and helping with the admission and discharge of patients.

Want to know skabetti recipe?

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Turn a child's imagination loose in the kitchen and you could be sorry. Or, just overlook the methods and ingredients and have a laugh.

The latter makes more sense when Jane G. Martel is writing about recipes from her nursery school group. I mean, if a child calls a dish skabetti, why not? Or basketti? Or banilla cake?

Anyway, Mrs. Martel doesn't try to get technical. She just tells it as the kids told her at the Francis J. Muraco Elementary School, a nursery school at the Harvard School of Public Health, Cambridge, Mass.

Mrs. Martel dedicates her small book, "Smashed Potatoes" (Houghton Mifflin), to her charges, "who gave me lots of love, lots of laughs, lots of gray hairs, and these wonderful recipes and drawings."

No one will stand responsibility for the results, but that skabetti recipe is as follows: "41 sausages as big as your ear, 41 meatballs not as big, 41 orange potatoes or tomatoes, 41 skabetti, 41 clean oil.

"First you decide what it will be tonight —sausages or meatballs? When your father tells you which one, then you cook. Mix the sauce in the blender so your elbows don't hurt.

"When the skabetti is done from cooking in the broiler...get it in the silver pan with holes in it by your spoon with holes in it. Then spread out the sauce.

"It serves your whole family and all your father's friends."

How a nursery schooler created the term basketti beats me, but here goes:

"One whole pack of long sticks —get them the size you want them; orangey-red spicy stuff for topping (2 little kinds and 2 big kinds); 1 half of a quarter of water, many purple onions with the paper off. Use red meat balls and the soapy kind of cheese that tastes a little bit rotten.

"For the cooking get a stove, and pots, and bowls, and spoons and gloves with pink flowers. Cook it all for quite a while.

"The only thing is —when you have it, your father has to stay home for the day because he takes the basketti out of the pan and squeezes out the water. Serves all four of us —but not Freddy."

A recipe for a "black" steak starts with "a five dollar steak" —how aware that child is about today's meat costs!

Stretching dollar is major concern

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jack Benny is credited with this definition of inflation —it means "your money won't buy as much as it would during the Depression when you didn't have any."

The currently inflated economy strikes us all and stretching the dollar becomes of paramount concern. It is of special significance to the retired, those with fixed income situations.

How to cope? A new publication gives some guidelines. They were designed for the 60-plus set, but much of the advice is just as applicable to any other family.

Budgeting is the essence of spending wisely.

"There will never be enough for everything," says the publication. "The only way out of the dilemma is to have a set of simple, workable rules for spending and conserving it.

"Armed with a financial plan, 'Can we afford it?' turns into several more manageable questions such as, 'What does it cost after everything else is accounted for?' and 'Do we want to spend that much for it instead of for something else?'"

"Remember, if you're not retired, it's not too soon to get into the budgeting habit now," it continues. "The more practice you have organizing your financial resources, the easier it will be to hold the line."

Your budget won't be found in a rule book. Some people care very much about a fine address and very little about food. Others love steaks and are indifferent to avenues. Accordingly they need different budgets, says "Your Retirement Money Guide," publication of the American Association of Retired Persons and National Retired Teachers Association (AARP-NRTA).

Keep budgeting simple. The guide suggested sitting down with ruled paper and making headings for each major budget category you must cover.

These probably include housing, with taxes and homeowner or renter insurance added in; household maintenance including utilities and telephone; automobile payments plus gas, repairs and insurance;

Food at home and away; new clothing, dry cleaning and laundry; medical doctors, medicine and health insurance payments; recreations such as vacations and pet care;

U. S. and state (and perhaps city) income taxes, personal property tax, and life insurance premiums; personal items such as cosmetics, smoking supplies, stationary and postage.

Upland Assistance League

Plans Mistletoe event

An evening of Christmas memories is in store for members and guests of the Assistance League of Upland when the traditional Mistletoe Ball is held Thursday evening at Red Hill Country Club.

Prior to the dinner dance, the homes of four league members and their husbands will be open to guests in appreciation for community support of league philanthropic endeavors. League members, under the direction of Mrs. Maher Bishai, will be opening the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Noble, Mr. and Mrs. George Vinnedge, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Erbstoesser and Mr. and Mrs. Rene Biane.

Dinner will be served at 8:30 p.m. at the country club and will be followed by an evening of dancing to the music of Lou Dokken and his orchestra.

Proceeds from the event will support the league's main philanthropic projects, Cucamonga Girls Club and the San Antonio Community Hospital Dental Center, according to Mrs. Leonard G. Brotzman, general chairman.

Other chairmen assisting with arrangements are: Mmes. John Taves, ways and means; Richard Day, invitations; John Frost, decorations; Lewis Liesch, reservations; Donald White, reservations; Bishai, social; Robert Jensen, responses; and Richard Houtz, acknowledgements. ments.

Yule program slated by Methodist Women

"What Do You Bring to Christmas?" is the theme for the Tuesday meeting of the United Methodist Womem, 3205 D. St., La Verne, when they gather at 10:30 a.m. in Romick Hall.

Mrs. James Bowen will be in charge of the program which also features other UMW members.

The Bonita High School Choir, directed by Tom Antal, will present Christmas selections.

Mrs. Ruth McCormick, district treasurer, will install the 1975 officers. They are Mmes. J. Tom Taylor, honorary president; Floyd Slagle, president; Sue Perry, vice president; Glenn Hall, treasurer; and Miss Hazel Snoke, secretary.

Also Mmes. John Flood, secretary of the program resources; Gilbert Starusburg, Christian social involvement; Taylor, Christian global concerns; Coy McCullough, Christian personhood; Alex Mueller, supportive community; Neal Mouser, membership.

Other chairmen include Mmes. Harvey Case, pledge; Fancheon Binnall, kitchen; Ethel Corse, telephone; Harry Marklond, publicity; William O'Neill and Margaret Lauterbach, Martha Circle; and Neal Mouser, Ruth Circle.

Mrs. Alex Mueller and her committee will serve the Christmas luncheon in Marshall Hall after the meeting and installation of officers.

Members and friends attending are requested to bring personal gift items to be shared with the girls at David and Margaret Home.

Extra service

With a little thought and planning some summer blouses, pants and sweaters can be combined with your winter wardrobe for year-round service.

Bazaar set by group

The Dorcas Citizens Group has planned a bazaar at 1090 W. Phillips Blvd., Friday and Saturday. There will be a number of gifts available for sale.

The sale will open at noon each day and proceeds will be used for helping low-income senior citizens.

Christmas ornamen...

The whole family can make them

This is the second part in a series of five articles.

This is our final day of creating tree ornaments from recycled materials. In our next three articles we will be focusing on festive decorations for the mantel and the dining room table.

The small ornaments featured today are made from jar lids, curtain rings and toothpick or paper clip boxes.

For a charming jar lid pendant, make two circles by tracing around a jar lid on felt, foil or construction paper. Glue one circle to the inside of the lid and decorate it with cloth or paper cut-outs. (Wrapping paper, old Christmas cards and magazines provide an excellent source for these cut-outs.) You can substitute a family photo in the center, if you like.

To hang your pendant, tape a loop of yarn on the back of the jar lid and then glue the remaining circle over it.

A similar pendant can be made from a painted wooden curtain ring. Cover both sides of a cardboard circle with felt; then glue to the back of the ring. You can add pictures as above, or to achieve a two-dimensional effect, attach a cut-out with a strip of paper folded in accordion pleats.

You can make tiny Christmas packages by covering several small boxes with brightly colored foil or wrapping paper. Tie on ribbon or yarn and add sequins or small paper cut-outs.

SILLS RETURNS — Soprano Beverly Sills, completely recovered from her recent surgery, will be seen in the New York City Opera production of "I Puritani" at the Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center at 8 p.m. Wednesday and Friday. The company winds up its Los Angeles season with "Medea" next Sunday.

Beverly's back!

Sills to perform in closing week

Soprano Beverly Sills, completely recovered from her recent surgery, will perform in the New York City Opera production of Bellini's "I Puritani" in the Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center at 8 p.m. Wednesday and Friday.

The final week of the company's Los Angeles engagement begins at today's matinee of Puccini's "Tosca," in Italian with Maralin Niska, Jose Carreras and Richard Fredricks in the principal roles, conducted by Giuseppe Morelli.

Tonight there will be a performance of Puccini's "Turandot," sung in Italian with Danica Mastilovic, Catherine Malfitano, Ermanno Mauro and Samuel Ramey, Julius Rudel conducting.

There is no performance on Monday. Monteverdi's "L'Incoronazione di Poppea" receives its final staging in Italian on Tuesday with Pamela Hebert, Frances Bible, Charles Roe and Thomas Jamerson, Christopher Keene conducting.

Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" will be sung in Italian on Thursday with Miss Niska, Herman Malamood, Roe and Michael Li-Paz, Morelli conducting.

"Turandot" will be staged at the Saturdoy matinee in Italian with the same cast as today, except that Faye Robinson will be heard in the place of Miss Malfitano. Puccini's "Madama Butterfly" will be heard in Italian at the Saturday evening performance with Patricia Craig, Sandra Walker, Gaetano Scano and David Clatworthy, Keene conducting.

"The Mikado" returns at the Sunday matinee with Diane Soviero, Elaine Bonazzi, Gary Glaze, Jack Eddleman and Ara Berberian, Judith Somogi conducting the Gilbert & Sullivan favorite.

The 28th and final performance of this eighth season of the New York City Opera, under the auspices of the Music Center Opera Association, takes place Sunday evening with Miss Niska heard in Italian in Cherubini's "Medea." Also in the cast are Miss Bible, Barbara Hocher, Richard Taylor and Ramey, Keene conducting.

All evening performances commence at 8 p.m. and matinees at 2 p.m.

1,000 prints to go on sale at Montgomery

The galleries of the Claremont Colleges will sponsor an exhibit and sale of some 1,000 original prints by old and modern masters at the Montgomery Art Center, Pomona College, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dec. 9.

The works are from the Ferdinand Roten Galleries, which put on sales for some 1,500 universities, community organizations and business corporations each year.

Works spanning six centuries will be featured in the show, which will include prints by such masters as Roualt, Hogarth, Goya, Miro and Picasso, and many of today's artists, famous and not yet famous. In addition, there will be a collection of Western and Oriental manuscript pages, some dating to the 13th Century. Prices range from $10 to the thousands, but most prints, including those of the masters, are under $100.

Area residents will have an opportunity to leaf through one of the world's outstanding collections of original graphics. Roten mounts over 400 exhibits annually for major museums throughout the United States and Canada.

Progress-Bulletin Entertainment

At Bridges Auditorium

Chinese Opera Theater to perform in Claremont

The National Chinese Opera Theater will perform in Bridges Auditorium of the Claremont Colleges at 3 p.m. next Sunday. The 80-member company, on its second American tour, is presented by the colleges.

Tickets are on sale at the Bridges Auditorium box office and at Mutual and Liberty agencies. Information on the performance can be obtained at 626-4523.

Chinese opera was put to death in mainland China in the late 1960s as part of Mao-Tse-tung's Cultural Revolution. Across the Formosa Strait on Taiwan, the Nationalist regime has kept alive the Peking-opera heritage. The company has been assembled from descendants of mainland opera stars and graduates of the island's five Peking-opera schools.

Lavish costumes, long silk gowns and elaborate headwear, characteristics of the Chinese opera, have symbolic meaning for theatergoers.

The dresses are patterned after those worn during the Ming Dynasty (1363-1644) that they are more symbolic that realistic. Rich or poor, characters appear on stage in silk garments. Color and style of dress reveal differences in social position, importance in the play and rank of officials. Monarchs always appear in yellow silk gowns embroidered with dragons, the royal sumbol, while scarlet, green or blue are freely worn by other male actors.

Robes of high officials are usually decorated with fancy designs in gold, red or green, and gallant young men and warriors also dress glitteringly. Lesser officials wear blue or dark robes and beggars wear dark silk robes with patches. Black is the most common color for robes of beggars and old men. Old ladies usually appear in grayish robes.

The Chinese opera actor or actress is not fully clad without headdress. Anyone who appears on stage with no headgear portrays someone in great danger or who has been beaten up by foes. Actors portraying persons to be executed also appear without headdress. Monarchs wear wingless headdress decorated with a cluster of silk tufts and silver jewelry, and the prime minister's headgear has a long wing on each side. Officials wear black gauze hats with two wings.

Shapes of the wings indicate the character of the official — oblong wings symbolize high integrity, diamond-shaped wings, denote a dubious character, and circular wings indicate an official who loves bribes better than anything else.

More colorful and elegant are woman's dresses on the stage. Young ladies move gracefully in beautifully designed blouses and skirts. Women of nigher classes wear long skirts concealing their feet. Over the skirts they have jackets down to the knees, with long and large sleeves which completely hide their hands. Virtuous ladies are usually clad in simple attire of sober color, but coquettish women dazzle the audience with brilliant silks.

Headdress is also standard for female characters. A noble lady, such as a royal concubine, will have a jeweled headpiece, while a young girl studs her hair with shining trinkets. A bride is decked with a jewelry headdress and a piece of red satin covering her face. An old woman has a simple piece of plain black cloth wrapped up around her head with a jewel at the center of her forehead.

Singers invited to join in Christmas concert

Local singers are invited to join a chorus to present Vivaldi's "Gloria Mass" and the Christmas portion of Handel's "Messiah" at the United Church of Christ, Congregational, Sixth Street and Harvard Avenue, Claremont, at 4 p.m. Dec. 15.

The chorus will be conducted by Louis Ronfeldt, minister of music and director of the Chancel Choir. William G. Banchard will accompany on the organ.

All persons who have sung the chorus parts of Handel's "Messiah" are asked to bring a copy of music or one will be provided. The choruses will be sung without rehearsal as a congregation of singers. It is suggested that participants arrive between 3:15 and 3:30 p.m. to be seated in their respective areas. Groups wishing to be seated as an ensemble or choir may do so.

The choruses will be: "And the glory of the Lord," "O thou that tellest good tidings," "For unto us a child is born," "Glory to God" and the "Hallelujan Chours." The event is open to the public.

Choristers of the valley who have sung Vivaldi's "Gloria Mass" are invited to attend the following rehearsals: tonight and next Sunday from 8 to 9 p.m., Thursday and Dec. 12, from 8 to 9 p.m., and Dec. 15 from 2 to 3 p.m. Rehearsals are held in the choir room. Additional information can be obtained at 626-1201.

Artist plans lecture on landscapes

Artist Mark Florian will demonstrate painting landscapes in oils at a meeting of the Heights Art Association at the First Federal Savings & Loan Association, 2233 S. Hacienda Blvd., Hacienda Heights, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Florian paints in watercolor and acrylic as well as oil. He has won numerous awards for his work, including first at the Stonewood Art Festival in Downey, Best of Show at the La Mirada Fiesta des Artes and purchase awards at the Los Angeles All-City Festival and the National Orange Show in San Bernardino.

Guests are welcome at the meeting.

Anne Francis

Actress set to try do-it-yourself trip

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Hollywood conversation generally revolves around movies but these days Hollywoodsters are like everybody else — they talk about inflation.

Anne Francis, who had just finished her work in CBS' exciting "The FBI Story — Alvin Karpis," told me she had solved inflation with what she calls "Francis' Law."

Francis' Law? It's simple, she says.

"If you have problems paying your bills, just make some more money."

She admits, of course, that that isn't as easy to do as it is to say. Even in her star-type bracket.

"These days," she says, "TV shows, instead of paying more, are trying to get you to work for less. The new residual ruling, under our new union contract, won't make itself felt for some time. And, besides, there just aren't that many jobs around now."

What Anne is doing now is something very different for a glamor gal. She's just made a pilot for a syndicated series — "or maybe it'll be on PBS" — about home improvements. She thought up the title, "Home Improvements," herself.

Anne has always been handy around the house and so she figured she might as well capitalize on that talent. On the show, she'll demonstrate how to do things and talk to experts on such subjects as plumbing, carpentry and electricity.

This is the era of the independent producer, those daring young men with not much else besides nerve and an idea. Of them all, perhaps the nerviest is a man named Stuart Duncan.

He's just made his first movie, "Let's Go For Broke." It's a James Bond spoof, with the heroine an inept girl named Jackie Broke.

Duncan grew up intending to go into the family business (Lea & Perrins, the sauce people) but, after a brief fling, quit to try something for himself. He laways had loved the theater, so tried producing plays. His third was "Godspell," a long-running off-Broadway hit in New York.

He decided he wanted to try a movie.

Duncan says the picture cost $1.1 million. He figures $300,000 of that was wasted because he was new and made mistakes. As it is, he thinks he has a good picture.

Music critic to lecture on 'The State of Music'

Virgil Thomson, composer and music critic, will lecture on "The State of Music" at the Humanities Center auditorium, Scripps College, at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday. Admission is free.

Scripps lecturer in voice Roger Ardrey will perform Thomson's "Five Songs from William Blake." Ardrey, a new Scripps faculty member, has frequently soloed with the Roger Wagner Chorale and his given concerts throughout the West. John Jensen of the Cal State Fullerton music faculty will provide piano accompaniment.

Thomson did his studies at Harvard University and with Nadia Boulanger in Paris. An officer of the Legion d'Honneur, he has honorary degrees from several major American universities. He is the composer of a variety of works, including two operas — "Four Saints in Three Acts" and "The Mother of Us All" — both to Gertrude Stein's libretti.

Thomson has been a music critic for Vanity Fair, the Boston Transcript, the New York Review of Books, and the New York Herald Tribune. A Fellow of the Academy of Arts and Letters, Thomson is the author of seven books, including "The State of Music," which has been a standard work on American music since it was written in 1939.

His appearance at Scripps is sponsored by the Scripps music faculty. Thomson will also hold informal discussions with music students from 4 to 5 p.m. Wednesday in Pattison Hall.

First one-man show

Scripps to exhibit paintings and drawings by Arthur Ames

The first one-man show of paintings and drawings by Arthur Ames, former head of design at Otish Art Institute, will be held in the Clark Humanities Museum of Scripps College Dec. 10-Jan. 17.

The public is invited to view Ames' recent paintings and drawings from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. weekdays free of charge. The museum will be closed on Christmas and on New Year's Day.

Retired from his longtime position as head of design and art professor at Otis, Ames currently devotes most of his time to painting. He describes his paintings as "large, hard-edged, geometric abstractions with accent on color and shape."

Although Ames has shown paintings in a number of Southern California group exhibits, winning first prize at the Pasadena Art Museum's "San Gabriel Valley Show," he is best known for his enamel work. One of the first to revive the enameling technique in the United States in the early 1940s, Ames received three first prizes in the Syracuse, N.Y. National Exhibit of Ceramics and several first prizes at the Wichita, Kan. Art Association Show. He has had a number of one-man enamel exhibits.

Locally Ames did the tile glazed mural, "Night and Day," on the south wall of Baxter Hall at Claremont Men's College and the mural in the foyer of Galileo Hall at Harvey Mudd College.

He and his wife, Jean, who taught at Scripps and the Claremont Graduate School for many years, have collaborated on numerous mosaics, murals and tapestries. They did the mosaic figure of "Pomona" which stands on the Pomona Mall; the enamel and copper mural in the Hillside Chapel of Rose Hills Memorial Park in Whittier; three large fresco secco murals in the county supervisors chamber at the San Diego Civic Center; the tapestries in the foyer of Garrison Theater in Claremont and many other works in churches, banks and businesses in Southern California.

Men's Wear Magazine

Rocky now attacked for his clothes

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nelson A. Rockefeller came under attack again recently, not for giving away large sums of money, but for his clothes. Men's Wear magazine said that despite his millions (all 218 of them at last count) he is a sartorial mess who likes to look as if he were wearing a $25 suit.

And to help out it asked four leading American designers to suggest ways and means to improve his image: Don Robbie, who designs for Yves St. Laurent, Piero Dimitri of Italy, Bill Blass and Leon Block of Dunhill Tailors. All four more or less agreed with Men's Wear.

"His wardrobe suffers from terminal boredom complicated by an overdose of old money which usually breeds neglect about one's personal appearance," Men's Wear writer J.P. Donlon said.

"He's not above donning a sombrero in Spanish Harlem, a yarmulke in Brooklyn or a fez at an upstate New York Elks' meeting, but try and get him out of those narrow lapel suits that look three sizes too big. Even Goldwater doesn't wear skinny Republican elephant club ties.

"As a back-slapping political veteran of 34 years maybe he thinks he has to play down his blue chip off-the-old-block image to be acceptable to the public. Why else would a man who is the beneficiary of $116 million worth of trusts, owns $33 million in art and earns $46 million over 10 years want to look like he wears $25 suits?"

So the designers came up with these ideas:

Robbie: "Like Onassis, Rocky's a sloppy dresser, but they're both so rich it doesn't matter because people are going to look at them anyway. With the coming of the Bicentennial I don't think he should bother with English tailoring. After all Hollywood is as American as the American Revolution, so a blue-green sharkskin suit from the '50s should do the trick. Besides the best thing he's got that's all his own is his good body —so why not flaunt it?"

Dimitri: "After Nixon, Rocketeller is one of the worst-dressed politicians and it's not too late to re-educate his taste. It's not a question of fashion but of elegance. I would like to see him throw out his old wardrobe which was probably picked out by his wife. He would have new confidence in himself if he were to care how he looked and maybe people would start noticing him instead of his money."

Blass: "I think it's difficult to dress politicians because there's an aspect of insincerity about them. Dean Acheson was probably the last elegant man we had in Washington and Jimmy Walker could get away with it in his day, but for Rockefeller I selected something American and recognizable to him —nothing innovative except the color. He doesn't need to wear all those dark suits. A beige flannel pinstripe with the emphasis on fit is perfect. It's middle of the road."

Block: "Rockefeller gives the impression of being careless in his dress, but I don't think he can afford to appear too frivolous either. It's a question of what other people expect. If you're going to be a doctor you don't want him to look like he's about to play golf. I selected a pin-stripe suit that's not ultraconservative but classic. People don't want their leaders to look like they do. They want them to look better."

Violencia continua en South America

UPI — En Uruguay, especiales medidas de seguridad, similares a las de un estado de sitio, fueron adoptadas en 1969 para combatir los guerrilleros Tumaparo, y aun se continuan superando. El gobierno ha sido una virtual distadura desde que el presidente Juan Maria Bordaberry abolio el Congreso en junio de 1973, con el consentimiento de los militares.

En Brasil, el inflexible gobierno militar, en el poder por mas de diez anos, ha impuesto rigida sensura a la prensa, abolio todos los partidos politicos a excepsion de dos, y ejerce amplio poder para arrestar a ciudadanos sospechosos de actividades subersivas.

Un estado de sitio ha cubierto parte del Paraguay casi constantemente desde 1931. Bolivia emergio de su estado se sitio de seis meses el 28 de julio, pero el presidente, General Hugo Banzer, declaro un nuevo periodo el 7 de noviembre, en vista de una insurreccion en la ciudad de Santa Cruz.

En Argentina, el estado de sitio se define en la constitucion como una medida a aplicarse en casos de conmocion interna, o amenazas externas dirigidas a la constitucion y el gobierno. El gobierno tiene autoridad para suspender garantias constitucionales, y transladar prisioneros dentro del pais, a voluntad.

Differente a la ley marcial, el estado de sitio no coloca al pais bajo gobierno military pero indica que el ciudadano pierde los recursos legales normales para evadir la captura y embargo.

La senora de Peron, de 43 anoas, puso la medida en efecto cuatro meses despues de asumir el mando, a la muerte de su esposo, Juan D. Peron Ni Peron, ni los gobiernos militares en el poder desde 1966 a 1973, fueron capaces de borrar la violencia politica en la Argentina, pais que cuenta con casi 25 millones de habitantes.

En meses recientes, los asesinatos han ido escalando. Ellos envuelven una sangrienta disputa entre peronistas izquierdistas y derechistas, y fuerzas de seguridad. Una escuadra de asesinos derechistas han contribuido su parte, haciendose acreedores de 23 muertes en una campana anti izquierdista de bombas y disparos.

El sonido de las sirenas en la noche y la vista del camion de cuerpo cuadrado, pintado a rayas amarillas y negras del grupo de demoliciones anti explosivas, ponen presion en los nervios de los ciudadanos de Buenos Aires.

Entonces sucedio un horrible crimen sin relacion con la politica; el asesinato sexual de tres pequenas de edad escolar en la zona de Buesnos Aires, desato una cadena de reacciones. Se paso la palabra de amenazas telefonicas anonimas dirigidas a las escuelas, los maestros y estudiantes. Nadie supo quien hacia las amenazas, pero los padres comenzaron a retener a los ninos en el hogar en una atmosfera de panic.

Sandwich de chiles y tamales

- 4 bollos para hamburguesas
- 8 tajadas de queso americano
- 8 tamales, cortados por la mitad a lo largo
- ¾ taza de queso rallado
- 2 latas (15 onzas cada una) de chile con carne y frijoles

Cortar y enmantecar los bollos. Colocar encima el queso y los tamales. Cubrir con queso rallado. Cocinar en la parrilla del horno hasta que el queso se derrita y los tamales esten calientes. Mientras tanto, calen tar el chile con carne y frijoles. Sirvase los bollos cubiertos con el chile caliente, acompanados de apio y rabanitos decorados.

Manzanillo, la nueva Riviera

El descubrimiento mas reciente de la partida internacional, es el adormedico pueblo costero Mejicano, que media entre los siglos 19 y 20. La ausencia del turismo y sus consecuentes visitantes y comercialismo, han sido una de las atrayentes caracteristicas, pero dos sucesos importantes han tomado lugar, indicando la aurora de un despertar turistico.

Manzanillo yace sobre el Pacifico, a aproximadamente la misma distancia de Acapaulco como Puerto Vallarta, albergue de unas 47.000 contentas y hospitalarias almas.

Visto desde el puerto de aguas profundas, uno de los mas activos en el pais, y el mas cercano a la ciudad de Mejico para cargas del oriente y Sud America, este pueblo semeja la paleta del pintor, amarillo, brillante, purpura, rosado, azul y verde son los colores de las casas que se asoman entre el follage que cubre las lomas que protegen la bahia.

Garzas grises, pajaros rosados, pelicanes de nivea blancura, ciguenas y otros animales zumban sin ser molestados en el valle de las garzas, un pantano adyacente al puerto. No le temen al hombre, ya que la caza esta prohibida.

Algunas casa nuevas y departamentos pequenos trepan las lomas que se inclinan hacia el puerto. En el poblaco mismo, hay pocas atracciones para el turista, y menos turistas aun.

Sin embargo, es el puerto mas importante en Mejico para las transacciones con el Criente. Un pacto de crecimiento firmado por el presidente de Mejico, implemento la instalacion de equipo jaspones de alta velocidad, para el embarque en el multimillonario puerto de Manzanillo. Esto lo hace el mas moderno centro maritimo de America Patina.

Es un pueblo pequeno. Los precios no han sido aumentados mucho en los ultimos diez anos. En Manzanillo, una habitacion en un hotel humilde aun cuesta $8 por noche, y el desayuno no mas de 80 centavos. Una lancha de pesca, con silas para seis personas y riles, cuesta $6.40 la hora. Una excelente cena de pescado costara alrededor de $3. Hay 3 restaurantes que serven comidas no mejicanas, muchos otros con un menu de tacos, algunas farmacias, zapaterias, mueblerias y negocios de articulos de cuero, un mercado central y no mucho mas.

La vida nocturna es limitada. Hasta ahora, hay solamente dos discotecas, una en el Club Las Hadas y la otra en un restaurante en la costanera de la ciudad, que cobra 20 pesos por el privilegio de bailar. Aparte de esto, el resto son cantinas, o mancebias, todo tipico de pueblo de puerto.

Manzanillo ancla la punta sur de una bahia creciente que se curva por unas 14 millas de orilla de palmeras de coco. Actualmente, la bahia esta formada por dos bahias, un pulgar o peninsula de 2 millas, se extiende en el centro del creciente, separando las Bahias de Manzanilio y Santiago.

El estado de Colima, en el cual se encuentra Manzanillo, se jacta de tener 100 millas de costa y algunos de los mejores lugares pesqueros en el Pacifico. Un estado agricultural y ganadero, Colima tiene mas de 19 milliones de palmeras, las mas altas son salvajes, y producen cocos de aceite. Plantaciones de bananas, mangos y papayas, crecen a lo largo del camino que une Manzanillo con Puerto Vallarta, a 140 millas al norte, la capital de Colima, 62 millas al sudeste, y Guadalajara, a 220 millas al noreste.

Aeromejico tiene ahora servicios aereos a Manzanillo, con vuelos desde Mejico, Guadalajara, Tijuana y Los Angeles, Air France vuela desde Francia. La edificacion del aeropuerto de Manzanillos fue estimulada por la apertura de Las Hadas, una de las estaciones mas remarcadas del mundo edificada por el magnate de la hojalata boliviano, Anator Patino.

Cubriendo unos doscientas acres de la Peninsula Punta Santiago, Las Hadas domina una insuperable vista de la bahia, el pueblo y las lomas. Es un espejismo griego, mejicano y moro, con grupos de edificios blancos, muchos de ellos techados en forma de cupula, y unidos por calles de baldoza y plazas rodeadas de palmas. Se dice que la estacion, de 204 habitaciones de blanco sobre blanco, fue construida por un total que excede los 25 millones de dolares.

En la alejada empinada de las peninsula, se halla el otro hotel de Manzanillo, el mas modesto hotel Playa de Santiago. Cerca del Hotel Playa hay una atraccion interesante, localizada en una iglesia Catolica Romana. En la iglesia, hay un altar hecho de un solo pedazo de madera de caoba mejicana, que pesa 2 toneladas.

Bandits wound market owner

INGLEWOOD (UPI) — A 53-year-old market owner was in serious condition after he was shot in the stomach Thursday by one of two men who robbed his small store.

Steven Siwy and his wife Mary, 52, were in the market when two men entered, one firing a warning shot while the other robbed the couple. As the men left, the gunman fired another shot at Siwy.

Police said the suspects are still at large.

4,557 have free turkey dinner

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The line was three persons wide and about two blocks long when St. Anthony's Dining Room opened for its 24th annual Thanksgiving Day dinner.

When the door closed for the last time a record 4,557 persons had feasted without charge on turkey, stuffing, mashed potatoes and gravy, vegetables, cranberry sauce, tossed salad, bread and butter, pie, ice cream and coffee.

"We are very grateful to all the people in the area who donated food, money and time to make this dinner possible," said the Rev. Floyd Lotito, assistant director of the dining room that serves more than 1,700 free dinners daily.

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES — Woody Hayes got the message Saturday afternoon. There's no way he could have escaped it.

Notre Dame also got the message.

USC has jelled. Oh, how they have jelled.

There's no question that the Trojans currently belong near the top of the collegiate football ranks.

USC put on a sensational show at the Coliseum before 83,552 customers plus a national TV audience in turning around an early 24-0 deficit to simply annihilate the Irish, 55-24, by scoring all 55 points in a 17-minute stretch in what must be considered one of the most sensational comebacks in collegiate history.

And Hayes saw it all. The Ohio State coach, who has the task of facing USC in the Rose Bowl, was the guest coach on ABC's telecast.

The Trojan rooting section knew he was here. The cry of "You're next Woody" could be heard loud and clear.

Notre Dame probably still doesn't know what hit them. When the Irish jumped ahead to its 24-point margin, it brought back memories of the 51-0 rout enjoyed here in 1966 by ND.

But Anthony Davis, who helped himself by attracting some last-minute votes for the Heisman Trophy, instead gave the fans a review of his sensational six-touchdown day here two years ago against the Irish.

No, A.D. didn't quite reach six TDs this time but his four scores definitely turned it around.

Not much was said when Davis scored on a seven-yard swing pass from quarterback Pat Haden with 10 seconds left in the first half to narrow the gap to 24-6.

When Chris Limahelu's extra point kick was blocked, it appeared that the last-second score would just give the Trojans a moral lift at the intermission.

But it soon proved to be more than that. The rout was on.

Davis electrified the crowd by returning the second half kickoff with an 102-yard touchdown return. A great block by Ricky Bell was the key in enabling the senior tailback to break open on the left sidelines.

The sensational run had the Trojan fans roaring and they didn't stop the rest of the way as USC scored 35 points in the third quarter and added 14 more in the fourth.

Notre Dame couldn't do anything right as USC took advantage of excellent field position.

After a short punt gave USC the ball on the Irish 38, Haden directed Troy to another score on just three plays. He passed 31 yards to John McKay on the ND six with Davis running the final six on the next play. Limahelu's kick made it 24-19.

It only took three minutes for Troy to move ahead.

Kevin Bruce recovered a Pete Demmerle fumble on the ND 31. Haden completed consecutive passes to Shelton Diggs and McKay for a first down on the four. Davis then ran for the TD. and a two-point conversion to give USC a 27-24 lead.

Marvin Cobb set up the next Trojan score when he returned a punt 56 yards to the ND 19. Three plays later, Haden completed an 18-yard pass to McKay in the end zone. Limahelu kicked the extra point for a 34-24 lead.

A shaken Notre Dame team finally earned a first down in driving 33 yards into Trojan territory but Irish hopes of a comeback collapsed when Charles Phillips intercepted a Tom Clements pass, returning it to the 50.

Haden, who equaled a USC school record with four touchdown passes, found his buddy, McKay, for another score when they combined for a 44-yarder on the last play of the third quarter to make it 41-24.

The fourth quarter was strictly anticlimatic, especially after USC scored two more touchdowns within 87 seconds.

Haden passed 16 yards to Diggs for a TD one play after Bruce recovered an Irish fumble. Parker then returned his third interception of the day 58 yards to wrap it up.

The net result was USC's widest victory margin in the 26 years of the intersectional rivalry. The Trojans missed by four points of having the honor of scoring the most points ever against the Irish. Army's 59-0 win in 1944 is still the tops.

Kings blank Bruins before sellout crowd

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Bob Berry scored one goal and assisted on another and reserve goalie Gary Edwards made 23 saves to record his second shutout of the season Saturday night as the Los Angeles Kings blanked the Boston Bruins 2-0.

A sellout Forum crowd of 16,005 watched Berry steal a pass and score from 20 feet out with 9:20 remaining to put Los Angeles in front 2-0.

A pass from Berry to Don Kozak set up the Kings' first goal at the 4:46 mark of the second period. Kozak tallied on a backhanded shot from a kneeling position to beat Boston goaltender Gilles Gilbert from 12 feet.

The Kings peppered Gilbert with 39 shots, including 19 in the second period when Los Angeles repeatedly kept the puck in Boston's end. The Los Angeles defense, the stingiest in the NHL with only 38 goals against in 23 starts, completely throttled the Bruins' high-scoring duo of Bobby Orr and Phil Esposito.

Esposito, who had scored in the previous five games, did not even get a shot off thanks to the Kings' checking line of Dan Maloney, Bob Nevin and Frank St. Marseille.

The closest Boston came to scoring off Edwards was on a wicked slap shot by Orr that hit the post with 11:55 to go.

HADEN HIT FROM BEHIND

USC Quarterback Pat Haden is about to hit the turf as Notre Dame's Drew Mahalic sacks him for a loss during first quarter action Saturday at the Coliseum. No. 43 Doug Becker is also in on the play for the Irish. Trojans rallied in the second half to rout Notre Dame 55-24.

Ram reserves to see action today

ATLANTA (UPI) — Rookie quarterback Ron Jaworski may get his longest test of the season here Sunday if the Los Angeles Rams dominate the offensively punchless Atlanta Falcons as expected.

The Rams, who nailed down the NFC Western Division title this past Monday night when New Orleans lost to Pittsburgh, plan to start their regular lineup, including quarterback James Harris, but hope to get their younger players into the game.

It should be a good game for that purpose. The Rams (8-3) are two-touchdown favorites over the Falcons (2-9), the lowest scoring NFL team in the past three decades.

The Atlanta-Los Angeles game, the second half of a (CBS) television doubleheader, starts at 4 p.m. est.

Harris is listed as ailing. But the Rams say it isn't serious. They note he was hurt in last Sunday's game against the Minnesota Vikings, but returned to complete his last 10 passes and led the Rams to a come-from-behind, 20-17, victory.

The Falcons, blanked, 21-0, by the Rams three weeks ago, were shut out last Sunday, 27-0, at San Francisco and now are averaging only 7.6 points per game.

Despite last Sunday's shutout, the Falcons are going again with Pat Sullivan as their starting quarterback. Sullivan, who has started only two games this season, passed for 148 yards against the Forty Niners, high this season for the Falcons.

Statisically, it appears the Rams should be favored by a lot more than two touchdowns, even playing in Atlanta. Los Angeles is fourth in the NFL in offense and second in defense while the Falcons have gained less total yardage and given up more rushing yardage than any other teams in the entire NFL.

The Rams, paced by Larry McCutcheon who leads the NFL with 951 yards, are second only to the Dallas Cowboys in rushing in the NFC. McCutcheon and the Rams figure to fatten their rushing figures in view of the Falcons' porous rush defense.

The Falcons, who have beaten only the Giants and Bears, have a six-game losing streak. They are 0-3 since former defensive chief Marion Campbell succeeded head coach Norm Van Brocklin and they have scored a total of only seven points in their three games under Campbell.

Campbell said earlier this week that he was sticking with Sullivan at quarterback because "I feel he did a good job last Sunday. It wasn't his fault that we didn't score. Penalties and turnovers killed our scoring drives. We hurt ourselves."

The Falcons apparently have given upon quarterback Bob Lee, who started eight games this season and has the lowest passing rating of any NFL quarterback throwing at least 110 passes.

The Rams hold a commanding 13-1-2 edge over the Falcons, starting with Atlanta's first season in the NFL in 1966. Atlanta's lone victory over the Rams was a 31-3 shocker in 1972. The ties were in 1970 and 1971.

"We can't think about the past, for either this season or any of the others," said Campbell. "We've got to view each game completely separately. With Los Angeles, Minnesota and Green Bay left to play, there's no other way to approach it."

A.D. saves best for Notre Dame

LOS ANGELES — Anthony Davis, a hero once again for USC in a win over Notre Dame, said after Saturday's amazing 55-24 victory over the Irish that this one was better than two years ago.

A.D. 'only' scored four touchdowns this time but he rates it higher than the six two years ago which pushed him into national prominence.

"This was better than two years ago because of the way we have played this year," Davis answered in the Trojans' crowded dressing room.

"People said we weren't as good as we were supposed to be," he continued. "People said we played a weak schedule and stuff like that."

Asked what coach John McKay said at halftime when the Trojans trailed 24-6, Davis at first said the coach was very calm and said USC was a better team than the score said.

However, A.D. then stopped and grinned, "Well, he was very emotional. And when he's like that, you just leave him alone . . . I haven't touched the man for four years but now I think I'm going to kiss him."

McKay explained his talk.

"We reminded them of the 1964 game when we were behind 17-0 at the half and gave back to win, 20-17," the silver-haired mentor said. "I thought we could score almost any time we got the ball and we did score almost any time we got the ball. We got a lot of breaks, let's face it. It's really unbelieveable. I never thought we could score 35 points in a quarter against a team as solid as Notre Dame."

In discussing Davis' runback of the second half kickoff for a touchdown, McKay said, "They kicked off to A.D. earlier and discovered we couldn't break him. We discussed this at halftime and told the players it wasn't illegal to block. In the first half, we had 10 guys standing around watching to see if he would score a touchdown."

Offensive guard Joe Davis, a junior from Claremont, alternated at his position with Donnie Hickman.

"I had food poisoning," the Claremont product said in explaining why he was alternated. "I went out to eat Wednesday night. Thursday I thought I was going to die. Friday, I felt better after getting rid of all the bad food. I was weak and didn't know how flat I would be."

Notre Dame coach Ara Parseghian, who had his head bowed in his hands while staring at the floor, was asked about kicking off to Anthony Davis.

"What was I going to do? We kicked off over his head once and squibed it once. Where the bleep were we going to kick it," was his sharp reply. "We kicked off downwind; he ran it back and turned the game around."

In discussing the game, Parseghian continued, "We just didn't play football like we are capable of in the second half. We had too many mistakes. I would say it was like two different ball games."

"I wouldn't say it was a great offensive display in the second half by USC, but a good display of the kicking game. They didn't really travel that far to score. I'm going to judge my team on the way it played in the first half and not it's second half performance. If we can play that well in the first half, why can't we play that well in the second half."

Chio State coach Woody Hayes, who saw it all as the guest announcer for ABC, summed it up.

While going down on the press box elevator, Hayes said, "That was the greatest third quarter I have ever seen, the greatest anybody has ever seen."

You can be sure Hayes will remember it all the way until Jaunary 1.

Golden State trips Lakers, 128-118

OAKLAND (UPI) — Rick Barry scored 43 points, including 12 in the final period, to lead the Golden State Warriors to a 128-118 NBA victory over the Los Angeles Lakers Saturday night.

The Warriors built up a 12-point lead early in the final period but two baskets by Connie Hawkins pulled the Lakers to within eight points with 4:50 to play.

Barry then scored four points and Charlie Johnson and Butch Beard each hit a field goal to put the Warriors back on top 120-104 with 2:50 to play.

The victory was the third straight for the Warriors and kept them 3½ games ahead of Portland in the Pacific Division.

The Warriors hit 51.9 per cent of their field goal attempts while the Lakers made only 44 per cent. Los Angeles played without leading scorer Gail Goodrich who has a leg injury.

UCLA downs DePaul, 79-64

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Forwards Richard Washington and Dave Meyers combined for 38 points Saturday night as No. 2-ranked UCLA defeated DePaul 79-64 for its Bruins' 67th straight victory at Pauley Pavilion.

Washington, a 6-9 sophomore, had 20 points and seven rebounds, while the 6-8 Meyers, a senior, the only returning starter from last season's Bill Walton-led NCAA third place team, had 18 points and 8 rebounds.

Bill Robinzine paced DePaul with 17 points.

UCLA led only 19-14 after the first 14 minutes, but then outscored DePaul 20-8 to go in front 39-22 at the half.

Ballard peps Oregon win

EUGENE, Ore. — Former Garey High hoop star Greg Ballard scored 14 points and pulled down 12 rebounds to pace the Oregon Ducks to a 83-64 basketball win here Saturday night over St. Mary's.

St. Mary's stayed close until late in the contest when the Ducks pulled away to the victory. Ron Lee led all scorers by putting in 28 points for the victors.

A total of 53 fouls were called in the game, 31 on the aggressive Oregon squad.

The win made Ballard's and the Ducks' season opener a successful one. St. Mary's is now 0-1 with the defeat.

Portland fans missed USC's great comeback

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Portland area football fans Saturday missed most of what may have been the greatest quarter ever in collegiate football history and no one was more apologetic than KATU-TV here.

Newsman Dick Bogle explained that a transmitter malfunction put the station off the air from 3:58 to 4:27 p.m.

In that period of time, the University of Southern California rallied from a 24-12 deficit to lead, 40-24, over Notre Dame en route to a 55-24 rout of the Irish.

Portland fans did see a 100 yard kickoff return by Anthony Davis just prior to the interrupted signal. But they missed two Davis touchdowns on runs of six and four yards and two touchdown passes from Pat Haden to John McKay.

Service was restored just after McKay's second touchdown. The switchboard operator at the television station said she had so many calls she "couldn't keep track of all of them."

She said she answered at least 100 calls during the 29 minutes, but many didn't get through the jammed lines. She said one man was so irate he threatened to blow up the station.

D.B. Dons host Falcons

The mighty Matawan (New Jersey) Falcons are the headliners today at Mt. San Antonio College, as the third annual Diamond Bar Pop Warner Bowl gets underway at noon.

The Falcons will play the Diamond Bar Dons in a Pop Warner Midget Division contest at 2 p.m. Matawan is undefeated in three years and is currently ranked fourth nationally in the Midget Division.

In today's opener, the Mount Baldy Conference Pee Wee champion Ontario Packers squad will go against the El Cajon Kites. That game goes on at noon.

Following the Dons-Falcons clash at 4 p.m. will be the Diamond Bar Lobos meeting the Upland Rams in a Jr. Pee Wee game ,while the final game of the afternoon pits the Diamond Bar Chiefs against the Chino Broncos at 6 p.m.

Admission to MSAC for the four-game show will be $1. Tickets will be available at the gate.

'T's' cost Poly in hoop opener

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

LA MIRADA — Cal Poly basketball coach Don Hogan is taking the blame for his team's 83-80 loss in its season opener here Saturday night.

But he is taking the credit too soon.

There were certainly other factors in the Broncos' loss to host Biola but the one most apparent to the eye was the three technical fouls charged to Hogan, assistant coach Allen Van Winkle and Paul Newton on a technicality.

"That's one loss for the coach," Hogan said after the game.

But it really wasn't all that bad either as Poly's eight-man team battled back to give Biola all it can handle.

And this is considered one of Biola's top teams as the Eagles figure to be a definite contender in NAIA District Three circles.

"Potentially, this should be the best team in my four years here," Biola coach Howard Lyon said after the game.

Six new players are the main reasons why the Eagles are optimistic.

One of them certainly lives up to his name. Forward Jim Worthy, a transfer from Orange Coast College, led the way with 30 points. He made 10 of 15 field goals and 10 of 15 free throws.

Biola enjoyed a 37-32 halftime lead and extended it to 50-36 before Poly managed to battle back.

But the Eagles still held a comfortable 74-62 lead entering the final three minutes. Thanks to a sharp press, Poly was able to outscore the hosts, 10-2, within 60 seconds to narrow the gap to 76-72.

Worthy then scored a key basket on a long pass and Billy Ingram, a transfer from the University of Oregon, followed with a pair of free throws to again take command of the situation.

Center Bill Cantwell, a transfer from Long Beach City College, paced the Broncs with 20 points. Newton added 17 while another JC transfer, Dennis Weisse, contributed 13.

"Our conditioning showed tonight," Hogan said. "The pace of the game was swift and we were able to set it towards the end. Our problem is the lack of a killer's instinct. If we're going to play aggressive basketball, we must play it. We didn't play up to our potential."

Poly, which plays only four games until January, will be idle for two weeks until the University of San Diego Tournament. The Broncs are busy with final exams next week.

Wells' debut spoiled by APC, 88-68

By CURT WEBSTER
P-B Correspondent

AZUSA — The Dave Wells Era of Claremont-Mudd basketball has begun inauspiciously.

Wells' varsity coaching debut was spoiled Saturday night by the Azusa-Pacific Cougars, 88-68, at Azusa as a wild second half saw both schools lead big on occasion.

The Cougars made effective use of 30 Stag fouls, connecting on 28 of 35 attempts from the line. Claremont, meanwhile, suffered the ultimate indignity of hitting a higher percentage from the floor, 31 of 64 attempts to 30 for 72 for A-P, in the midst of a 20-point defeat.

Azusa led at the end of a relatively calm first half, 40-35, only to see a strong Stag rally opening the second half give the visitors a 10-point lead eight minutes into the period.

It was then that the Cougar scoring tandem of Ken Lunkhard and Rob Carver went to work on the Stag advantage. Lukhard, whose 20 points paced the scoring for both sides, put in 12 points in the second half, four from the free throw line. Carver scored 13 of his 17 points in the period, including nine from the line.

Center Mike Leatherby scored six consecutive free throws during Cougar comeback to round out his game total to 10. Steve Gustin, a substitute forward came off the bench for 11 points, while guard Myron Lutz scored 10 in a substitute role.

Melugin rescues MSAC

By MIKE RAWLINSON
P-B Staff Writer

WHITTIER — Gary Melugin, a sophomore froward from Ganesha High, has the knack of being in the right place at the right time.

Friday night he ignited Mt. San Antonio College's second half rally in a 77-76 victory over Glendale, Saturday night he provided the points for the margin of victory over Rio Hondo here in overtime, 68-64.

Melugin hit buckets on driving layups at 1:20 and 0:41 of the overtime period to break a 64-64 tie and give MSAC its third win in as many games this season. He had six of the Mounties eight points in overtime.

Melugin finished with 18 points, but high point honors went to forward George Schader who popped in 21 before he left the game on his fifth personal foul with 3:47 remaining in regulation time.

MSAC's chances of keeping its four-point, 57-53 lead at that point looked bleak without Schader, who has led the team in scoring in each of its three victories.

And so it happened that Rio Hondo made-up the difference and went ahead, 60-59, on a steal and layup by forward John Leichenring with less than a minute to play in regulation.

The Mounties tied the score at 60-all on a two-shot foul by Rio Hondo's Alan Dollar who sent MSAC's Jeff Nelson to the free throw line with eight seconds remaining.

Nelson, a freshman guard who prepped at San Dimas High, missed the first free throw but sank the second to send the teams into overtime.

Also in double figures for MSAC was center Duaine Harding with 14. Pokorski had six points and led the team with six rebounds. Rio Hondo out-boarded MSAC, 30-24.

The Mounties shot at a 55 per cent rate from the field for the game and hit 28 of 48 chances from the free throw line.

High for Rio Hondo was guard Kirk Palmer who scored 16 points — 12 in the first half. Leichenring finished with 12 as did Doug Sumpter.

The Mounties return to action next weekend, hosting San Bernardino Friday and San Bernardino Saturday. Both games are scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m.

Chapman pulls away to defeat La Verne

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

Chapman College broke open a close game in the second half and defeated La Verne College, 86-66, going away.

The Panthers (2-0) were simply too quick and too aggressive for the Leos (1-1) as La Verne unveiled the Supertent, the new all-purpose facility, for basketball.

Don Carter scored the first basket of the second half to pull the Leopards within three points, 42-39. But they couldn't get any closer.

The Leos stalled at 47 points for three minutes and 40 seconds without scoring a point. When guard Reggie Dantzler made his sixth steal and scored, it gave the visitors a 20-point lead, 67-47, with 13:05 left in the game. And it was all over for the Leopards.

"We haven't really played as well as we can," said Chapman coach Rich Rider. "We run up quite a few points quickly and then try to coast. We adjusted at halftime and shut Gillette off and that was the key to the game."

Leo coach Art Bias expressed dis-satisfaction with La Verne's movement.

"Except for the beginning of last (Friday) night's game, we haven't been moving well," Bias said. "That's our main problem. We're not going to go anywhere until we do get some movement. They're a good-shooting team. But we made 'em look better than they are."

Chapman shot 48.7 per cent (38 of 78) to La Verne's 42.2 (27 of 64). But the Leos turned over the ball 28 times as Dantzler and Mike Adams combined for nine steals.

The Leos face Azusa Pacific at 9:30 p.m. Thursday at the University of Redlands in the opening round of the annual tournament.

Chapman hosts Westmont Tuesday, then travels to Colorado St. Friday and Wyoming Saturday.

Owls triumph

The Owls overcame 23 first-half turnovers to outgun the Leopards' J.V. squad in a game played at the La Verne "Super Tent". Citrus forward Ordall Newkirk led Owl scorers with 24 points, while fellow forward Roland Albright added 20.

However, top scorer on the game was Leo guard Wendell Meyers who kept La Verne in the contest with 25 markers. Wayne Smith contributed 11 points in a losing effort for La Verne.

Chaffey was swamped by Moorpark at Chaffey College, as former Chino High star Tim Smith led all scorers with 23 points for the victors.

Moorpark had a big edge in rebounds, 46-23, and the visitors received 32 points from guards Jon Gonce and Dan Gedies. Russ Williams led Panther scoring with 18 markers.

Citrus advances its record to 2-0 on the young season with Saturday's victory, while Chaffey falls to a 0-2 ledger.

'Hens ripped by Westmont five, 109-63

SANTA BARBARA — Westmont College took early control of the basketball game Saturday night against Pomona-Pitzer College, hitting for 10 points before its opponents could score and then going on to an easy 109-62 victory.

Westmont led all the way, taking an early lead that ended with a 45-25 advantage at the half.

The Warriors' hard-pressing defense caused numerous Pomona-Pitzer turnovers. Westmont outrebounded its opponents 76 to 51 and outshot them 40 per cent to 34 per cent.

Baylor wins to nab S.W. title

WACO, Tex. (UPI) — By the simple expediency of giving the ball to Steve Beaird early and often, the Baylor Bears rolled to a 24-3 win over Rice Saturday and completed their most historic weekend ever as owners of the Southwest Conference title.

Baylor and already wrapped up a Cotton Bowl berth Jan. 1 againt Penn State and at least a share of the crown Friday when Texas throttled Texas A&M, 32-3, but needed a win over the Owls to wrap up its first undisputed league crown in 50 years.

Beaird became the first 1,000-yard runner in the 76-year history of Baylor football and eclipsed a conference record for most carries in a single season as well as scoring the first Bears touchdown — the only one they needed.

Sooners rally

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Flashy Joe Washington returned a punt 57 yards for one score and zipped five yards for another in a sudden five-touchdown outburst that gave unbeaten Oklahoma, trailing by three points late in the third quarter, a 44-13 victory over Oklahoma State Saturday.

Scomer quarterback Steve Davis scored on runs of 12 and one yards, halfback Grant Burget scored from the four, freshman halfback Elvis Peacock ran 10 yards to score and Tony Dirienzo kicked a 3-yard field goal.

The Cowboys, leading 13-10 with less than three minutes left in the third period, got field goals of 53 and 33 yards from Abby Daigle and a two-yard touchdown run from halfback Leonard Thompson.

Navy rolls

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Navy, led by the record breaking running of senior halfback Cleveland Cooper and aided by three costly Army miscues, powered its way to a 19-0 victory Saturday over the Cadets in the 75th annual service classic attended by President Ford and a disappointing crowd of 83,247.

Navy turned a poor Army punt, a fumble and a broken play into a field goal, a touchdown and a safety in the nationally-televised game. Cooper rushed for 105 yards to become the only back ever to gain over 100 yards in three consecutive years of the traditional rivalry.

Florida romps

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Quarterback Jimmy Fisher threw a 26-yard touchdown pass to split end Wes Chandler and running back Jimmy Dubose and James Richards added two more scores Saturday to lead Sugar Bowl-bound Florida to a 31-7 win over arch rival Miami.

The victory sends Florida into its New Year's Eve bowl clash with Nebreaska with an 8-3 record, the Gators' best record since 1969.

Vols tie Vandy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Tennessee tailback Stanley Morgan scored a touchdown with seven seconds left Saturday and the Vols made the two-point conversion to salvage a 21-21 tie with Southeastern Conference rival Vanderbilt.

The Vols got the ball on a fumble by Vandy Punter Barry Burton, who bobbled a high snap in a steady rainfall, and Tennessee tackled him at the 10 as he tried to recover. On the next play, Morgan dashed to the Commodore one, and after losing two yards on the next play, he raced in for the touchdown.

Georgia upset

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Sophomore David Sims and quarterback Danny Myers scored two touchdowns each in a heavy downpour to lead fired-up Georgia Tech to a 34-14 upset of the Georgia Bulldogs.

The victory gave Tech a 6-5 record and Pepper Rodgers a winning season in his first year as head coach at his alma mater, a campaign that began with a nationally televised embarrassment at the hands of Notre Dame.

Tulsa coasts

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Missouri Valley champion Tulsa scored on a fumble recovery by James Stewart in the end zone in the first five seconds of play Saturday and went on to whip Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl-bound Houston 30-14, for the Hurricane's seventh straight win.

Tulsa, capitalizing on four Houston fumbles, also scored on a one-foot plunge and an 87-yard run by fullback Thomas Bailey, an eight-yard run by tailback Freddie Carolina and a 37-yard field goal by Arthur Bennet.

Scots' Sorenson wins CIF 2-A harrier title

By KEVIN CLOE
P-B Staff Writer

Mark Sorenson didn't call it his finest performance. But in the record books it'll show that it was.

The Upland High senior, in a mild upset, claimed the 1974 CIF 2-A cross country individual title Saturday afternoon at Mt. San Antonio College.

He won the title, which was supposedly reserved for Gahr High's Jim Arriola, with a time of 10:29.6 over MSAC's hilly two-mile-plus course.

"I thought I ran stronger in the league meet," Sorenson related. "I didn't think I had it won until I was five yards from the finish line. In fact, it really didn't hit me until I was out on the track afterwards."

Sorenson had a disappointing showing in the prelims last weekend, finishing 14th in his race with a time of 11:00. In the league finals, Mark won the title with a 10:36 clocking.

What was just as impressive was Pomona High's Barry Boettcher's third place finish in 10:35, only two seconds behind El Dorado's Paul O'Neil. Boettcher, only a junior, was runnerup to Sorenson in the San Antonio League finals this year.

"That's pretty good," smiled Boettcher. "Two guys from our league finished in the top three."

Arriola was the favorite of the race after Laguna Beach's Eric Hulst passed up the CIF finals in order to compete in an AAU meet in Belmont Saturday. The Gahr representative was right up with the leaders when he fell and didn't finish about a half mile from the end of the race.

"I didn't see what happened to him," revealed Sorenson. "I passed him on the loop and was talking to him — not trying to psych him out — and then all of a sudden he wasn't there."

Boettcher was along side Arriola when he fell and reported, "As soon as I caught up with him he fell to the ground like he was shot."

San Marino won the 2-A team title with 69 points, while Upland finished third with 108 behind Mission Viejo's 76.

One of the disappointing performances of the day came from the San Dimas team which finished last in the division. The Saints had the second fastest team time in 2-A going into the meet.

Ralph Serna of Loara won the individual title in the 4-A with a time of 10:03.1, while Palos Verdes won the team title with 78 points. Torrance was second with 87 and San Gorgonio third with 104.

Chaffey High's Tim Mattison placed eighth in the race with a time of 10:29.

Loyola's Gary McCrosky won the 3-A individual title with a time of 10:15.1, while Lowell won the team title with 54 points — ahead of Bishop Amat's 79.

LaSalle's Sean Green (10:30) and Sherman Indian (45 points) were the title winners in 1-A.

USC comes back to win, 55-24

USC will take a 9-1-1 record against Ohio State in the Rose Bowl. The Trojans have been just super in winning their final four games in an easy fashion after the surprising 15-15 tie against California.

It's still possible for the Trojans to win the United Press International version of the national championship by defeating Ohio State while hoping Notre Dame (9-2) can upset undefeated Alabama in the Orange Bowl.

Oklahoma has obviously taken the No. 1 spot in the Associated Press poll.

For awhile, it appeared like USC would be lucky to still be breathing after its start Saturday.

Notre Dame struck first when fullback Wayne Bullock, who suffered a leg injury later in the game, scored on a two-yard run five plays after Drew Mahalic intercepted a Haden pass.

USC then gambled on a fourth down-and-one situation on its own 29 and failed when Mahalic stopped Haden for a loss.

On the next play, Clements passed 29 yards to Demmerle for the touchdown and a 14-0 lead.

USC didn't have as big a statistics lead as the score indicates. The Trojans rolled up 400 total yards against the nation's best defensive team (174.7 yards per game) while the Irish picked up 367, 257 in the first half.

Haden completed 11 of 17 passes for 225 yards while Clements hit on 14 of 22 for 180 yards with three interceptions, all by Phillips.

Davis didn't have that big of a day as far as total rushing yardage is concerned with 48 on 18 carries but he set a NCAA record and extended three Pacific-8 Conference marks.

The kickoff return run was Davis' sixth of his career for a NCAA mark he formerly shared with Stan Brown of Purdue (1970). Four of A.D.'s kickoff returns for TDs were scored against the Irish.

A.D. extended his Pac-8 marks for career touchdowns (now 32), points (314) and rushing (3,657).

Haden set a USC career passing record for most touchdiwn passes with his four to give him 31, bettering the mark of 30 set by Jimmy Jones in 1971.

Valdes keeps WBC crown with knockout

PARIS (UPI) — World Boxing Council middleweight champion Rodrigo Valdes of Colombia knocked out Frenchman Gratien Tonna in the 11th round of their title fight Saturday night, hammering the challenger with combinations that left both his eyes cut and bleeding.

The 25-year-old Frenchman fought Valdes almost blow for blow through seven rounds of their scheduled 15-rounder. But then the Colofbian's heavy advantage in experience and speed began to take its toll.

After Tonna was counted out there was some confusion as the Frenchman's corner argued that Valdes had kept punching after referee Jean Deswert ordered the fighters to break.

It was the 27-year-old Colombian's first WBC title defense since he won the crown in May.

The NFL roundup

AFC East champ two weeks away

By United Press International

The American Football Conference Eastern Division race is such a muddle now that it's going to take two weeks to start sorting it out—and even that might not be enough.

The Miami Dolphins seemed well on their way to their fourth consecutive AFC East title before they were jolted last Sunday by the New York Jets. The loss dropped Miami back into a tie with Buffalo for the lead at 8-3 and gave New England new life at 7-4.

The remaining three weeks will tell the story—whether Miami can continue on its way toward a record third consecutive Super Bowl triumph or whether the Dolphins just might not even make the playoffs. It's possible.

Buffalo is a big favorite over Baltimore today and New England is playing an Oakland team that already has clinched and isn't interested in getting anyone hurt before the playoffs. Miami, meanwhile, has a Monday night date with the tough and desperate Cincinnati Bengals, who are struggling to remain in the playoff race themselves.

The Bengals trail Pittsburgh by 1½ games in the AFC Central but even more importantly in the NFL mathematics game, they are tied with New England at 7-4 and are in danger of losing out as a wild card or best runnerup since they trail both Buffalo and Miami. The Miami-Cincinnati loser could also wind up bowing out of the playoffs.

"It was disturbing to let the Jets game slip away," said Miami Coach Don Shula, whose club was beaten by a Joe Namath pass with five minutes left. "This puts us back where we were two weeks ago, tied with Buffalo. We have to realize we haven't won or qualified and there are only three games left to do it in."

The NFC East race is almost as muddled. St. Louis holds a comfortable 1½-game edge over Washington, which lost to Dallas 24-23 on Thursday. The Redskins are one up on Dallas and it would take a small miracle for the Cowboys to overtake Washington for a wild card berth.

Minnesota leads Green Bay by a game in the NFC Central and Detroit, which lost 31-27 to Denver Thursday, missed out on a golden opportunity to gain ground. Both Western titles have been decided, with Los Angeles joining Oakland as division champion.

Other action today finds Kansas City at St. Louis, Los Angeles at Atlanta, Houston at Pittsburgh, New Orleans at Minnesota, Green Bay at Philadelphia, San Diego at the Jets, the New York Giants at Chicago and San Francisco at Cleveland.

Buffalo's O.J. Simpson needs just 63 yards to top the 1,000-yard mark for the season. Denver's Otis Armstrong became the first NFL runner to go over the 1,000 mark Thursday when he gained 144 yards and pushed his season's total to 1,082.

New England's Mack Herron has 1,869 yards total offense and is making a run at the 2,440-yard mark of Chicago's Gale Sayers set in 1966.

The bottom honor—the No.1 college draft pick—also will be decided in the final three weeks. Atlanta, Baltimore and the Giants all are 2-9, worst record in the league.

Big Ten ADs may change bowl policy

CHICAGO (UPI) — Big Ten athletic directors and faculty representatives could devise a formula this week for picking a conference Rose Bowl representative —and possibly for allowing more than one team to play in post-season games.

The athletic directors' Rose Bowl Selection Procedure Committee will deliver a report to the annual three-day joint fall meeting of the directors and faculty group beginning Monday in Chicago.

The agenda includes a long list of topics, but the most discussed issue undoubtedly will be the Rose Bowl, a controversy stirred up again last week when the athletic directors were forced to fly to Chicago to vote on whether to send Ohio State or Michigan to the New Year's Day classic.

Michigan coach Bo Schembechler, who has seen his team tie for three straight championships and compile a 30-2-1 record without getting a bowl trip, has led the fight for a rules change, calling for set criteria for determining the Rose Bowl delegate without a vote. He also wants to see more than one Big Ten team play in a bowl game. Several other coaches have expressed similar sentiments.

Schembechler's most vociferous complaints have dealt with the lack of decision-making machinery for picking the Rose Bowl team in close races. He says the conference should specify what each team must do in a showdown contest to win the bowl bid. This year, Michigan lost 12-10 in the season finale at Ohio State, but still tied the Buckeyes for the league title and the decision was left to the judgment of the directors.

Ohio State, which has made the trip to Pasadena ever since the Big Ten repealed its "no repeat" rule in 1973, was awarded a third straight trip in a secret vote by the athletic directors.

In 1973, when Michigan and Ohio State tied 10-10 for the league title, the Buckeyes also got the nod in a vote among athletic directors. Supporters of a change in the rules argue that in the case of a tie, the Rose Bowl team should either be decided on a coin flip or by eliminating the team which last had a Rose Bowl trip.

Lewis is early favorite

Lewis, twice a challenger for Jose Napoles' world welterweight championship, is listed as a 10-8 choice.

Muniz is prepping at Gilman Hot Springs but will return to town five days before the bout.

Tickets, priced at $10, $7.50 and $5, are on sale at The Forum and all Ticketron agencies.

Hacienda League teams scattered

Preps open cage season

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Staff Writer

Thanksgiving has passed, football gear has been put away at most of the high schools and decorations are springing up all over announcing seasons greetings — all which means basketball season has arrived.

Within the next week, all eight Hacienda League teams will begin their 1974-75 cage campaigns against nonleague opposition.

Alta Loma, Ontario and Bonita will be the valley's H.L. representatives in the 15th Annual Upland-Montclair Basketball Tournament, which begins Tuesday afternoon.

San Dimas High opens its season Monday at Baldwin Park High in a 3:15 p.m. game and returns to the courts Wednesday at 8 p.m. by hosting La Sierra. The Saints conclude the week by visiting Damien for an 8 p.m. encounter Friday.

Walnut High has three games scheduled this week beginning with Bell Gardens on the Mustang court at 3:15 p.m. Tuesday. Thursday, Bill Murray's crew hosts Rowland High and Friday is the annual Faculty game. Both games start at 8 p.m.

Most of the teams have engaged in scrimmages so the coaches have ideas as to who or who will not be seeing most of the action in the early going.

Teams like Bonita and Royal Oak will be at a disadvantage until the league begins in January because of the CIF football playoffs, where some cage performers have seen gridiron duty.

This year's Hacienda League should be more balanced than ever. All six local league entries appear to be going through rebuilding years which gives defending champion Walnut the early season edge to repeat as champs.

Murray, who coached Walnut to a 26-3 season last year, has just three returning lettermen but expects a successful season because of five newcomers up from last year's very fine junior varsity team (19-2).

The newcomers are a pair of 6-5 seniors, Jay Wetzel and Kenyon Hoover; Scott Stowell, a 6-4 senior; and guards Robert Cox and Tom Thompson.

Bonita (5-18 last season) has six returning lettermen with Harold Drake, Scott Johnson, Steve Sly, Russ Tyner, Dave Drury and Larry Franco while Dale Dyck (6-1, 160-pound, Jr.) is the top newcomer.

Bearcat coach Remi Tremblay expects to start very slow as Drake, Johnson, Drury and Franco are all starters on the football team participating in the CIF playoffs. The Bonita skipper feels the club will be representable in league play.

Ontario High has just two returning lettermen — James Donaldson and Joe Jefferson, who is recovering from a broken leg — as well as a new head coach in Larry Larson.

Larson will be trying to revamp his Jaguars (6-16 last year) with the return of Jefferson and the "maturity of a host of rookies." The rookies are Dan Pearce, a forward-center, and three guards; Roy Bornholdt, Larry Salazar and Fred Vigil.

Alta Loma could offer Walnut the toughest resistance. Coach Jeff McCall has four returning lettermen back from last year's 11-15 club. His veterans are Roger Gubichuk, Anthony Vasquez and a pair of big men (6-4) in Andy Armstrong and Tom Erbstoesser.

"We look forward to a good season," said McCall. "We have four strong lettermen returning and a solid group of additional players moving. Barring injuries, we hope to have a fine year."

San Dimas High could be in for another tough season. Coach Bob Espinoza has only two lettermen from last year's 10-12 club and gives no indication of outstanding newcomer material.

Miller to be given 'Pro Golfer' honor

By PHIL ROCHE
P-B Staff Writer

JOHNNY MILLER, winner of eight tournaments and a record $351,321 in 1974, will be honored as Pro Golfer of The Year by Western writers and sportscasters Monday, Jan. 6, at La Costa Resort Hotel, Spa and Country Club.

Miller was a unanimous selection in voting by the sports media in California, Nevada, Arizona, Utah, Oregon and Washington.

The personable Miller will play a few holes with the writers and sportscasters and later will be guest of honor at a dinner.

It will be a homecoming for Miller to the site of one of his major victories. Last April he won the prestigious $200,000 MONY (Mutual of New York) Tournament of Champions at the rugged La Costa course.

The former BYU All American became the first man ever to win the first three tournaments of the year, the Crosby, Phoenix and Dean Martin-Tucson. He added the Heritage Classic and the lucrative Westchester Classic and World Open and concluded with the Kaiser International on the Silverado course, a wedge shot from his home.

Miller's eight victories were the most since Arnold Palmer's eight in 1960. Only Sam Snead, 10 in 1950, and Byron Nelson, 19 in 1945, have won more.

Allard Roen, chairman of the MONY Tournament of Champions, and Jim Bingay, president of Mutual of New York, will be hosts of the day.

Previous recipients of Pro of The Year honor have been Billy Casper, 1968; Orville Moody, 1969; Jack Nicklaus, 1970 and 1972; Lee Trevino, 1971, and Tom Weiskopf, 1973.

ED FORES shot a sharp 75 last week at San Dimas Canyon to win low gross honors in the La Verne Chamber of Commerce tournament. Tied for second place were Brian Banker and Phil Roche, who fired 80s over the par 72 course. Gordon Curtis was third with an 81.

Judy Tinko with 104 won low gross for the women.

Howard Townsend won first place in the men's Callaway division. Tied for second were Ray Kaldenbach and Ken MacKirdy. Irma Sink won the women's Callaway division.

Tied for first place in the men's handicap section were Bill Flores and Ray Guturrez with 68s. At 69 was Jim Lorthridge and Jim Kelly followed with a 71.

Bill Kirkeby was tournament director.

RAMON RIVERA set a new course record at the South Course, Pomona National, when he sizzled to a 64, eight under par, to win the Western Airlines tournament recently.

David R. Foster, Colgate-Palmolive Co. president, has announced that the fourth annual Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle LPGA Championship, the richest tournament in women golf history, will be held April 17-20, 1975, at the Mission Hills Club in Palm Springs with total prize money of $200,000 and a first prize of $32,000.

The finals on the last two days of the four-day, 72-hole championship will be nationally telecast by the ABC Television Network.

The executive announced that the first place winner will take home a 1975 Chrysler Cordoba in addition to the Tiffany trophy and the check for $32,000.

The LPGA purse for the four days of championship play is $180,000, with second through fifth place prizes of $21,000, $14,000, $10,000 and $7,500. All players finishing in the top 34 places will win more than $1,000.

In announcing the 1975 Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle Championship, Foster stated, "We are gratified by the public's response to our Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle Championship. We are especially pleased that our tournament is helping to promote the game of golf and women's golf in particular.

The Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle Championship has been won by the following LPGA champions: 1972—Jane Blalock ($20,000 first prize); 1973—Mickey Wright ($25,000 first prize); 1974—Jo Ann Prentice ($32,000 first prize)

WILLIE MAYS, Brooks Robinson and Ron Santo, all solid bets eventually to be inducted into Baseball's Hall of Fame, share another distinction; They're the only ones to compete in every American Airlines Golf Classic.

Tournament chairman Thomas J. Ross Jr said the gifted athletes will stretch their record to nine straight years in the 1975 Classic, which will be played Jan. 31-Feb. 2 at Canyon Hotel Racquet & Golf Club.

The $30,000 Classic is a 54-hole partner best ball competition in which one baseball and football star are teamed. First prize is $10,000, which the partners split.

UP AND COMING EVENTS . . . Pro-Am Golf Association Tijuana Open at Tijuana, Mex. Country Club, Dec. 3-6. Guaranteed purse, $15,000 . . . Riverside City championship, Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 7-8 at Springbrook Golf Course . . .

Heisman will likely go to Griffin Tuesday

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Heisman Trophy, the most sought-after award in college football, will be given for the 40th consecutive year Tuesday and for the first time since 1963 a junior is a clear-cut favorite to win the bronze statue.

Archie Griffin of Ohio State, who has been thrilling fans with his dazzling runs since his freshman year, has emerged as the likely winner of the 25-pound trophy, symbolic of the nation's outstanding college football player. If the Buckeyes' tailback is selected he will be the first underclassman to earn that honor since Roger Staubach of Navy in 1963.

Only four underclassmen ever have won the Heisman, with Doc Blanchard of Army (1945), Doak Walker of SMU (1948) and Vic Janowicz of Ohio State (1950) joining Staubach. All were juniors and none ever repeated.

Griffin's credentials are certainly impeccable. The 5-foot-9 halfback has rushed for more than 100 yards in 22 consecutive games, an NCAA record, and this season averaged more than 150 yards rushing a game. But he is by no means a shoo-in for the award. The balloting is conducted among more than 1,000 sports writers and sportscasters from across the country and many feel compelled to vote for seniors ahead of juniors.

For example, in 1967 O.J. Simpson, then a junior, was easily the most outstanding player in the country but finished second in the balloting to Gary Beban of UCLA, even though Beban's senior year wasn't as eventful as his junior season. Beban had finished fourth in the voting the year before and many voters felt compelled to reward the Bruin quarterback for his consistency over three seasons.

For that reason Griffin can expect some competition from seniors Anthony Davis of Southern California, Tom Clements of Notre Dame and David Humm of Nebraska, all of whom have distinguished themselves over a three-year period.

Davis, a star as a sophomore but riddled with injuries last year, has had an exceptional senior year. The 5-foot-9 tailback has averaged better than 130 yards rushing per game and has already broken the Pacific Eight records for total rushing yards, touchdowns and points.

Clements and Humm have both been starting quarterbacks for three seasons and have led their teams to high national rankings in each of those years. Under Clements the Irish have posted a 27-3 record, while Nebraska has gone 26-7-2 behind Humm, one of the most gifted passers ever to play in the Big Eight Conference.

One other junior, Joe Washington of Oklahoma, has an outside chance. The 5-9 halfback, who has averaged better than 130 yards per game, would probably have been an even bigger threat had his school not been barred from television appearances because of its probationary status. Doing well on television has proved very beneficial to recipients in recent years.

The concentration of voting also has a lot to do with the final outcome. The Downtown Athletic Club, which sponsors the award, tries to choose an equal number of voters from each section of the country, but for some reason final returns are always heavier in the South and Southwest regions.

In 1971, for example, Ed Marinaro of Cornell was the top vote-getter in three of the five geographical regions of the country, but Auburn's Pat Sullivan won because he captured the South and Southwest where voting was more heavily concentrated.

Linemen never have done very well in the voting, and there are none this year who figure to make much of a dent. No interior lineman has ever won the award, although two ends—Clint Frank of Yale in 1937 and Leon Hart of Notre Dame in 1949—were recipients.

In recent years the Heisman Trophy usually has meant a multi-year, six-figue pro contract for the college senior who won it.

'Dogfight of the century'

French-U.S. battle over jet is worth billions

By GEORGE SIBERA

PARIS (UPI) — France and the United States are involved in a no-holds-barred duel for jetfighter contracts worth billions of dollars.

Because the aircraft industry is ailing in Europe as well as in the United States, defeat could mean the closing of many aircraft plants and unemployment for thousands of workers.

Dubbed "the dogfight of the century" by the experts, the contest basically involves France's Dassault-Breguet producer of the Mirage jetfighters and two top American makers of warplanes, General Dynamics and Northrop Corp.

Sweden also is in the running but its Saab Viggen may be scratched from the race because of testing mishaps and because the Swedes for unexplained reasons have failed to generate a big sales effort.

No one can claim absolute superiority for the General Dynamics YF16, the Northrop YF17, the Mirage F1M53 or the Saab Viggen '37, a Western aviation expert said, because all four are top quality jets and their characteristics are similar.

The American competitors have a clear edge over the Europeans in the use of new light materials for the planes' bodies, but the Dassault Mirage is superior in experience. It is an advanced outgrowth of a long family of warplanes which has proved tops in past Middle East fighting.

At stake is the sale of 340 to 370 planes worth $2 billion to the Dutch, Belgian, Norwegian and Danish air forces. But whoever swings the deal may sell "ten times as many planes to other countries, thus gaining a contract actually valued in advance at $20 billion," a French air force spokesman said.

Stehlin, French air force chief of staff from 1960 to 1963, told President Valery Giscard d'Estaing that France, and Europe, couldn't compete with the United States in aviation and had best seek close cooperation with the Americans.

Stehlin resigned as vice president of the National Assembly in the face of an unusual nationalistic outcry against his criticism of the Mirages.

Mirage builder Marcel Dassault, 82, immediately challenged General Dynamics, Northrop and Saab to a simulated photocamera dogfight. The Americans picked up the challenge and the dogfight of the century may yet be staged, but for the moment both the American and the French jets are still in the testing stage.

Following are the basic features of the competing aircraft:

—Mirage F1M53: Maximum weight at takeoff 24,662 lbs., can carry four tons of external charge. Jet engine: M53, of 8.5 tons of thrust which will eventually be brought to a 10-ton power thrust. Speed Mach 2.2. Armaments: guns andmissiles produced by Matra. Radar: Cyrano by Tomson-CSF.

—General Dynamics YF16: Single seater still in testing stage, takeoff weight 17,464 lbs. Powered by F100 Pratt & Whitney engine of 11.3 tons thrust. Speed Mac 2 (twice the speed of sound). Armaments: guns and air-to-air missiles.

—Northrop's Cobra YF17: Single stater still in testing stage. Maximum takeoff weight 20,955 lbs. Powered by two General Electric Jets YJ101 of 6.8 tons of thrust each. Armaments: one gun and air-to-air missiles.

—Saab Viggen: All-weather interceptor, Mach 2 speed. Engine develops 12.7-ton thrust, weight 17 tons including 6 tons of external weapons including missiles and Swiss-made Oerlikon 30 mm cannon.

U.S. experts contend the American planes are superior because they use the latest technological know-how. Northrop says its plane outperforms the others because its twin engines develop 50 per cent more thrust, a decisive edge in modern, swirling air combat.

Both the YF16 and YF17 are already flying and the Pentagon must choose between them early next year for a new U.S. lightweight combat plane.

The French Mirage F1M53 is still in the prototype stage. The engine has been successfully tested aboard a Caravelle jetliner and the first F1M53

The Americans claim their technology is so advanced that there is no comparison with the French aircraft. The French assert they possess incomparably more advanced radar and weapons systems that even the score.

The big question is not the Western jets' performance against each other but against the latest Soviet product, the mystery MIG23 jetfighter.

The Soviet jet is doing better than Mach 2.2 and, according to Western experts, the Russians are rapidly modifying its armaments to take into account lessons learned in the 1967 war. In that war Israel's American-built Phantoms and French Mirages of the now obsolete Mirage III type outwitted the slow, Soviet-built, plane-to-plane rockets.

Plain Talk.

Dairy farmers like plain talk...and we think you do too.

I'm Floris Ykema, a dairy farmer and chairman of the California Milk Advisory Board. Maybe this isn't the greatest way to talk to you, and what I have to say isn't the easiest thing to talk about. But the time has come when all of us on this state advisory board feel it is necessary to speak directly to you, the people of California.

For months now, all California dairy farmers have been up against extraordinary problems and have faced a number of unfair accusations. Most of it has to do with our rising production costs and the rising retail prices you pay for milk.

Please let me tell you the dairy farmer's side of the story. Inflation threatens me—it threatens my fellow dairymen—just as it threatens you.

First, a little history. Since the late 1930's, milk prices have been under state regulation. This came about because of chaotic conditions which were destroying our industry—doing great harm to us and to all California consumers who depended on a reliable milk supply.

Today, milk is still under pricing regulations. These prices are determined by the California Department of Food and Agriculture by monitoring the average operating costs of dairymen statewide. Minimum prices are determined by the Department at three levels: the price paid to farmers, the price paid to processors and distributors, and the minimum price a retailer can charge you.

Are these prices high? Yes. But so is everything else.

Relatively speaking, California retail milk prices are lower than almost any place in the United States (on the average, 71¢ a half-gallon here versus 77.3¢ nationally).

We dairymen have always prided ourselves on our ability to find ways to fight rising costs through increased efficiency. But in these unusual times our expenses keep going up faster and faster. In just 24 months, using the latest available figures, the average cost of producing milk across the state has gone up 67.8%. During the same period the average price we receive for this milk has only increased 48.7%.

No matter how hard we try, we have been unable to keep up with higher feed costs, labor costs and other overhead items. I know this as a dairy farmer and as a friend of many other dairymen.

I have seen many of my fellow dairymen forced out of business during the past few months. The Board I represent is looking for ways to stop this. To help keep the sale of our product stable, we advertise with a well-known slogan, "Milk Has Something For Every Body." The program is funded by a tax paid entirely by dairy farmers.

The California Milk Advisory Board has never contributed a single penny to any politician or party. The Board has not been involved in any way with the national issue concerning campaign contributions.

We dairymen want to keep doing this work we love and keep our family farms intact. Many of these farms have been in our families for generations. We have never—and will never—ask for anything more than a fair return from our investments and our efforts.

Dairy farmers aren't perfect. We've got our shortcomings. But we're working hard and steadily to improve.

In plain talk, we're hurting because of inflation and skyrocketing production costs.

The California Milk Advisory Board plans to bring you more information in the near future on the state of the industry. In the meantime, the Board would like to hear any comments you might have.

STILL BEING BUILT — Modular homes, heralded a few years ago as a housing panacea, have all but disappeared from the news. They have not, however, disappeared from the construction scene. The Deltona Corp. has produced more than 1,200 homes valued at $28 million since it entered the field three years ago. Here, Deltona home sections are lowered onto foundation at home site.

Condominiums:

Market is still booming

Like any other relatively new concept, condominium ownership may have drawbacks, said Mildred Heckmer, president of the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors.

"While many feel condominium living offers a feeling of security and neighborliness, freedom from maintenance chores and a chance to build equity with relative ease, some have reported a feeling of overcrowding or a lack of privacy and quiet."

But despite some reported difficulties, the market for condominiums is booming, she noted. Sharply higher prices for conventional homes have made condominium building and buying attractive alternatives. A condominium usually costs 25 to 30 per cent less than the identical amount of space in a detached house.

"Attractivenss of condominiums as an economical alternative is proven by the growth number of units nationally—from 235,000 in 1972 to 420,000 in 1973. And according to a survey by the Department of Housing and Urban development, half of all new homes built in 25 major metropolitan areas last year were condominiums," said Mrs. Heckmer.

"And the National Association of Home Builders estimates that condominium units will account for one fourth of all new homes built in the nation this year."

To help those entering the condominium market make satisfactory purchases, Mrs. Heckmer said the National Association of Realtors suggests the following:

—Consider your lifestyle. Will a condominium suit the way you're used to livng?

—Make sure you know what you are buying. Read the contract carefully. Check the builder's reputation.

—Make sure the management fee includes everything so you won't later be assessed for use of swimming pools or parking spaces.

—Get specifics on maintenance. Does the developer promise exterior maintenance only or is the interior maintenance included? What are your maintenance responsibilities?

—Will the builder pay full maintenance costs for completed but unsold units or will this expense be added to your costs?

—If recreation facilities are promised but not yet built, make sure the developer has the necessary permits.

—Check the developer's estimate of property taxes and fire insurance costs. If you are buying a converted apartment, ask to see actual figures on taxes, utilties and upkeep.

—Look for condominiums with soundproof walls, enclosed patios, playgrounds set far from the units. Find out what protection you have against nosiy and unruly neighbors.

—Find out if pets are permitted.

—Check the zoning around the project.

—Find out whether the developer is retaining the right to manage the project and whether residents can fire him should they find cause.

—Inspect your housing unit if you can or a model if one is completed. If only plans are available, find out precisely how big the unit is.

—Talk with present tenants about the homeowners' association. This group, with each unit owner a member, is responsible for landscaping and maintenance. If the association is badly managed, it can be a problem.

Survivors strong:

Modular homes continue despite early setbacks

By DOROTHEA BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Modular homes, heralded a few years ago as a housing panacea, have all but disappeared from the news following a shakeout that knocked out more than 100 producers in 1972 and 1973.

They have not, however, disappeared from the construction scene.

Modular building goes on, quietly, with little of the fanfare that accompanied the days of "Operation Breakthrough," the government-sponsored program of a few years ago that promised at least two thirds of all housing production in the United States would be factory-produced by the end of this decade.

The fallout rate for the pioneers was high and the losses heavy —ranging to the $50 million Stirling Homex bankruptcy. The survivors, as in any fledgling industry, have learned from the early mistakes. There are indications the industry has found a solid base and, with time, modular builders will develop increasingly acceptable design, profitable production and erection procedures, and evolve into a major factor in the construction industry.

Among today's successful operations is that of The Deltona Corp. in Florida, operating two manufactured home factories, at Bradenton and St. Augustine Shores, building for five Deltona planned communities. Seven models of one-to-four bedroom homes are being shipped.

Frank E. Mackle, III, at the helm of Deltona, said the production pace still is relatively slow. "This is deliberate," he explained. "It is designed to keep the plants healthy as Deltona shifts its construction emphasis from site built to manufactured housing."

Deltona's Manufactured Homes Division has produced more than 1,200 homes valued at more than $28 million since it entered the field three more than 60 years —a total of more than 25,000 homes —says the company's manufactured homes are helping to control costs. A new system for reinforced concrete floors makes it possible to turn out units equaling the quality of site-built houses, he said. The wood floor, preferable in the north, is not suitable for the Florida climate, requiring air space between it and ground level and being less pest proof. Of course, he said, most buyers choose to cover the floors with ample padding and plush carpeting.

Mackle is convinced there will be an even greater shift to modular structures on permanent sites now that their appearance makes them compatible with typical site-built homes.

"Our construction activity has incresed substantially over the years," Mackle said. "We've seen both sales personnel and buyers wholeheartedly accept our manufactured homes systems.

"Very few people are able to tell the difference between these homes and site-built," he said.

years ago. "Before this year is over," Mackle said, "Deltona will have converted to modular construction on all new homes priced under $32,000 at nearly all of the corporation's planned communities throughout Florida."

At full capacity the two plants are geared to produce 2,000 homes per year in a single eight-hour shift. By adding a second shift, annual output can be doubled to meet increased demand in the future.

Mackle is a strong proponent of the single family home, the old-fashioned pride of ownership. "Having a home of your own with a yard is owning a piece of America. It's really capitalism with a picket fence around it." He said Deltona plans its communities so they will grow to small city size, perhaps 35,000 to 50,000 population. It aims, Mackle said, for the atmosphere of a New England or midwestern town. While he concedes the need for high-rise and condominium construction in many areas, Mackle is optimistic for the future of the single family house.

He feels "the federal government is not paying enough attention to housing —doesn't realize what's going on. Everybody's scared to death.

Book to aid sales staff is available

The California Association of Realtors has published a new book designed to help real estate people complete transactions in today's tight money market.

The 88-page publication, titled "How to Finance Single Family Homes," was written by four Realtors and contains 25 suggested methods or formulas to help buyers overcome loan problems in financing.

The book provides ways in which a sale can be made when financing problems arise. Formulas are presented briefly to give the salesperson a range of ideas which he can use during the completion of negotiations between the buyer and seller.

The book is available at $12 from the California Association of Realtors, 505 Shatto Place, Los Angeles, 90020.

The 25 formulas are divided into these four sections: second trust deed, cash sources, existing loans, and interim financing. These formulas are practical methods which a salesperson may not readily recall in putting together a transaction, said officials.

Now $32,440:

Median home price continues to climb

The national median sales price of an existing single family home last September was $32,440, up 11.5 per cent from the same month a year ago, reports the National Association of Realtors.

In addition, unit sales of existing single family homes continued at a slow pace, up only one per cent from the previous September when sales skidded 12.2 per cent from the September, 1972, level.

Price advances fluctuated greatly on a regional basis, officials said. In the northwest, the year-to-year price rise was from 7.8 per cent to $36,850; western region, 12.9 per cent to $35,740; southern, 11 per cent to $31,980; and north central 11.8 per cent to $27,980.

By price class, September shrinkage of the number of homes available in lower price categories. For example, during last September 44.4 per cent of the homes sold were at prices ranging from under $10,000 to $29,999, with 52.8 per cent in those price ranges.

— $9,999 or under, 2.3 per cent; $10,000 to $14,999, 5.1 per cent; $15,000 to $19,999, 9.9 per cent; $20,000 to $24,999, 12.7 per cent; $25,000 to $29,999, 14.4 per cent; $30,000 to $39,999, 22.8 per cent; $40,000 to $49,999, 15.5 per cent; and $50,000 and over, 17.3 per cent.

The data submitted to the association's department of economics and research by more than 100 selected boards of Realtors throughout the nation reflect actual sales

Lewis Homes:

Financing is attracting buyers to Fontana

Financing plans are attracting buyers to two Lewis Home developments in Fontana, said Richard A. Lewis, president of Lewis Homes.

"Many families who have read about the current tight money situation are surprised when they find out we not only have funds available but we also have great interest rates and many fine plans tailored to meet the specific needs of individual families.

"We have eight per cent financing for qualified VA and FHA buyers and we also have Cal Vet and conventional financing programs available," he added.

"New home ownership is always one of the finest investments possible and our super financing makes a new home even more attractive now. Homes traditionally have had a very high rate of appreciation in value and home owners get very important tax savings as well."

Ranchos del Sol is a development of ranch-style homes built on lots of one-half acre size or larger. The homes feature air conditioning, fireplaces and wall-to-wall carpeting. The kitchens feature ranges, self-cleaning ovens, dishwashers and garbage disposals

To reach the homes, persons may take the San Bernardino Freeway to Citrus Avenue in Fontana, go south to Slover Avenue and then left on Oleander Avenue. For more information, persons may phone (714) 822-8458 during the day and (714) 623-4723 at night.

The second development, called Laurelwood, has three and four bedroom homes close to schools and shopping areas. They include air conditioning, carpets, built-in ovens, ranges, dishwashers, and garbage disposals.

The homes can be reached by taking the San Bernardino Freeway to Sierra Avenue in Fontana, going north to Randall Street, east to Laurel Avenue and then north to the model homes.

Arabs buy into W. German car manufacturer

BONN (UPI) — A Middle Eastern oil producing country has bought 14.6 per cent of the shares of Daimler-Benz, makers of Mercedes automobiles, an Economics Ministry spokesman said today.

West Germany's Quandt concern announced that it has sold "the most part" of its Daimler-Benz shares as a "long-term investment abroad."

Both Quandt and Daimler-Benz refused comment on newspaper reports that Arab oil sheikhs had bought the shares and that two Arabs would be sitting in on the next board meeting.

But an economics ministry spokesman said, "Quandt informed us that it was selling the shares to a Middle Eastern state."

He declined to identify the country but confirmed it was an oil producer.

The shares had a stock market value of $323.8 million.

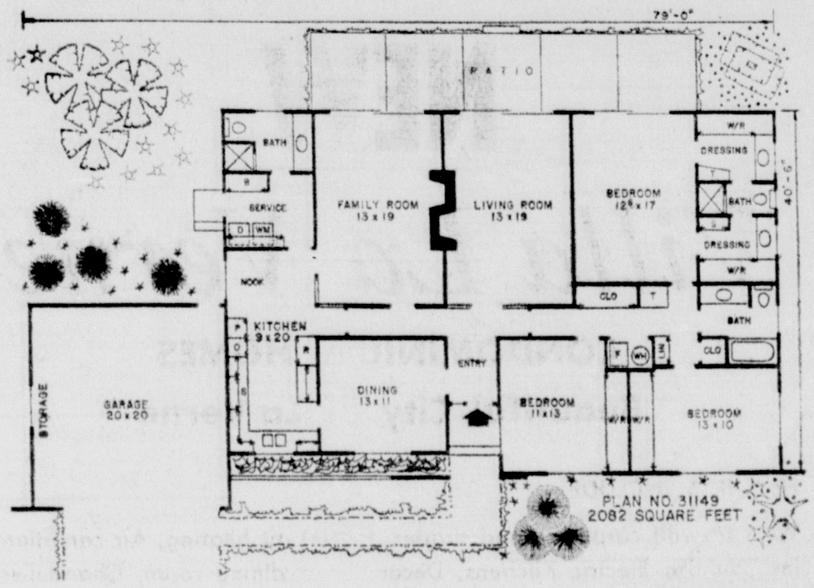
Hiawatha Estes:

House plan focuses on rear yard living



By HIAWATHA ESTES

This home offers ideas galore to help make everyday living a pleasant adventure. Privacy is just one of the many virtues of this plan. The family and living rooms, together with the master bedroom, all face the rear yard and have sliding glass doors which offer access to the patio — an invitation to completely enjoy indoor-outdoor living.

The traffic plan cannot be improved as there is access from the entry to every room of the house. There is an unusual amount of storage space. In addition to the bedroom wardrobes, numerous closets — plus a telephone table — are in the hall. The kitchen has more than ample cabinets including a floor-to-ceiling pantry. A broom closet is in the service as is a wall cabinet above the washer and dryer. There are four pullman lavatories, all of which have an abundance of storage.

Probably the most imaginative feature is the huge master bedroom suite where a private bath has been located between "Mr. and Mrs." dressing rooms. "Hers" has a dressing table while "His" has a storage closet with drawers and shelves.

Two partial walls allow just enough openness between the family room and kitchen. A spacious eating nook is in the kitchen and a formal dining room is next to the kitchen and is also accessible from the wide entry.

An attractive entry arch is in the wall which extends out from the bedroom of this handsome Spanish exterior. A planting area in front of the kitchen has been enclosed with an attractive wooden wall. Note how the horizontal wooden trim on the garage door extends across the entire front of the home.

This same basic exterior, plus a ranch exterior, are also available in a four bedroom floor plan, at a different price structure, and are illustrated in our book, Homes by Hiawatha.

Complete working drawings for plan 31149 can be purchased for $12.67 for the first set and $7.42 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until March 17, 1975. Please allow two to three weeks for delivery. A specification booklet is available for $1.06. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $1.06. The following home plan books are also available: Distinctive Homes — $1.59; Prize Homes — $1.59; Hallmark Homes — $1.59; Town & Country Homes — $1.59; Homes by Hiawatha — $1.59; Ranch & Modern Homes — $2.39. All six books — a $10.34 value — for only $8.22. Orders for less than three books, please add an extra 20c per book for postage and handling. Prices include sales tax. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-PO, Northridge, Calif. 91324.

Play the Want Ad Game
Here are the simple rules for playing the Want Ad game. Remove the page from the paper and place on card table or paste on cardboard. All the equipment needed is one die from a set of dice, plus colored buttons to use as markers. Two or more may play.
Taking turns, players place button on Start and roll the dice. When a player's marker lands on a numbered box, he follows the directions written next to corresponding number. The first player to reach or pass YOU WIN $, wins the game.
It's fun and easy, almost as easy as placing a Want Ad. You'll like the way Want Ads can dispose of your no-longer-used items taking up space around the house or garage. And you will find no greater bargains than the goods and services advertised in the Classified Section.
Whether for fun or for real, the name of the winning game is Want Ads.

Here's the truck with more bigness all around. Starting with the biggest engine in its class. A 1968cc overhead cam engine. Then there's the bed itself, 7-feet, 2-inches long. Over a foot longer than what the competition has to offer. Even the cab is bigger and roomier this year. Standard equipment includes 7.50Gx14 white sidewall tires in front, 4 speed synchromesh transmission, dual headlamps and color keyed grille.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — A solution of a pre-soak laundry product left in a porcelain sink all night will remove many marks and stains. Soak a small garment at the same time and one soak does two jobs! — JEANNINE.

DEAR POLLY — Here's a clip-and-save for overnight campers: Take along two lengths of aluminum foil to put on the ground under your sleeping bags as a protection against dampness. — MARGIE.

Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, % this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — A good case for a two-piece rod and reel can be made from the leg of an old pair of pants. Stitch the leg lengthwise to form a narrow tube. Sew one end shut and make a flap on the other end. Use buttons or snaps for fasteners. Sew a strip of material to one side for a handle. — DEAN.

DEAR POLLY — A large family can keep one perpetually short of ice cubes. One solution: Identify a glass for each member of the family or let each use a different style or color of glass. Let each take their empty glass, including remaining cubes and store it in the freezing compartment. Bonus: A nice, frosted glass! — MICHAEL.

DEAR POLLY — I am always losing or misplacing those small brushes that come with powdered eye shadow. A cotton-tipped swab makes an excellent substitute. Use the same way you would a brush, then discard after one or two applications. — KAREN.

DEAR POLLY — After doing the dishes I always put the clean ones on the bottom of any stack. Use is rotated and all stay clean.-CINDY.

© 1974 by NEA, Inc.

DEAR POLLY — Spread cat litter over grease spots on cement garage floors, let stand for quite a while, then sweep up. Repeat the process if the floor is badly stained. — DELIA.

DEAR POLLY — Since our local store is almost always out of freezer bags, I save old ones and carry one with me on each shopping trip. — MRS. T.P.

DEAR POLLY — As I put the laundry away I fold a pair of my husband's undershorts inside each undershirt. Fold the shirt lengthwise, lay the shorts on top and then roll up. Saves rummaging for underclothes and keeps the drawer neat and tidy. — MRS. R.A.

Peanuts Christmas Stickers

There's a set inside every specially marked loaf of Weber's Bread.

Now you can make your Christmas packages as nice as the presents inside them by decorating them with these free Peanuts Christmas stickers.

Inside every specially marked loaf of Weber's, The Great White Bread, there's a free set of one "To/From" sticker and two "Peanuts Christmas" stickers. There are ten different sets in all.

Ask your mom to buy a loaf or two of Weber's the next time she goes shopping. Then decorate your Christmas gift to her with the Peanuts stickers you find inside.

The Great White Bread.

MARMOSETS...

MARMOSETS ARE THE WORLD'S SMALLEST MONKEYS. NONE OF THEM GROW ANY LARGER THAN A SQUIRREL. UNLIKE MOST MONKEYS, THE MARMOSET DOES NOT USE ITS LONG TAIL AS AN EXTRA HAND TO GRASP THINGS.

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

GRAIG GROSHAN OF TUCSON, AZ, ASKS:

"HOW DOES A SIREN WORK?"

THE PARTS OF AN AIR SIREN THAT MAKE THE SOUND ARE A CASE AND A CYLINDER. THE CYLINDER FITS INSIDE THE CASE. WHEN THE FIREMAN PUSHES THE BUTTON, AN ELECTRIC MOTOR SPINS THE CYLINDER. FAN BLADES ON THE SPINNING CYLINDER PUSH AIR INTO THE SIREN. THE CYLINDER AND CASE CONTAIN A NUMBER OF HOLES. WHEN THE HOLES IN THE SPINNING CYLINDER ARE LINED UP WITH THE HOLES IN THE SIREN CASE, PUFFS OF AIR ESCAPE AND CAUSE SOUND VIBRATIONS - AND YOU HEAR THE LOUD, WAILING NOISE. THE FASTER THE CYLINDER SPINS, THE LOUDER THE SIREN.

'RED BADGE OF COURAGE'

Richard Thomas of The Waltons stars in "The Red Badge of Courage," a 90-minute NBC World Premiere Movie (Tuesday, 8:30PM) based on the classic novel by Stephen Crane, about a young Union soldier's determined struggle to conquer fear when he first enters Civil War battle. He flees his first battle in terror but later finds within himself the seeds of heroism and manhood. Featured with Richard Thomas are Michael Brandon as the Tall Soldier, Wendell Burton as the Loud Soldier, Lee De Broux as a tough sergeant, Charles Aidman as a mortally wounded soldier, and Warren Berlinger as a happy-go-lucky soldier. The Special was filmed in Arizona near the town of Patagonia on the Mexican border, a site that duplicates in almost every respect that of the Chancellorsville battlefield in Virginia.

'THE WILD PLACES'

Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward stress the importance of our unspoiled lands to the future of America as they take viewers to some of this nation's most majestic natural regions—from the icy peaks of Alaska to the tree-capped Presidential mountain range in New Hampshire's White Mountain National Forest—during "The Wild Places," an NBC Special, Monday at 8PM. They are accompanied by two of their daughters—Lissy, 13, and Clea, 9—as they hike along trails and even go for a canoe ride. They also visit with experts on ecology, including naturalists, a wildlife biologist, a forester and conservationists.

LONESOME GEORGE

George Gobel, guest star on the John Denver Special (on ABC, Sunday at 8PM), is currently enjoying his biggest success on TV since his top rated shows of the mid-'50s. George is playing the recurring role of Denver's father, sharing honors with guest stars Doris Day and Dick Van Dyke.

Lonesome George is a semi regular star on NBC's Hollywood Squares and a frequent guest on Johnny Carson's Tonight Show. In between, he tours the country with his classic comedy routines, co-starring with Eddy Arnold.

"I've never really left the business," George explains his infrequent dates in the late '60s. "I just kinda leveled off, as I was in pretty good financial shape. But then the stock market took a turn for the worse and that's where I put our nest egg. Spooky old Alice said I'd better tune up that guitar and head for the road. And I've been doing just that."

Gobel, incidentally, is one of John Denver's closest pals. When John was a struggling (meaning unknown) act playing small clubs, Gobel would drop in to see him, enjoy his work and give him welcome encouragement.

"He was like a father to me," quips John. And that's what Lonesome George is on all of Denver's specials.

THOSE JONES BOYS . . . TOGETHER AGAIN

Their individual successes separated by nearly three decades, international night club and recording star Jack Jones has lured his father, Allan Jones, out of semi-retirement for a rare television appearance. Marking the first time father and son have performed together on television, the senior Jones joins son Jack in "Monsanto Night Presents Jack Jones," an hour-long musical airing on KABC, Channel 7, Monday at 10PM.

Jack's mother, actress Irene Hervey, brought him into the world on the very same night motion picture tenor Allan recorded the now immortal "Donkey Serenade." In the Special, Jack and Allan sing a memorable duet of "I Remember It Well," taped on location aboard a yacht at Marina del Rey (California), the world's largest man-made yacht harbor. It was Allan who first launched Jack on his highly successful musical career; first with formal training while Jack was attending West Los Angeles' University High School, and later when Jack joined his father on the night club circuit, making his Las Vegas debut at the Thunderbird Hotel during the summer of 1957.

'JOE LOUIS, BILLY CONN FIGHT AGAIN'

The reason it was called "the greatest heavyweight title fight in history" was probably defined most accurately by the two contenders, champion Joe Louis and challenger Billy Conn, when they met recently to tape The Way It Was in a PBS-TV studio at KCET, Los Angeles.

The two boxers watched filmed highlights of their fight in June, 1941, at New York's old Polo Grounds. Behind after 12 rounds,

LOUIS WINS

Knocks Out Billy Conn in 13th Round

"UNLUCKY THIRTEENTH" round of the 1941 Louis-Conn heavyweight championship is relived for TV viewers and the fighters themselves.

Louis came out slugging in the 13th and with a flurry of uppercuts, climaxed by a tremendous right to Conn's jaw, knocked out his challenger to retain the title.

"Why didn't you let me win, Joe?" a sks Conn. "I wanted to be champ for just six months."

"You were champ for 12 rounds and couldn't keep it," answers Louis. "How were you gonna keep it for six months?"

A recap of that famous fight will be televised on The Way It Was, Thursday at 8PM on KCET, Channel 28. Louis and Conn, joined by sportscaster Curt Gowdy, host for the sports retrospective TV series, and fight announcer Don Dunphy, relive the thrills and action as they describe the thoughts that went through their heads on that fateful night.

'THE GENERAL'

General George C. Marshall, who won the Nobel Peace Prize and was known as "the greatest military genius since Stonewall Jackson," is the subject of "The General."

Gen. George C. Marshall, a man who never led troops in combat, who won the Nobel Peace Prize, and who was known as "the greatest military genius of America since Stonewall Jackson," is the subject of "The General," a special narrated by Ben Gazzara, and airing on CBS, Thursday at 9PM. This is the fourth in The American Parade series of historical specials being presented on the Network over a three-year period in conjunction with the nation's 1976 bicentennial.

From a launching point where George Catlett Marshall is being sworn in as Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army in 1939, the special flashes back and forward to cover, primarily through film footage and still photographs, the life of a man who was known to those who knew how wars are run and won simply as "The General."

The special traces the life of General Marshall from his beginnings in the coke-and-coal community of Uniontown, Pa., and his days as a cadet with the unsoldierly nicknames of "Flicker" and "Pug" at Virginia Military Academy, through the years he earned for himself, in the words of President Harry S. Truman, a place "at the head of the great commanders of history." The broadcast covers Marshall's years as Chief of Staff, as Ambassador to China and as Secretary of State. It focuses also on his post-World War II European Recovery Program (called the Marshall Plan by all but its architect), which won for this five-star general, who called war "the most terrible tragedy of the human race," the Nobel Peace Prize in 1953.

'PRIMATE'

"Primate," the newest in a series of films produced, directed, and edited by Frederick Wiseman will air on KCET, Channel 28, Thursday at 10PM. Filmed at the Yerkes Primate Research Center in Atlanta, the film is the eighth in Wiseman's series of documentaries on American institutions and concerns the day-to-day activities of a laboratory facility studying primate behavior. Scientists in the film are concerned with studying and experimenting with primate physical and mental development. The experimental work shown deals with capacity to learn, remember and apply language and manual skills, the effect of alcohol and drugs on behavior, telestimulation of sexual and aggressive behavior, and the various neural and physiological patterns that determine behavior. Included as well are procedures and activities that are preparatory to actual experimentation: artificial insemination; surgical dissection; and conferences and discussions among scientists, technicians and care-takers.

Primate raises many questions about the value, purpose, and price of research, and leaves the answers to the viewer. As with Wiseman's earlier films, Primate has no narrator or commentator to explain or interpret the events filmed.

JR. SAFARI U.S.A.'

Last summer Paul Winchell and his wise-cracking side-kick, Jerry Mahoney, spent two days at California's Lion Country Safari taping "Jr. Safari U.S.A." which airs Friday 6PM on KHJ (Channel 9).

"It was a unique experience for me," said Winchell who, when he was not working in front of cameras, hung out with members of the zoological staff. "They told me stories that, if written, would make best sellers."

An example cited by Winchell, was a baby chimpanzee being raised by Patricia May, who is in charge of the nursery at the African wildlife preserve in Orange County.

"Seems when the baby chimp was born, the dominant male on the island kept taking it away from the mother. As a result it could not nurse and would have died of hunger if the zoological staff had not taken it away from the older male chimp and brought the young fellow to the nursery."

Now, the baby chimp who was named Higgy, is almost a year old. "In the special be sure to watch closely the segment with Patricia May and Higgy. It's almost like mother and son."

Others appearing in the hour-long special, directed by Kip Walton, include Tommy Johnson and the Kilimanjaro Dancers, Ricky Segall, of Partridge Family fame, who sings "Sooner or Later" aboard a hippo boat in the middle of Lake Shanalee and Davy Jones, of The Monkees, who serenades his horse.

Of course, the cast of thousands includes such exotic animals as elephants, hundreds of lions, zebra, hippos, rhinoceros, giraffes, tigers, monkeys, ostriches, cheetah, wildebeest, scimitar-horned oryx and more than 500 free-flying birds.

'A CENTERFOLD HE ISN'T'

"You were nothing till you posed for Cosmopolitan," sneered a violinist. Always quick with an answer, Burt Reynolds glibly retorted, "Why don't you take off your clothes and pose for a picture—maybe you could play Carnegie Hall!"

"Deliverance" was the movie that established Reynolds as a star, and it was completed B.C. (Before Cosmopolitan)—but the centerfold was released first . . . and there are a lot of people who still believe that he owes it all to the centerfold.

KTTV's "Take Me Home Again" (Saturday, Dec. 7, 9PM) starring Burt Reynolds tells it like it is, in a series of candid interviews with "Mr. Centerfold," his family and friends. The public always remembers "firsts"—like Elvis, The Beatles and Burt Reynolds,—the man who launched a thousand centerfolds. Imitators come and go, but there is only one original. To the public he's Burt Reynolds of centerfold fame. To those close to him he's "Buddy."

Particularly moving moments include: a recounting of Buddy's (Burt's) attempt to adopt a brother and how it dramatically changed the life of a young boy; and his shattered football career which ultimately led him to his unwilling debut as an actor in Palm Beach Junior College.

RHODA IS STILL INSECURE

For millions of viewers who watched Rhoda Morgenstern marry Joe Gerard, it was like seeing a daughter or a niece or even a good friend take her wedding vows. Over the past five television seasons, fans of The Mary Tyler Moore Show and now the Rhoda series, seen Mondays at 9:30PM on CBS, have watched Rhoda turn from a charming, overweight, insecure single girl into a slender, charming and still insecure, married woman.

The question that follows, naturally, is where does Valerie Harper end and Rhoda begin. Make no mistake about it, Rhoda Morgenstern Gerard is a very good characterization by a very talented actress. No, Valerie Harper is not Jewish. No, she's not a newlywed but the wife of Dick Schaal for the past ten years. And, off-screen she doesn't speak with a recognizable New York accent.

Miss Harper also points that "I'm not as funny or as free as Rhoda. She's not afraid to fall on her face. She says the unsayable and I'm a little more uptight." As to comparisons between her television mother, played by Nancy Walker, and her real mother, Miss Harper explains that the only thing they have in common is their height.

"My own mother never lived through her children," she emphasizes. "Mom always encouraged us to do what we wanted and she never pushed me to get married." Rhoda's mother did push her to get married and the man she finally settled down with is played by David Groh, a newcomer to prime time television, but an actor with a solid background on the stage.

Brooklyn born, Groh studied acting at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art on a Fullbright Scholarship. During his college days at Brown University, he appeared in summer theatre productions at the American Shakespeare Festival including "Antony and Cleopatra" with Katherine Hepburn and Robert Ryan. Followers of daytime television will remember Groh for his roles in the serials Edge of Night and Love Is A Many Splendored Thing. Just prior to moving to Hollywood, Groh starred in the New York production of "Hot L Baltimore" which won the 1973 Drama Critics Circle Award as "Best American Play."

Like Groh, Julie Kavner who plays younger sister Brenda launched her acting career in college productions. An honors graduate of California State University at San Diego, Miss Kavner is making her professional acting debut in the Rhoda series. Los Angeles born, Miss Kavner's stage experience has been in college and community theatres including the Cassium Carter Centre Stage and the Old Globe Theatre in San Diego and the Century City Playhouse in Los Angeles.

Surrounded by performers like Groh, Miss Kavner, Nancy Walker and Harold Gould, Miss Harper admits to a sense of security that a star only gets when she knows she's working with the best.

Sears Highway Passenger Tire Guarantee

If you do not receive the number of miles specified because of your tire becoming unserviceable due to (1) defects, (2) normal road hazards, or (3) tread wear-out.

We will: At our option, exchange it for a new tire or give you a refund charging in either case only the proportion of the then current selling price plus Federal Excise tax that represents mileage used. If the tire is unserviceable due to any of the above causes before 10% of the guaranteed mileage is received, the replacement or refund will be made with no charge for mileage received.

Nail punctures will be repaired at no charge. Guarantee applies to tires on vehicles used for private family purposes.

Electric drip coffeemaker at $7 savings.

Recycling is a worthy cause. But not when you make coffee. So enjoy Wards coffeemaker. Boiling water drips through grounds only once to prevent bitter tars from settling in brew. Heat-resistant carafe is less porous than metal pots so oily build-up is minimal. Stainless steel warming tray keeps coffee hot without re-boiling. And entire assembly cleans easily so you get a great cup of coffee every time.

FOR ORSON BEAN

What is the weirdest thing that ever happened to you?—Mrs. W. A. Heacock, Bagdad, Ariz.

● Carolyn and I bought a house once. It was dark and forbidding, but we thought it had possibilities. We renovated it and installed new windows to let the sun in. After a few months, strange things started to happen. The children began sleeping poorly. There was a tension in the house, a sense of something unnatural. Late one night, Carolyn woke me and said she was terrified and wanted me to walk her to the bathroom. I did so and waited outside the door for her. It was very dark in the hall, but at the far end of it I saw something darker: a shrouded figure that seemed to glide toward me, then recede. Carolyn came out of the bathroom and saw my face. "You've seen it, haven't you?" she said. "It's been here for weeks, but I haven't wanted to say anything for fear you'd think I was crazy." We turned on all the lights and started to pack. In the morning we moved out, put the house on the market and never returned to it again.

FOR JOHN WOODEN, basketball coach, U.C.L.A.

What do you think of Moses Malone's decision to join the pros right out of high school?—Tom Bailey, Canton, Ohio

● I've been told that Moses Malone could never handle college work. If that's true, he was wise to do what he did. From a pure basketball standpoint, though, he would have been better off going to college.

FOR MRS. ROSE KENNEDY

How many charitable institutions do you support?—S. B., Columbus, Miss.

● Since 1946, when the Kennedy Foundation (named for Lt. Joseph K. Kennedy, Jr., our eldest son who was killed in World War II) was established, we've founded and supported over 20 major institutions, hospitals and also schools for the care and education of mentally retarded children. The proceeds of my book, "Times to Remember," will go toward the aid of mental retardation.

FOR SYLVIA PORTER

● When the stock market crashed, I was 16. Included in the millions of dollars that vanished into thin air were my mother's savings from her millinery business. The Depression fascinated and terrified me. I wondered how so much money could disappear. I was so curious that the next year I switched from a history major to economics. In 1943 I was hired at $20 a week by an investment counseling firm.

FOR ANGELA LANSBURY, star of "Gypsy"

What's the challenge of being in a revival like "Gypsy"?—S. M., Lowell, Mass.

● I don't think of "Gypsy" as a revival. It's a classic of the theater, just as the works of Shakespeare and Shaw are. Their plays are never called revivals, so "Gypsy" shouldn't be either. As for the "challenge," the great plays of Shakespeare and Shaw sometimes get mediocre reviews. You never know what's going to happen when you get in front of an audience.

FOR JIMMY BRESLIN

We always hear about newspapermen working while they drink, and you keep kidding on TV about your own tippling. Can you drink and then write?—J. F. Donohue, Amherst, N.Y.

● Maybe some writers can mix drink and writing, but I find it hard to believe. I can never write anything I like when I've had a few.

FOR JOHNNY WEISSMULLER

Has swimming prolonged your life?—Frank Darby, Lafayette, La.

● Undoubtedly. I take a dip every day, and if I live to be a hundred, swimming will be the reason why. I recommend it to everyone. The pressure of the water on one's body helps preserve one's heart. I intend to keep swimming until I'm a hundred, and then keep on and on and on.

FOR JAMES COCO

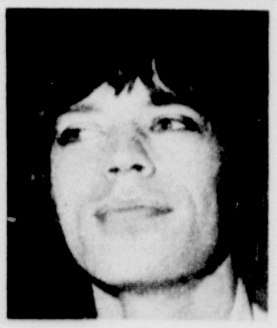
As a long-standing dieter, what was your most frustrating experience in resisting food?—N. S., Elmira, N.Y.

● I had just dieted off enough pounds to throw caution to the winds at my sister Lucy's Thanksgiving dinner. But two days before, I developed a bad gum infection, and had some treatment that made my mouth very sore. One of the "musts" was avoiding solids. I could only eat "mush." So there I was at the marvelous feast, watching everyone dig in. And all I could eat was liquefied stuffing, sipped through a straw.

FOR CONNIE STEVENS

What's your relationship with Eddie Fisher now, and are you soured on marriage?—K. B., Van Nuys, Calif.

● Eddie and I have a marvelous relationship. We're good friends and genuinely fond of each other. When Eddie comes to see the children and me, he's a hero, and that's the way it should be. I'm not soured on marriage, but neither am I ready to settle down again at the moment. I have a lovely home and kids, can come and go as I please, go out with terrific guys, so what am I lacking?



FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Is it true that Mick Jagger had a strange accident when he was young?—S. T., Lowell, Mass.

● When Jagger was 16, he bit off the tip of his tongue while doing some fancy somersaults in his gym class. According to Tony Scaduto (author of the biography "Mick Jagger: Everybody's Lucifer"—about which, incidentally, Jagger is very angry), losing the tip of his tongue changed the quality of Jagger's voice. At first Jagger was distraught, and thought it marked the end of his chances to sing. Then his mood changed to delight. He found he now sang like an American bluesman, which he had always wanted to do—but never could, until the accident.

The Working Woman:

How She Looks to Five Woman Psychiatrists

Compiled by Lucianne Goldberg

As millions more American women join the labor market each year, they are subjected to new emotional stresses because they work. To learn more about these stresses, we asked five prominent woman psychiatrists to discuss them.

Dr. Natalie Shainess: "Whether a married woman who works has problems about it depends on the kind of help she has at home, her attitude toward her job, whether or not her husband is supportive of her working and how she allocates her time. Many professional women with small children say they have a sense of being pulled apart. One of my patients calls it a case of the 'shoulds': Should she be at work, or should she be with her child? This conflict of feeling that she should be in two places at once leads to a sense of guilt. If she also has a husband who is a bit of a male chauvinist —that adds more guilt feelings plus a tinge of anger.

"Younger, more militant women have decided to 'get rid of the whole bag,' as they say. They refuse to feel guilt. I believe they simply bury it. They think you can dump your children anywhere you want—that you don't have to see that your husband has dinner. I find that in many young marriages of this nature there is a tremendous amount of conflict. The partners are really two selfish, childlike adults, each in his own way. They lack a sense of interdependence and responsibility toward each other.

"A husband's attitude and his willingness to take on some of the responsibilities and to share the work load are very benign factors. I think it is impossible to have a 50-50 division of labor. The major portion of child responsibility lies with the mother, but in many cases she could use more help than she gets. During the years of childhood children need a consistent figure, and it is primarily the mother's task to provide this. But it is the father's willingness to relieve here and there and his sympathetic attitude toward his wife that can make a great difference and lessen her guilt feelings enormously."

Dr. Ruth V. Berney: "I think what the woman in the working world is feeling now is not so much guilt as resentment. She feels she has a right to do something in the world—that she is entitled to a bigger part of living than just children and home and husband. The younger women—and this is a generational thing—are angling for a mutuality in the working world.

"Women are now thinking more practically about marriage. They know it's one thing to get married in a cloud of romance, but they are also talking about divorce insurance—something to protect them if something goes wrong after the clouds blow away. They don't feel so cowed anymore. I think men feel threatened by this."

Dr. Alexandra Symonds: "Working mothers have special problems. However I feel that a woman who isn't a mother does, too. A man and wife who are childless are more dependent on each other. Children are often a catalyst in a marriage, and some people can't function without the catalyst of a child. But the childless couple often falls into competition over earning capacity, getting ahead, job importance. Usually, the man expects his wife to do the housework even though they both work the same hours outside the home, and most women defer to their husbands. A really good marriage requires that two people fulfill themselves, and sometimes friction can develop from this. Women who are on an equal professional footing with their husbands must be very careful not to give up something that is very precious: their right to equality within the home. Because of the way our society is structured, there is a great tendency for a woman to slip into a routine of doing things just because she is the female partner. This can cause a great deal of resentment."

Dr. Wanda Willig: A working woman has a definite conflict between her job and her family. The more 'liberated' woman has somewhat less guilt in general. But if the children are quite young, some feeling of guilt is not abnormal—or irrational. It depends very much on the individual woman and her own ability to ignore the guilt.

"As for a single woman, again it depends on her life situation. If a girl still lives with her mother, she might feel she should give more time to her mother than to her work or her social life. A girl who has not overcome her fear of her father might find the working world harder to cope with. It would be difficult for her to, say, supervise male employees and exert her authority over them.

"As for help at home for the working mother, I feel that a warm, loving grandmother or aunt is a much better choice than a poorly run day-care center.

"There is definitely a changing attitude in women today—they are feeling more and more that they have a right to get out into the working world and to 'get with it.' I think, too, that men feel less threatened about their wives going back to work than they did a generation ago. I know men today who still feel very threatened about their wives working, but I think this is true more in the case of older or middle-aged men."

Elizabeth Gee

Dr. Sheila Klebanow: "Child-care problems cause the major emotional problem for the working mother. There is definitely a guilt factor that varies greatly from woman to woman. Many women can handle this—some women make better mothers at least part time. However, I don't routinely recommend that women with small children return to work until the children are older.

"I quarrel with Women's Lib because they have lost track of the fact that children are not robots and because day-care centers are not automatically the proper parent surrogate. Another child-care solution is Margaret Mead's suggestion, the grandmother – and I think it is sad that more mothers and mothers-in-law are not called upon when they could be so valuable.

"If a husband feels threatened or angry when his wife works, this adds to her discomfort, too. A woman's emotional need to work is as valid as an economic need, and a husband should not ignore this need—or he is asking for an unhappy partner."

"I just ignore whatever pain there is and do my job, which is to run into and over as many people as I can."
"About the best description of him I've heard is that Willie Lanier is a wall with a number on it."—Marv Hubbard, Oakland Raiders

The NFL's "Toughest Guys to Run Into" Picked by the Guys Who Run Into Them

Compiled by Larry Bortstein

The essence of football is its violence, its murderous, bone-crushing violence. "On Sunday it's like the bullfights," professional quarterback Joe Kapp once said. A physicist recently calculated the actual force involved in a typical pro football collision. He discovered that when a 240-pound lineman who runs 100 yards in 11 seconds meets a 200-pound back who travels the distance in 10 seconds, the kinetic energy which results is equal to 66,000 inch-pounds—enough, he said, to move 66,000 pounds, or 33 tons, one inch.

But that omits the human element—what if the hardest runner (say Marvin Hubbard, 225 pounds) and the hardest tackler (say Willie Lanier, 245 pounds) collide? Is that truly akin to the irresistible force meeting the immovable object? Family Weekly's research into the minds and aching bones of their peers says it is, and that these two men, Hubbard the runner and Lanier the defenseman, are candidates for the game's mightiest collisions of all. This assessment ignores some of the game's finer points, leaving the qualities of deftness, elusiveness, finesse — and yes, even speed—for consideration at some future date. These are the men who can strike terror into even the apparently invulnerable heart of a professional football player, because—in a game where pain and a certain amount of cruelty are commonplace—they dispense and absorb much more than their fair share.

All of our interviews are with triple-tough NFL stars who recall their most punishing foes and their own most punishing moments.

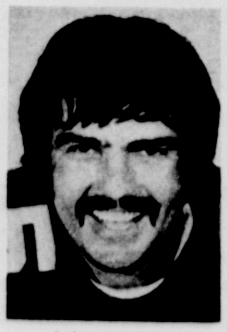
The Offense Talks About The Defense

ROMAN GABRIEL,
Philadelphia Eagles' quarterback

In his 13th season in the NFL—his second with Philadelphia—Gabriel has long been considered one of the toughest of all quarterbacks for a defender to knock off his feet or to score.



"I'm one of the biggest quarterbacks in the league, 6-foot-4, 220 pounds, and I guess I'm stronger than most of the others and can stand up to punishment pretty well. A lot of guys like to take shots at me, but the fact that I'm able to stay up and get the ball off for completions has given me a lot of psychological advantages over the years. Guys feel they can't stop me from getting the ball away, and sometimes they may give up. Don't think that I never get knocked down, because I do. But I try to decide when to fall, rather than let someone else decide.

"You can't worry about who might be coming at you. Joe Greene of Pittsburgh is probably the most frightening defensive tackle in the league in a pass-rush situation. He's so quick, and gets past the offensive line in such a hurry that you swear he must have beaten the snap. But if you're going to be a successful quarterback, you can't be thinking about Greene or anyone else who might be pass-rushing. You have to find your receiver and think only about throwing the ball. You're more liable to get hurt if you move out of the pocket than if you stand in the pocket. At least that's been true in my experience. I used to run with the ball a lot more than I do now, and those were the times I'd really get popped. When I was with the Los Angeles Rams for 11 seasons, we usually had four different plays on which the quarterback might run—a rollout either to the right or to the left, the quarterback sneak, or the option.

"I gave up running for the most part after I got hit in 1968 by Jim Purnell, an outside linebacker of the Chicago Bears. He got me from the blind side, a little above the waist on the left side of my body. I was unconscious for about 30 seconds. Purnell really hit me, but the thing that made his hit that much more difficult to take was the fact that it was from the blind side, and I wasn't able to brace myself for it."

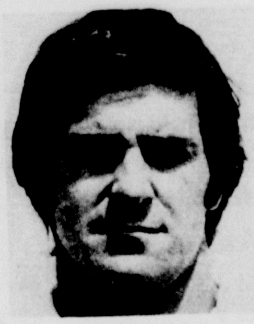
WALT GARRISON,
Dallas Cowboys' running back

Walt Garrison has a dual career in sports. In his ninth season as a Dallas Cowboy, he also is a real cowboy on the national rodeo circuit.



"When you carry the ball and block against big men as I often have to do, you have to get hit. We all accept this as part of the game. I remember really getting popped four or five times during my career, when the impact was so sudden and so total that, laying there on the ground, I wasn't certain if it made sense to get up. The guys who hit me on those occasions were Dick Butkus, who retired as the Chicago Bears' middle linebacker before this season, Bubba Smith, the gigantic defensive end of the Oakland Raiders, Dave Wilcox, the outside linebacker of the San Francisco 49ers, and Nick Buoniconti the middle linebacker of the Miami Dolphins.

"From practicing against them, I know that Lee Roy Jordan, our middle linebacker, and Cliff Harris, our free safety, hit as hard as anybody in the league. Even in practice!

"Still, there's nothing and no one in football that can do to me what happens to me in rodeo. I specialize in steer wrestling, and have to try to beat a steer that weighs between 500 and 750 pounds in three seconds. I can remember getting hit by Dick Butkus and Nick Buoniconti on the football field, but that wasn't as bad as getting hit in the mouth by the horn of a steer. That happened during a rodeo in 1971. I needed 12 stitches to close the wound."

MARV HUBBARD,
Oakland Raiders' fullback

In his sixth NFL season, 230-pound Marv Hubbard is one of the most powerful and punishing straight-ahead runners in the pros.

"I went to Colgate University in upstate New York, which hasn't produced too many pro players, so I had to overcome a lot of anxiety just to get started in the NFL. I weighed only 212 pounds when I started with the Raiders as an 11th-round draft pick. I had good strength, so I was able to become a good fullback by adding some weight. There's an old expression to describe the way I run—barreling into guys with my head down. The expression is 'no brain, no pain,' meaning that if you haven't got enough sense not to run that way, you can't possibly feel pain. It isn't quite true, of course. But I just ignore whatever pain there is and do my job, which is to run into and over as many people as I can. You have to be mentally tough to survive.

"The hardest hitters as far as I'm concerned are the linebackers. The position demands it, I guess. They have to get to the ballcarrier or the receiver and stop him as quickly and as convincingly as they can. There are some really outstanding linebackers I've come up against. Henry Davis of Pittsburgh is really great. Tom Graham of Kansas City and Isiah Robertson of Los Angeles are great, and so are Bill Bergey of Philadelphia and Mike Curtis of Baltimore. But the meanest of them has to be Willie Lanier of Kansas City. Lanier against power football is what

Because it just makes sense that the company that can satisfy the demands of the professional logger can make a saw to meet the needs of the average homeowner.

And a perfect example of that is the new Homelite XL which sells for under $100.

The XL has a tough, lightweight engine which allows you to feel like a lumberjack without requiring that you be built like one. It also features an all-weather ignition system which makes for fast starts. And automatic chain oiling. For $99.95, the new XL is really a great chain saw.

But then again, so is the Homelite XL 2, which sells for $119.95. The big thing about the XL 2 is that it has two triggers.

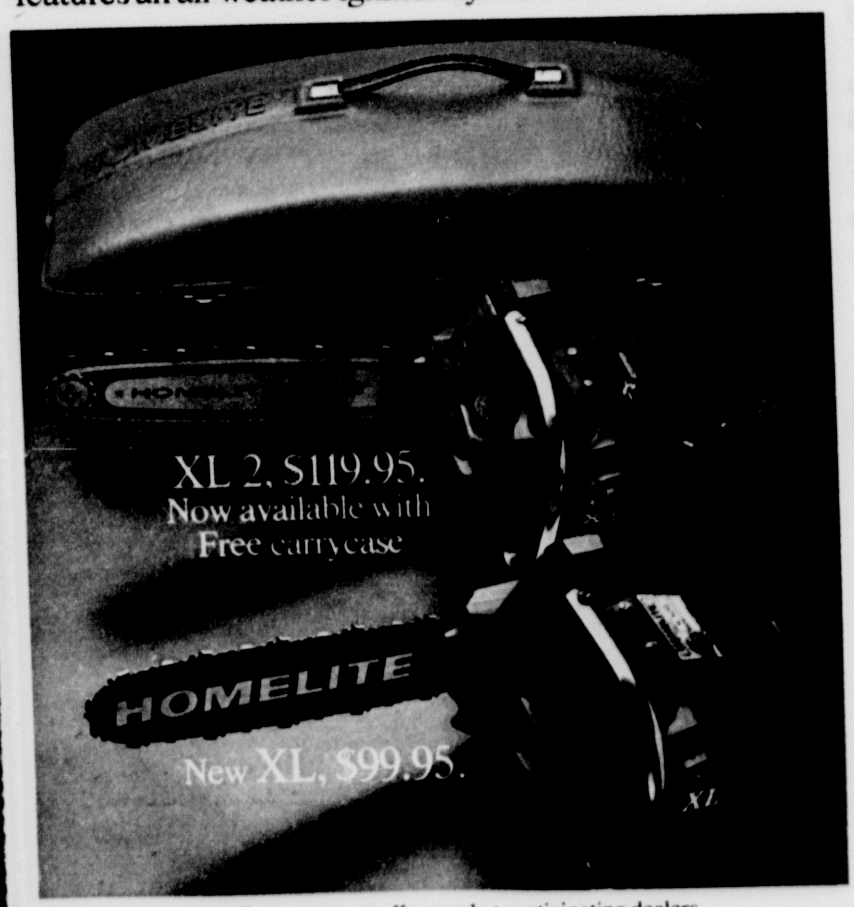
And a second trigger in the rear to give you leverage for the big jobs.

The XL 2 also tips the scales at a light 7¼ pounds.* It comes with a 12" guide bar. And the same Power Tip® sprocket nose that professional loggers use to boost their cutting power.

And right now, to really make a case for buying the XL 2, we throw in a case, free. This carrycase regularly sells for $10.95 and can accommodate the chain saw plus all its accessories.

Of course, another benefit in buying a Homelite chain saw is that we have more dealers to serve you if something should go wrong. More than 7,500 of them in the U.S.

Homelite's XL and XL 2. Considering everything they come with, it's hard to believe what they go for.



HOMELITE®

For the Homelite dealer nearest you, check the Yellow Pages under Saws. Homelite, a textron Division, Port Chester, N.Y. 10573.

*Less bar and chain. Free carrycase offer good at participating dealers only while supply lasts. Expires December 31, 1974. Suggested Retail Prices: XL, $99.95; XL 2, $119.95.

Anything from a new 1975 car to a hundred-million-year-old footprint of a dinosaur. Or a sailboat. A home sauna. A tree house. Or one of 9 trips. Or a zooful of animal crackers. A tubful of hotel towels. A wiggle of live worms and a rowboat to take them fishing. And there are 83 more possibilities.

In any case, any winner may change his mind and ask for 100 ft. of dollar bills ($200) instead.

Each of our 100 winners will receive a letter explaining exactly what the prize includes, what choice there is (if any) of style or color or flavor, and what options there are on deliveries of perishable goods.

Please read the rules carefully and especially note that each sweepstakes must be entered individually, with each entry mailed separately in its own envelope, and the sweepstakes number in the lower left corner.

OFFICIAL RULES—NO PURCHASE REQUIRED

1. Write the number of the sweepstakes you wish to enter in the space provided on the official entry blank, or on a plain piece of 3" x 5" paper.
2. Hand-print your name, address and zip code on your entry, include with it the front panels from two packs of Benson & Hedges 100's, Regular or Menthol, or the words "Benson & Hedges 100's" hand-printed on a plain piece of paper.
3. Enter as often as you wish, but you may enter only one sweepstakes per entry, and each entry must be mailed separately, to: Benson & Hedges 100's, at the P.O. Box number on the coupon below, Westbury, New York 11591. Entries must be postmarked by February 1, 1975 and received by February 10, 1975.
4. IMPORTANT: You must write the numbers of the sweepstakes you are entering on the outside of the envelope, in the lower left-hand corner.
5. Winners will be selected in random drawings from entries for sweepstakes, by National Judging Institute, Inc., an independent judging organization, whose decisions are final. Odds of winning will be determined by the number of entries received for each sweepstakes. Winners will be asked to execute an affidavit of release and eligibility. All prizes will be awarded. Only one prize to a family. Liability for taxes is the sole responsibility of the individual winners. In lieu of any prize, winner may elect to receive a cash award of $200.
6. Contest open to all U.S. residents over 21 years of age, except employees and their families of Philip Morris, Inc., its advertising agencies and National Judging Institute, Inc. This offer is subject to all federal, state and local laws. Void in Idaho, Missouri, Georgia, and wherever prohibited, restricted or taxed.
7. For a list of winners, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to BENSON & HEDGES WINNERS LIST, P.O. Box 2476, Westbury, New York 11591.

"Marble Players" $63.00

"Back to School" $21.00

These exquisite figurines from Norman Rockwell's famous Saturday Evening Post Covers are becoming more collectible than the Hummel figurines as more and more American Collectors are including them among their valuables.

Each figurine ranges in size from approximately 5½ to 8 inches high and to fully appreciate their superb quality and beauty you have to hold one in your hands. Each is hand-painted, on excellent quality porcelain with a lovely Bisque finish. The colors are wonderfully soft and lovely, exquisitely completing great works of art that fully capture the famous Rockwell charm and whimsy.

WONDERFUL GIFTS AND GREAT INVESTMENT POTENTIAL

Most of us grew up with an issue of the Saturday Evening Post around the house and even though we didn't personally know Norman Rockwell—we felt he was our friend. He is so loved that one private Mint issued a collector plate with one of his drawings on it and it quadrupled in price. Another well known china company sold a Limited Edition Plate that not only sold out immediately—but now sells for six times the original price. We've heard that one famous Mint has just offered his renowned "Four Freedoms" in silver ingots and has been flooded with orders.

So whether you are a collector for investment, a memorabilia addict, a figurine collector, a Rockwell Lover or if you're just looking for a beautiful gift that will be appreciated for a lifetime—send your order in today—and your heirloom of tomorrow will be on its way to you!

AS A SUPER SPECIAL BONUS if you order any figurine within 2 weeks we'll also send you absolutely free a large 200 page Norman Rockwell book containing almost 500 of his most famous illustrations including the "Streakers" and his world renowned "Four Freedoms" in living color. The hard cover version of this same book originally sold for $17.50 each.

ABSOLUTELY FREE! As an incentive for you to try Joy's Limited Editions you'll receive with any order a Free years' subscription to the famous Joy's Newsletter showing all the best quality Limited Edition Collectibles in full color. Today is the day to join thousands of other collectors in this fast growing hobby.

se is all about. He really can hit. About est description of him I've heard is that e is a wall with a number on it."

UL WARFIELD,
mi Dolphins' flanker

l Warfield is in his fifth season with the phins, and his 11th in the NFL. His zing speed and bewildering variety of moves have made him one of the all-time great pass receivers.

"To be a successful pass receiver, you have to learn to catch and hold on to the ball even when you know you're going to get ailed the moment you catch it. We call the ound of the defender coming up to make the ackle, 'hearing footsteps.' Often a receiver ill be trying so hard to catch the ball and race himself for the hit that he gets all jum-led up and blows the play completely. Either e misses the ball or catches it for an instant ut fumbles it away to the other team.

"Jack Tatum of the Oakland Raiders is the one free safety in the league who really lets you have his best shot almost every time. He tackles hard and fast and doesn't make the mistake of going for the ball instead of the receiver. Last year we played Oakland in one of the first games of the season and the Raiders beat us to stop our winning streak of 18 games. Tatum played a great game. I ran the middle on pass routes against him early in the game and twice he nailed me good. I don't think anyone ever got to me as hard as he did. I didn't catch a ball that entire game."

The Defense Talks About The Offense

MIKE CURTIS,
Baltimore Colts' middle linebacker

Mike Curtis marks his 10th season with the Baltimore Colts in 1974. Originally an outside linebacker, Curtis moved into the middle in 1970 and has been there ever since.

"I play football because it's the only place where you can hit people and get away with it. Seriously, I love the contact involved in the game. People call me 'Mad Dog' or 'Animal' because they say I go berserk on the field. I don't think that's exactly true. I've never tried to hurt anybody. I don't aim for the guy's legs or anything like that with the intention of crippling him. I just love hitting people on the field. I don't want to hurt anybody because I want a guy to stay on the field so I can hit him some more.

"I feel I have my territory on the field to protect. If a runner or receiver comes my way, he's coming into my territory, and I'm going to make him pay for trespassing on my turf. One of the guys I really used to enjoy playing against was Leroy Kelly, when he was with the Cleveland Browns. He's out of the league now, but he was one of the greatest runners in the history of the NFL. I used to consider it a real challenge to try and stop him, and I saved some of my best shots for him. But, hell, you had to hit him hard to stop him. What was I supposed to do, give him a love pat?

"One guy I respect most as an athlete is Joe Namath. He's the greatest passer in the game today. His bad knees never made any difference to me as far as how hard I hit him—only in where I hit him. I try to avoid his knees. I usually try to grab him around the shoulders. But if he tried to run, I would have to dive for his legs, bad knees or no bad knees. If he's out there playing, it means he's ready to take the punishment, and no defender should be expected to go easy on him."

WILLIE LANIER,
Kansas City Chiefs' middle linebacker

Willie Lanier has been striking fear into the hearts of enemy ballcarriers for eight seasons. His NFL opponents attest to his status at the very pinnacle.

"I know I hit people hard, but it's probably not as hard as I could hit if the only object was hitting hard. I play an aggressive game, but you have to know when to limit your aggressiveness. Playing a position like middle linebacker requires a certain amount of toughness and aggressiveness. You have to be a little schizoid to play it well because you have to become a little wild and crazy. But not too much.

"I always played a physical game. I'm intense on the field. Sometimes after a game I can't even remember what I said and did during the game. But the main thing I worry about is being overly aggressive. There's a fine line there. Being too aggressive can hurt you and your team as far as penalties are concerned, and also the offense can get past you if you're charging too quickly in this direction or that direction. If you react too quickly, you can get yourself badly out of position.

"The toughest backs I have to cover are the quick ones—O. J. Simpson and the others. They don't come directly at you. They look to get outside and try to stay away from getting hit as long as they can. No one likes to get punished, but even these types of backs have "You have to be a little schizoid . . . because you have to become a little wild and crazy. But not too much."

—Willie Lanier

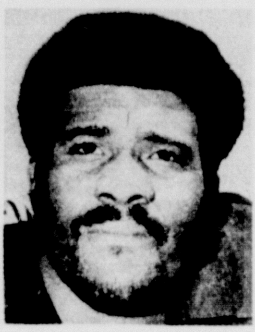
to run inside the guards every so often to establish their team's running game.

"With the big backs, it's different. They don't give you as many moves. It's a power versus power thing. When a guy like a Larry Csonka or a Marv Hubbard comes at me, he's trying to hit me as well as gain yardage. Actually, I prefer it when a guy comes at me. It's much easier to stop him that way. I think I have the ability to tackle as well as anybody in the NFL. If a guy wants to come toward me and get tackled, that's fine with me.

"Hubbard is a very hard runner. He's a nice-looking guy, real innocent face and all. But nobody comes at you harder than he does. He's an old-fashioned fullback. There's nothing fancy about him. You know he'll be coming right into you with his helmet and you have to brace yourself to stop his charge—and that's after you've handled the guys who come out in front to block for him. It's a tough job."

JOE GREENE,
Pittsburgh Steelers' tackle

Mammoth (6-foot-4, 270-pound) "Mean Joe" Greene, in his sixth season with the Pittsburgh Steelers, is regarded as one of the most devastating defensive linemen in the NFL.



"I don't like when people say I'm mean. Off the field I'm a pretty nice guy, a gentleman really. But when people try to make me sound like I'm sort of a villain, I resent it. I've always been big and strong, ever since I was a kid. My strength and my quickness are my primary assets. But that doesn't mean I go around beating up on people.

"During a game I play with everything I've got. To me there's no such thing as hitting too hard. You can't let up your pursuit of a guy because he never lets up on you. The guy

"To me, that quarterback is a mountain. My theory is that if you kill the head, the body will die. When I can get that quarterback and throw him for a loss, I'm on top of the mountain."
—Joe Greene

coming in my direction knows he's going to get my best shot. But I'm not out to slaughter anybody. I just want to get my hands on a quarterback or a running back. But you'll never see me hurt anyone on purpose. I have never been a 'take-no-prisoners' type of guy and I never will be.

"The opponent I'm mostly interested in is the quarterback. He's the brains of the team. To me, that quarterback is a mountain. My theory is that if you kill the head, the body will die. When I can get that quarterback and throw him for a loss, I'm on top of the mountain. I become king of the mountain. By stopping that quarterback I take care of our team, make it easier for them to do what they have to do.

"My biggest problem the past couple of years is trying to play too many guys at a time. When a team double-teams me, as they always do, I've got to concentrate on handling both of them. When I do handle them both, people accuse me of being extra mean. What am I supposed to do—let them through? I'd rather be called something other than 'Mean.' Maybe if I lost 20 pounds and played at 250, I'd be called 'Lean Joe Greene.'"

Smart Cooking To Beat the Clock

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen comes to the aid of the Christmas shopper cook with a colorful casserole. Marilyn says, "This Easy Paella is spiced in the best Spanish style with saffron, oregano and black pepper."

A Quick Spanish Seafood Casserole

Rupert Callender

A departure from the humdrum, Easy Paella is fast, fun and delicious.

EASY PAELLA

1 can (1 pt. 8 ozs.) steamed clams in shell or 1 can (8 or 10½ ozs.) minced clams
2 cups instant rice
2 envelopes instant chicken broth
1 teaspoon whole saffron, crumbled or 1 teaspoon ground turmeric
3 tablespoons instant minced onion
1 teaspoon instant minced garlic
3 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 can (8¼ ozs.) tomatoes, broken up
1 pkg. (1 lb.) frozen shrimp or fish fillets, chunked
1 cup diced cooked ham or cooked sausage
1 can (5 ozs.) boned chicken, chunked or 1 cup leftover cubed chicken or turkey
1 package (10 ozs.) frozen green peas, thawed
¼ cup parsley flakes
2 teaspoons oregano leaves, crumbled
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

1. Drain clams, reserve ½ cup of the clam broth. Set aside clams and broth separately.
2. Prepare instant rice as package directs, using reserved clam broth as part of the liquid, seasoning with instant chicken broth and saffron; set aside.
3. Rehydrate minced onion and garlic in water for 10 minutes.
4. In large, heavy skillet or Dutch oven heat oil, add rehydrated onion and garlic, sauté for 3 minutes. Stir in tomatoes, shrimp, ham, chicken and peas, mix well. Bring to the boiling point; reduce heat. Cover and simmer until shrimp and peas are cooked, about 5 minutes.
5. Stir in reserved clams and rice; heat only until hot. Makes 6 servings

Preparation time: 35 minutes

300 YEAR OLD NEWSPAPERS

Colonial American Galleries is offering a rare, one-time opportunity to own a treasured original newspaper from the past. These ancient newspapers, dated from 1665 to 1869, are NOT copies or reproductions. These ARE the ORIGINALS — themselves!

These original newspapers, the VERY PAPERS held and read on the streets of cities like Boston, London and Edinburg, were saved from destruction by early libraries which gathered the newspapers a few each day and placed them in library binders.

This Christmas Give Your Family a Unique Gift With Lasting Value.

As library policies changed, newspapers which had been preserved for several centuries became available to private owners who continued to preserve them.

Buyers for Colonial American Galleries scoured England, Europe, and America to acquire these magnificent private collections. Now we make them available to you!

In these exciting pages you will read and relive the news of historic days — news of sailing ships and treason trials, of birth and death, of politics, discovery, invention, and war. The history of nations is written here... not by the century, but by the day.

No two of these newspapers are the same... there are hundreds of dates and many different newspaper titles. These contain accounts of local history not found in the history books, news of local interest, poems, anecdotes and advertisements recorded once on these pages then forgotten forever.

The offer is limited. Act now on this priceless opportunity. Your order can be filled for only as long as the limited quantities of these original newspapers last.

I 1826 through 1869 Splendid for framing. These original newspapers are British and American with multiple pages. England in these times becomes history's greatest empire. America discovers its west. English slavery ends as American slavery divides the nation. Interesting and educational, these historic original newspapers are sure to become family heirlooms for generations to come.

Per Paper $13.95

II 1800 through 1825 Exquisite gifts. These original four-page British and American newspapers cover the Napoleonic wars, the reorganization of Europe, the Louisiana Purchase, exploration and settlement, of traders, frontiersmen, flatboats, and early democracy. Fierce debates in Congress and Parliament are reported in these pages. A period of dramatic historic development.

Per Paper $29.95

III 1700 through 1799 Priceless heirlooms. These original British and American newspapers, tabloid in format, are four pages in length, and bear fascinating news and advertisements about shipping, the colonies, and indentured servants. Many bear the hated tax stamp and are printed on rag paper. The King, Parliament, Europe and the America Revolution are constant issues. Exciting content without exception.

Per Paper $49.95

IV 1665 through 1699 Extremely limited. These rare and original one-page British newspapers date from the dawn of newspapers. Before 1665 in England, the news was carried by town crier, manuscript newsletters and broadsides. Small in format, these ancient newspapers deal with Catholicism and the religious struggle, foreign wars, trade and Parliament. Limited and rare.

Per Paper $125.00

UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE OF AUTHENTICITY

Every newspaper bears an unconditional lifetime guarantee of age and authenticity. Every purchaser is listed in the Register of Antiquity maintained by Colonial American Galleries, as the Registered Owner of the newspaper purchased. Every newspaper comes with a signed certificate of Registry, Age, and Authenticity.

You must be completely satisfied with your purchase or return it within 10 days for a full refund.

Because these newspapers are one-of-a-kind, shipping procedures do not permit specific requests for particular editions or dates of any newspaper. PLEASE — Limit 3 Newspapers per order.

STEVE SOUTHERLAND
A friend for Teddy

When Teddy Kennedy had his leg amputated last year, FAMILY WEEKLY told of the letters he had received—some of them from other children who had undergone similar operations. One such letter was from young Steve Southerland of Miami, Fla., who, like Teddy, has had a leg removed. But it did not end with just one letter. The two boys began corresponding. Teddy has asked Steve to join him in Palm Beach for Christmas vacation. Steve, who is writing an autobiography on what it feels like to be 13 and so stricken, has started a "consciousness raising group" for kids in his and Teddy's predicament, and he has asked Teddy to be a member of his club. The two boys hope to get together next year at the American-Soviet Apollo-Soyuz space link-up, where both have been invited to attend as V.I.P.s. "In a way, I'm lucky," says Steve. "If I hadn't been sick, I wouldn't have met so many famous people and gotten all these letters. I only hope I'll be alive next year to see the Apollo take off."

QUOTE: "For some men of all generations, women who are independent and bright as well as attractive are simply the highest form of sport, their conquest the true test of manhood. These men are usually aggressive and successful in their professions. What they are looking for most is the reassurance of conquest, and the more worthy the opponent the better. Making it with a meek doe or a dumb Venus just doesn't have the spice of battle for them—they are titillated by a 'show' of resistance or independent intelligence and judgment." UNQUOTE. From "The Male Machine," by Marc Feigen Fasteau, (McGraw Hill, $7.95).

ETHEL MERMAN
Rx for ailing actors

How do you cure an actor who's sick? Here's Ethel Merman talking: "When I was on the road with a revival of 'Annie Get Your Gun,' my leading man and I had just come to the part where he was supposed to start singing "Falling in Love is Wonderful." Only he whispered, "I don't feel too well...," and walked off stage. So I told the audience that my leading man didn't feel too well, and I walked off too. I followed him to his dressing room where he was sick for about 15 minutes—until the stage manager told him his understudy would have to take over. Then he made a remarkable recovery and we continued the show."

ANNIVERSARIES: The first human heart transplant was performed seven years ago Tuesday. Gerald R. Ford Jr. was sworn in as Vice President of the United States one year ago Friday.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

ON CONSUMERISM

I view through dark, distorted prism
This thing we call consumerism.
I like concern about my food,
But while I eat it hate to brood
And worry lest I'll soon be dead
Of poison in my daily bread.
My shaving lotions and emulsions
Smell nice but may bring on convulsions.
And so it goes with food and drink
And things around my bathroom sink.
I wonder, with so much so wrong,
How poor old Grandad lived so long.

The harried mother took a sip of bourbon to settle her nerves, then proceeded to tuck her son in bed. When she kissed him goodnight, he said: "Mommy, you're wearing Daddy's perfume." —Lucille S. Harper

Women's Lib has caught on. Mothers are now encouraging their sons to marry doctors. —Conrad Fiorello

During the Saturday-night rush at a popular inn, one of the parking attendants was summoned to help check hats and coats in the jammed cloak room. In his first half hour he dented ten overcoats. —Gene Yasenak

My wife should run for the legislature—she's so good at introducing bills into the house. —Herm Albright

Some of today's best sellers you just can't put down—especially if there are children around. —Anna Herbert

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES
Kids see life differently. Send contributions to "Child," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10022. $10 if used—none returned.

Matthew, age six, said to his father, "Lean over, Daddy, I want to whisper something in your ear." Daddy leaned down and Matthew whispered, "I don't believe in Santa Claus." "Why are you whispering?" asked his father. Matthew replied, "Because I don't want him to hear me!" —Mrs. Richard C. Hooper
Nabnasset, Mass.

Then there was the Texas rancher who sued his wife for divorce. He found his dear and an interloper playing. —Dorothea Kent

"Hey Pop—when the tooth fairy comes, can we be partners?"

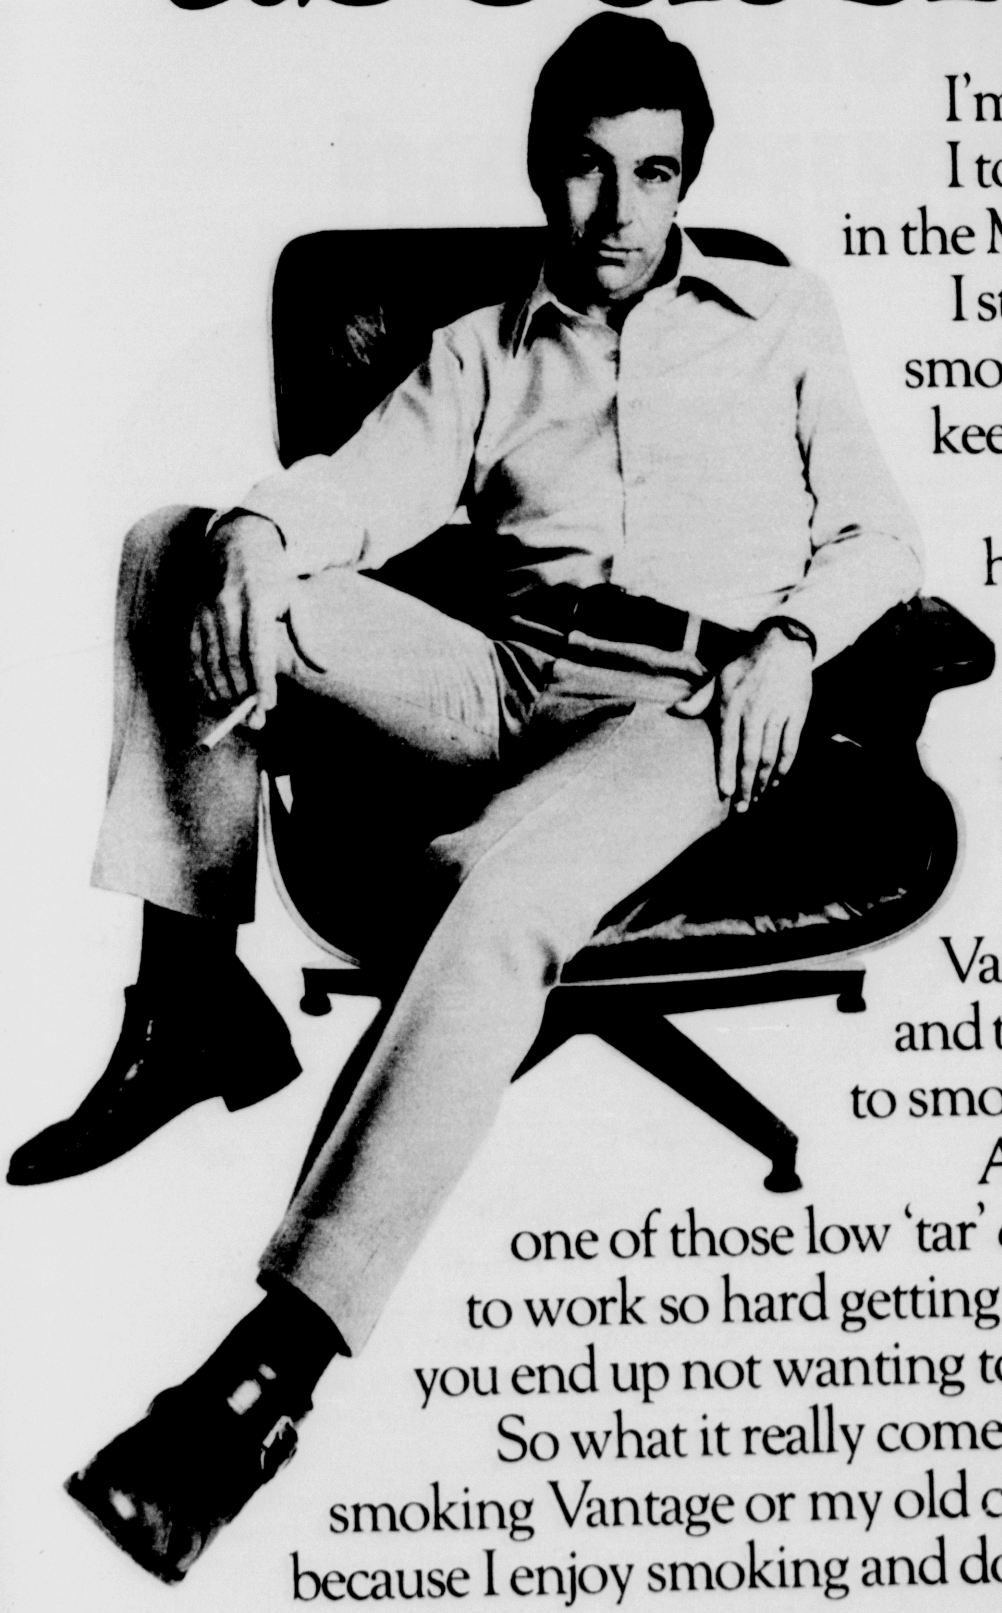
What I'm doing about smoking.



I'm smoking Vantage.

I took up smoking more than 15 years ago in the Marine Corps.

I started smoking then because I wanted to. I smoke now because I want to. And I intend to keep on smoking as long as I want to.

But that doesn't make me bury my head in the sand and ignore the stuff in the papers about smoking.

My attitude is, OK, if high 'tar' and nicotine cigarettes are a concern to me, I'd better do something about it.

So I did. I started to smoke Vantage.

Vantage gives me the flavor of my old brand, and that takes some doing, because what I used to smoke was way up there in 'tar' and nicotine.

And Vantage is not one of those low 'tar' cigarettes you have to work so hard getting some taste out of, you end up not wanting to smoke it.

So what it really comes down to for me is smoking Vantage or my old cigarettes, because I enjoy smoking and don't want to give it up.

James Shannon

Famous Scandinavian Design Scissors

- Cushion plastic handles with contour finger grip gives you more comfort and cutting freedom than you've ever experienced before.
- Stainless steel blades
- Cut paper in . . . patterns . . . fabrics with incredible ease.

Some time ago those inventive Scandinavians introduced an entirely new concept in scissors. It was a scissors with a special cushioned handle anatomically designed to fit your hand. The comfort was incredible. You could cut through the most intricate curve, cut all kinds of materials, cut free hand into all kinds of designs or slip the scissors along the table for an even straight line cut. People who were used to the old fashioned kind of scissors couldn't imagine a pair of scissors working so efficiently and so effortlessly as this new design. Seamstresses and anyone who needed them knew they had discovered a secret. But originally these scissors cost much, much more. In fact, even today you can find this design selling for $8.00 or more in fine stores. But now we've created this same design at a fantastically low price. "Shear Joy"! It's got the familiar orange, cushion soft, plastic handle, the stainless steel blades, weighs only 3 ounces, and they're 8¼" long. If you thought there was nothing glamorous about a pair of scissors then wait until you've tried these. At this new low price you can't afford to be without them. Order now. If they are not shear joy, simply return for full money back.
